REDS RENEW NORTHERN OFFENSIVE

U.S. Prepares For Crisis In Indochina

Fears Attack By Red-Backed Ho Chi Minh

Assault Expected About October 1

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3. (AP)—The United States was reported today to be speeding its arms aid to Indochina in the expectation of a new crisis within a few weeks in that sector of the Asiatic front.

Reports from American and French sources forecast, officials said, that Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh is getting ready to launch a long-prepared offensive against the French and Allied Vietnam forces by October 1 or soon thereafter.

By that date weather conditions, which currently are balking any Chinese communist invasion of Formosa, are expected to become favorable for a renewal of large-scale fighting in Indochina.

Ho, according to State Department and Pentagon advices, is being heavily reinforced by his Chinese backers for what his Viet Minh radio has proclaimed as a decisive "conquer offensive" against the "imperialists."

To help meet the threat, the U. S. already has poured a substantial stream of arms and military supplies into the country which many consider the key to all Southeast Asia. Further shipments are en route. Still to go, it is reported, are numerous Naval landing craft which are being reconditioned at Mare Island, Cal., and in the Puget Sound area, with crews in training to sail them across the Pacific.

Arms reported already delivered include weapons and equipment for a dozen newly formed Vietnam combat battalions, and ammunition and supplies for the French Metropolitan forces which have been fighting Ho's guerrillas four years. Included also are transport planes which the French rate highly useful for shifting troops and supplies in the Tonkin area, facing the China frontier, and along the long Indochina coastline.

Ho is credited with an effective fighting force of around 150,000 men. That is about the size of the combined French and Vietnam forces. American authorities—with a stress on one big "if"—say they believe the odds favor checkmating Ho.

The uncertainty is the same as that which beclouds U. N. prospects in Korea. This is whether communist China joins in with a full-dress invasion by its veteran armies.

Holiday's Death Toll Reaches 198

Rate Is Behind Council Figures

[By The Associated Press]

Accidents killed at least 198 persons in the Labor Day weekend by early Sunday night — more than half way through the three-day holiday period.

But the rate was running slightly behind the National Safety Council's prediction.

Traffic accidents claimed 156 lives; 14 persons drowned and 28 died in miscellaneous mishaps.

The Safety Council forecast a traffic death toll of 435 for the holiday period from 6 p.m. (Local Time) Friday to Monday midnight. The prediction was based on expected movement of 36,000,000 cars throughout the nation during the weekend.

Four persons were killed and four injured near Hopkinsville, Ky., when two automobiles collided head-on at the top of a hill. Three of the dead and all four of the injured were members of one family.

Nine died Saturday in a suburban electric train crash near Milwaukee.

Four auto fatalities resulted from two separate crashes in which law enforcement officials were pursuing cars. At Phenix City, Ala., a fleeing robber killed himself and the driver of another car in a collision. And in California, two persons were killed when their car was hit by another in which two youths were fleeing a deputy sheriff at 80 miles an hour.

The deaths by states, with motor vehicle traffic listed first, drownings second, and miscellaneous third:

U. S. Labor Can Meet Defense Need, Tobin Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Secretary of Labor Tobin said today the nation has untapped sources of manpower and the ingenuity to meet any labor demands for defense.

Tobin, in an interview on the Columbia Broadcasting System, said there are many factors which would offset the comparatively small number of unemployed.

Last week, the Census Bureau reported a record 62,000,000 persons in the work force, and fewer than 3,000,000 unemployed.

There were 8,000,000 unemployed in 1940, Tobin said, when President Roosevelt was stepping up the defense program in World War II.

But Tobin said:

The work force now is not only larger but "much better-trained, a great deal more capable and skillful." The nation has more and better factories and equipment to produce military goods than in 1940.

The total labor force could be raised far above the World War II peak because the population has increased by 20,000,000 in the past decade.

There are "many untapped sources left for us to reach." Older workers will return to jobs "impelled by patriotic motives." Several million women war workers likewise "will be glad to return if they feel their country needs them."

The average work week now is slightly over 40 hours, but "American workers will be willing to work much longer hours in order to bring about the production which is necessary to have our country adequately and properly defended."

Tobin cautioned against drafting skilled workers unless the armed forces are prepared to use their skills. There are 48 critical skills in short supply now, he said, and "we should make absolutely sure that people in those critical skills x x x are used in their skills whether they be professional or whether they be craftsmen."

Tobin expressed confidence that American ingenuity will solve any kind of manpower problem "that our country might meet in the years that lie ahead."

Commies Cooled Off

Communists demonstrating before City Hall in West Berlin scatter under a water barrage from a high pressure water hose on police truck after they turned the water on to disperse angry, shouting demonstrators — Germans who live in West Berlin but work in East Berlin — who were protesting a recent western order which banned their exchanging east mark earnings for west marks.

Johnson Blamed For Resignation Of Forrestal

Accused Of Spreading Gossip, Criticism

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rep. Tauriello (D-NY) said today he hears that Secretary of Defense Johnson spread gossip and criticism about the late James Forrestal and forced him to resign as the first Defense Secretary.

Renewing his demand that Johnson quit, the Buffalo congressman made public a letter to the Cabinet officer which said:

"I am informed by reliable officials and newspaper correspondents that you contributed in no small way to the persecution of Mr. Forrestal.

"I understand you gathered and relayed gossip and information critical of Mr. Forrestal, and, in effect, forced his resignation."

(Forrestal, ill and under extreme nervous condition, resigned early last year and a few weeks later committed suicide.)

The congressman's letter was dated Friday. There was no immediate comment from Johnson.

Tauriello also implied that only patriotism kept General Omar Bradley from quitting as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff over Johnson's "attempts to dominate and dictate" to the chiefs. He wrote that such conduct was "common knowledge among high military officials" and has resulted in friction and confusion.

The congressman charged Johnson with "intrigue against the State Department" causing confusion at home and abroad. He accused the secretary of failing to co-operate with the National Security Resources Board, leading to conflicts over stockpiling war critical materials.

54 Girls Seek Coveted Title 'Miss America'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 3 (AP) — Fifty-four gorgeous girls begin a cloistered week today, each with her eye on the nation's most coveted beauty title — Miss America.

For the winner there is a $5,000 scholarship, a new automobile, several modelling and acting contracts, and an opportunity to earn something like $50,000 in the next year.

The girls range in age from 18 to 24 and come in all sizes. Brunettes dominate this year's crop.

Mundt, Kilgore Differ On Reds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Charges of "police state" tactics were hurled today between Senator Mundt (R-SD) and Senator Kilgore (D-WVa) over their sharply differing plans for dealing with homefront communists.

Mundt is one of the architects of a section of a sweeping omnibus anti-subversives bill which would require registration of communist political and front organizations. Kilgore says interning reds in time of national emergency would work better.

The omnibus measure, on which the Senate will start debate Tuesday, was put together by Chairman McCarran (D-Nev) of the Senate Judiciary Committee from five separate Senate and House bills. It goes far a field from proposals advanced by President Truman for internal security.

Kilgore wants to rip out the registration section. He and other senators are trying to work out a plan to replace it with authority to throw known communists into internment camps when the President and Congress declare a national emergency.

U. S. Officer Escapes From North Koreans

West Pointer Held Prisoner Two Days

By STAN SWINTON

ON THE MASAN FRONT, Korea, Sept. 3 (AP) — A 23-year-old West Pointer escaped today after two days in the hands of North Koreans. He said that the reds, contrary to their propaganda claims, treat American negro prisoners "with contempt."

Second Lt. Billy J. Rountree, Victoria, Tex., a white officer who commanded a negro infantry platoon said that while the red Koreans treated him as an equal, "they would not even let the colored boys talk to each other. When they started to the reds would make them shut up. They were not brutal toward them—they just treated them with contempt."

Rountree returned after a fabulous adventure. Twice the North Koreans made him and several negro prisoners accompany them on attacks. Once an American bullet grazed his chin.

His is one of the most intimate accounts yet of how the North Koreans fight.

"They were confident of victory and said they held all American soldiers in contempt," said Rountree.

"They had no non-commissioned officers in the group that held us most of the time. They would hold a roundtable discussion whenever a big decision had to be made. But when it came time to attack they made up in boldness what they lacked in organization."

Rountree and some of his men were captured when a platoon on his flank retreated. A band of 150 North Koreans grabbed him. They passed him on to a patrol of eight men, three of them wounded.

"One told me, 'I consider you a friend, not a prisoner.' From what I hear such things rarely happen but the reds did not mistreat us. One took my boots and gave me a pair of ballet slippers he was wearing. They did not fit so another gave me some shoes that did.

"They lived off the food in the fields—corn, pears and squash. They shared their food with us. They were cut off but they did not threaten to kill us.

"The communists seemed not to know about the United Nations. They had only heard about the Americans. They kept asking why we were in Korea—they did not know about the background of this war," said the young 25th Division officer.

Two Jet Pilots Die In Crash

MARIETTA, Ga., Sept. 3 (AP)—Two jet pilots were killed today when their National Guard planes collided at terrific speed.

The planes—F-84 Thunderjets — were part of a four-plane formation on a training flight from Dobbins Air Force Base. Maj. Walter M. Armistead, operations officer, said they crashed 25,000 feet up at more than 500 miles an hour.

Labor Renews Fight Against Communism, Taft-Hartley

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Leaders of labor today dedicated the mid-century Labor Day to two common aims: (1) To beat off Communist aggression anywhere and (2) to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act at home.

Key messages were issued by AFL President William Green, leader of 8,000,000 union members, and CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray's organization has just finished an anti-red purge which cost it 11 unions and about a sixth of the CIO's 6,000,000 members. The operation was planned by Murray and his associates last Labor Day.

In his message today, Murray said:

"The American people, who had hoped to live at peace with themselves and with the world, are confronted by a new threat of world war. The threat comes from the masters of communist world strategy. x x x

The workers of America want a peaceful world, in which men and women may work to improve their living standards, their democratic institutions, their personal good and welfare. These are precious goals, and we will strive for their achievement."

Murray added: "Let no man think he can take advantage of our national crisis to weaken our unions or to rob our people of hard-won gains."

At the half-way mark in the 20th Century, both Murray and Green urged active political roles for their union adherents, and declared it to be their prime political aim to elect a Congress which would wipe out the Taft-Hartley act.

Said Green:

"I am convinced that prompt repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act should stand as the number one item on our national defense program. It would revitalize the workers of this country, inspire them as no other action could, to pitch in and do the tremendous job that lies ahead of them."

Hurricane Heads Up Gulf Coast Of Fla.

Winds Near Center Speed To 85 Miles

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 3 (AP)—A small hurricane swept over the Florida Keys, then headed up the gulf coast of Florida late today, gathering some strength as it went.

Winds near the storm center increased to 85 miles an hour.

Strong gales spread out as much as 150 miles eastward. At Miami, gusts hit 65 miles an hour.

At 4 p. m. (EST), the weather bureau reported the center was about 85 miles south-southwest of Fort Myers, the palm-lined resort where Thomas A. Edison had his winter home.

Gulf Coast hurricane warnings were hoisted north to Tarpon Springs, 15 miles north of Tampa.

The hurricane was a tricky performer. Last night it sprinted across Cuba at 20 to 24 miles an hour after remaining almost stationary for two days. It whirled past Key West at 10 a. m., leaving scant damage in its wake.

Grounds Navy Barge

Its winds toppled trees, tore down wires, littered streets with shredded shrubbery, and blew a Navy barge aground but wreaked no structural damage at Key West. A steamship, the Gulfshore, in the Florida Straits east of Key West, reported it was struck by winds of full hurricane force—75 miles an hour—as the storm moved by.

The "baby" storm was described by Grady Norton, chief forecaster at the Miami Weather Bureau, as a "stop and go, ebb and flow" type of disturbance.

It spawned two days ago out of a blacklash of another hurricane which moved inland over northwest Florida and Alabama Wednesday night. Once born, the hurricane virtually sat in one place with winds spinning around its center. It was within 100 miles of its birthplace when it developed sudden agility and jumped 200 miles in 10 hours, crossing Cuba without causing damage or casualties.

As this infant storm gyrated, a giant hurricance crept northwestward at a snail's pace 1,000 miles east-southeast of Florida. This great storm, ranking with the mighty blows of the past quarter century, hurled its 160-mile winds against the open sea, but nobody quite knew where it might head next.

Thousands Made Homeless

In its wake the British West Indies Island of Antigua surveyed damage it caused there. A belated report from Pan American Airway's base at St. Johns, capital of Antigua, reported thousands homeless, $1,000,000 damage, every boat on the island sunk or driven ashore, food stocks damaged, warehouses destroyed and communications ruined. Two casualties were reported but it was not specified if they were fatal.

Closer at hand, the oil tanker Texas Trader was shaking clear of a fearful beating it took last night from the great storm's 160-mile winds north of Puerto Rico. The ship reported early today that it was edging out of the hurricane and winds had dropped to about 70 miles an hour.

No emergency was reported by the vessel.

Virus Defense Is Announced

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—Discoveries that may lead to an electrical defense against virus diseases were announced tonight to the American Chemical Society.

This defense would be to set up an electrical blockade in human bodies against invading viruses. Or else to hit the viruses with an electrical counterattack.

It is based on evidence for a theory that viruses must have electric charges to hook onto living cells. And that the cells can be made immune by giving them the right kind of electrical defense.

These findings were described by Dr Theodore T. Puck, biophysicist of the University of Colorado Medical Center, Denver. His report was made public on the eve of the Chemical Society's 118th national meeting, which 10,000 chemists are expected to attend.

Viruses are tiny disease agents that cause many different sicknesses, including polio, influenza, yellow fever, measles and mumps. A virus is harmless until it penetrates the kind of living cell that it attacks. Then it multiplies rapidly and sickens or kills the cell.

GOP Holds Offense In Nov. Voting

Gains Ground As Result Of Korea

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—With two months of political campaigning to go before the November congressional elections, Republicans appeared today to have gained the offensive as an outgrowth of the Korean War.

Two months ago the Democrats—operating in an atmosphere of general prosperity—were carrying the ball with President Truman's "fair deal" program.

With the exception of a lone counter-offensive based on charges that communists had infiltrated the government, the Republicans at that time generally were busy building defenses against the Brannan farm plan, against compulsory health insurance, against repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and against what they called "socialism."

The President's decision to send troops into Korea and the resulting early reverses for American arms changed all of that. The Republicans' somewhat limited offensive against communists at home was swallowed up in an over-all assault on what the GOP labels as administration "bungling" in far eastern affairs.

The Republican chorus has grown so loud that Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, found it necessary recently to devote almost all of a 15 minute broadcast to Illinois voters explaining that, far from bungling, President Truman had "saved our civilization" by his Korean decision.

At about the time Lucas was recording this broadcast, Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio) was putting into words in a House speech:

"Is the Truman Administration competent to either attain peace or prepare for war?"

His answer, of course, was that the administration is not.

Assassination Plot On Envoy Heath Revealed

SAIGON, Indochina, Sept. 3 (AP)—An assassination plot by Vietminh terrorists against Donald R. Heath, United States Minister to Indochina, was disclosed today by an American Legation spokesman.

French authorities warned Heath last night that police had information Heath's name was high on an assassination list of the communist-led Vietminh regime of Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh.

As a result of the threat, Heath will be guarded by 12 United States marines, who arrived here last week. He normally had two bodyguards assigned to him by the French and Vietnamese police.

Heath has been a prime target for propaganda blasts by the Vietminh radio, which hammers against the American policy of military aid to Indochina. A fourth shipload of such aid was being unloaded today in Saigon's river port from the American Freighter Steel Voyager.

The Vietminh radio has unleashed its most virulent personal attacks against Heath because of his Bulgarian background. The former American minister in Bulgaria was ordered out of that country by the communist regime on charges of spying.

Typhoon Kills 36

TOKYO, Sept. 4 (Monday) (INS) — Thirty-six persons were known dead, 31 missing and 165 injured today in the wake of Japan's worst typhoon in 16 years.

Enemy Hurled Back In Area Near Yongsan

Entire 120-Mile Front Is Afire

By MILTON MARMOR

TOKYO, Monday, Sept. 4 (AP) — Koreans reds, in a savage new offensive from the north, smashed within less than 10 miles of the hub city of Taegu Sunday and hammered hard at the extreme eastern and southern ends of the Korean defense front.

In the south-center, U. S. Marines and the Army Second Division counterattacked and hurled the enemy back three miles west and six miles south of Yongsan.

The entire 120-mile front, a zigzag but roughly rectangular line, was afire.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters summary early Monday said, however, that the reds' heavy assaults had everywhere failed to produce the weak spots they were seeking.

9 Divisions Identified

Nine red divisions, about 90,000 men, have been identified on the battlefront, and estimates are that possibly three others — making a total of 120,000 — are in action, with 30,000 more in reserve.

Opposing them, four U. S. Army divisions, a U. S. Marine brigade and five Korean Republican divisions have been identified.

As the flank of a Pacific typhoon lashed Korea with rain and lightning, this was the picture along the entire front:

Masan front in extreme south: Reds renewed attacks on U. S. 25th Division but made little or no progress in bloody fighting. Under orders to take Masan by Sunday, they remained nine miles west of their goal.

Southwest near Yongsan: Marines and U. S. Second Division counterattacked in efforts to erase communist bulge near confluence of Naktong and Nam Rivers. The reds had advanced eight and one-half miles eastward for their biggest gain of the southern offensive Friday and Saturday but the Americans recovered about half of it.

Northwest and North, Waegwan-Taegu sector: The reds uncorked a Sunday drive that gained three and one-half miles down the "bowling alley" stretch of the Tabu-Taegu highway. Forward patrols reached within 10 miles of Taegu before counterattacking First Cavalry infantrymen banged into the spearhead and halted it.

South Koreans Fall Back

East coast, around Pohang: South Koreans fell back several thousand yards before red hordes jumping off from Kigye, nine miles northwest of Pohang. The reds threatened the junction city of Kyongju on the Taegu-Pusan highway.

The main enemy effort appeared to be north of Taegu, key city in the Allied defense.

It was the Tabu-Taegu highway that became a graveyard of red armor in an eight-day battle that began Aug. 15. The communists lost 30 out of 40 tanks in a futile effort to smash down the road that U. S. soldiers dubbed "the bowling alley."

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported that the new attack towards Taegu opened Saturday evening with a 70-minute artillery barrage in which at least 2,000 shells were hurled at American lines.

Then the red machine began to move. Communist soldiers punched ahead three and one-half miles. Patrols infiltrated down both sides of the highway two miles south of Tabu but the town itself was still held by the First Cavalry. Americans counterattacked the advanced reds.

Drowning out the din of battle was an electrical rainstorm.

Crete's National Love Story Upset By Police

ATHENS, Sept. 3 (AP)—The story book lovers of Crete were separated today by a government move which may lead to renewal of a bloody mountain feud on that Mediterranean Island.

Athens police took Constantine Kephaloyannis, the dashing island Romeo, into custody on a warrent sworn out by Crete's public prosecutor charging him with kidnapping Tassoula Petracogeorgi.

The couple were married Friday in a remote Cretan monastery atop fabled Mount Ida 11 days after Constantine made off with 20-year-old, sultry-eyed Tassoula.

The impetuous, mustachioed lover said bad blood which has existed for generations between the Kephaloyannis and Petracogeorgis made a normal courtship impossible.

After the marriage the two young lovers flew to Athens to ask the blessing of Archbishop Spyridon of the Greek Orthodox Church. The bride spent Saturday night at the archbishop's residence and it was reported early today that he had blessed the union.

Later this was denied, but it is understood that the archbishop considered the marriage legal.

Tassoula was released from clerical chaperonage and rejoined her husband. She was with him when police picked him up on the kidnapping warrant this morning. After the arrest she took refuge with her husband's uncle instead of returning to her family.

"I love Costa and married him of my free will," the girl told newsmen yesterday. "My love developed as I was with him in the mountains. He is a proud, brave man. Above all his behavior and respect were beyond reproach."

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

THE new social security bill will now give benefits to around 45 million people, including self-employed, regularly employed agricultural workers, certain federal employes, state and local employes and employes of non-profit organizations if they wish to come in under the system.

Professional people such as doctors, osteopaths, optometrists, architects, certified public accountants, etc., are not included. However, if any of this group is employed full time on salary basis by some firm, then they would come under social security. Full time insurance salesmen on a salary basis or door-to-door salesmen on a salary are also included.

However, men working on a commission are self-employed as is the man who owns a filling station or a grocery store. If any of these or similar groups earn as much as $400 a year, they come under social security. These self-employed people will pay their social security taxes along with their income taxes, once a year, instead of having it deducted from wages or salaries. This means that the first payment comes due on March 15, 1952, for full coverage in 1951. The amount self-employed people have to pay depends on their earnings. But no one pays on more than $3,600 a year which is the maximum income from which social security deductions are made.

Farm owners or operators of rented farms do not come under the bill. But a regular hired hand does if he works for any farmer for as long as 60 days and earns as much as $50 in that quarter, which is three months time. The farm owner or operator must deduct the social security tax from the worker's pay and match the amount himself. Then he sends this money to the Treasury.

If a family employs a regular maid, cook or chauffeur on a weekly or monthly basis, these employes are covered and also any domestic who works as much as 24 days in any quarter of the year for the same person and earns more than $50 in that time. Casual workers, such as maids who come in by the day and who divide their time among several employes are not included. It hasn't been decided how the tax on domestics is to be collected. It may be in the form of stamps bought and then pasted in a book or by the employer collecting and sending it to the Treasury, the same as the farm owners.

There is an increase eventually in the amount to be deducted. At present 1½ per cent each is paid by the worker and the employer on earnings up to $3,000 a year. Under the new plan the worker and the employer will still pay 1½ per cent but it will be on the basis of up to $3,600 a year. This will continue through 1955. After that, starting in 1956, the rate will be 2 per cent and climb gradually to 3¼ per cent in 1970.

For this increase in deductions and payments, social security payments are almost doubled. For instance, the minimum payment has been raised from $10 to $20 a month. The maximum for an individual is raised from $46 to $68.50 a month. The worker with a wife and dependent children also has increases. It goes from $85 a month to $150. No payments, however, can exceed 80 per cent of the average monthly wages of the insured worker.

Under the new law, eligibility is increased. For instance, a person now 60 years old would require only 10 quarters or 2½ years to be eligible; at 61 only 8 quarters or 2 years; at 62 only 6 quarters or 18 months is required. Those quarters may include coverage earned before 1951 as well as coverage after that. All persons will be fully insured if they have been covered by social security payments for 40 quarters or 10 years.

Veterans of World War II are granted credits of $160 a month for time spent in the service between Sept. 16, 1940, and July 24, 1947, so that they do not lose any coverage.

There are death benefits of anywhere between $60 and $200. A widow receives ¾ of the primary benefits of her husband, and children under 18 also receive increased benefits. Widowers of women who are under the social security laws may receive benefits as well as divorced wives who are not remarried and have no job. Mothers and parents of insured men and women may also receive benefits.

Under the new law, those receiving benefits may now earn as much as $50 a month in outside work and still retain those benefits. After 75 years of age, they may earn any amount they wish without losing social security payments.

Thus this new bill makes it possible to give more real social security by raising the amount of benefits and by covering more groups.

UNDER THE DOME

My bill authorizing the acceptance of land along the C. and O. Canal was passed by the House last week. It has now gone to the Senate and I am hopeful that quick action will be taken.

Because of the large expenditure involved, $14,000,000, I objected to the Washington Airport Bill when it came before the House under unanimous consent. However, the bill was later brought to the floor and passed. I further objected to the bill feeling that the new International Friendship Airport at Baltimore could be used.

I have contacted the commandant of the Marine Corps relative to the separation of twin boys in the service. The boys have never been separated, followed the same trade and worked together. They were both members of the Marine Reserves and after being sent to camp have now been separated and I am asking that they be allowed to serve together.

I am receiving many letters regarding the lifting of tariff on some articles. At the present time the Tariff Commission and the State Department are going over the Tariff laws with the view of making revisions.

Dairymen Win Case Against Cooperative

In Circuit Court on Saturday, Judge George Henderson handed down an opinion in which he favored a group of dairymen in their case against the Cooperative Milk Services, Inc.

Orlan C. Hepner and a number of other dairy farmers brought suit for an accounting of all milk shipped from the local plant to the Washington market for about a six-month period.

Judge Henderson said that "there is no evidence whatever of fraud or bad faith on the part of the directors of the defendant cooperative".

"The controversy results from measure taken by the directors in their effort to solve a difficult situation in some way that would be for the best interests of a majority of their members," Judge Henderson stated.

"Unfortunately, the methods adopted worked injustice to the complainants, and in my opinion entitles them to relief".

Facts Recited

The facts in the case are as follows:

The Cooperative Milk Service, Inc., is a cooperative association organized in accordance with the cooperative laws of Maryland in 1948. At the time of the formation of the association the board of directors approved a form of marketing contract, which all patrons of the association who are members, were required to sign.

In April, 1948 it purchased the milk receiving station of the Embassy Dairy of Washington, D. C., at 416 Pennsylvania Avenue, this city, from James J. Ward and his wife. Thereafter the association sold its milk to this same Embassy Dairy, which paid the association the Maryland "blend price" for this milk, which is considerably higher than "manufacturers' price".

The association dealt with the Embassy Dairy from May 1, 1948 until June 30, 1949.

After a survey of the eastern seaboard outlets the board of directors determined that the Washington market paid the highest blended milk prices.

The directors also determined that the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., known as the "Washington Association", distributed 85 per cent of the milk in Washington and was interested in adding a new milk shed in this area if it could be secured.

Directors of the association here contacted an official of the "Washington Association" with reference to using that association as an outlet for milk of its producers.

On July 25, 1949, at a meeting in the LaVale Fire Hall members of the Cumberland association decided to enter into a special arrangement with the Washington Association.

Favored By Majority

Another meeting of the 60 members, 52 of whom were present, was held August 22, 1949 with 37 voting in favor of entering into a patron's agreement and 14 balloting against the proposal.

Following the meeting, a representative of the Washington Association arranged that members of the local association who had indicated an interest in joining the Washington group should do so. Such members executed a patron's agreement in which the local plant was designated as receiving station for his milk.

The member also executed an assignment addressed to the Washington Association authorizing it to deduct from the moneys due him monthly under the marketing contract such sums as the local association indicated was necessary to cover his pro rata share of the cost of operating the plant that month.

As to those members of the local association who did not join the Washington Association, the association continued to collect their milk and dispose of it to the Washington Association. This milk was commingled with the milk of local members of the Washington Association and sent to Washington in tank trucks of the local group.

The refusal of the complainants and certain other members to join the Washington Association was due to their financial inability, or their unwillingness, to spend the amount in improving their respective milk plants so as to comply with the requirements of the Washington health authorities.

It was also apparent, Judge Henderson stated, that upon the expiration of the temporary permits the local plant would be usable only by patrons, and that some other means would have to be found to dispose of the milk of the original members who remained only members and not "patrons".

No Withdrawal Permitted

Nevertheless no steps were taken to authorize them to withdraw from the association taking with them their respective shares in the so-called "revolving fund" which their patronage had helped the defendant to build up, and to enable them to turn their common and preferred stock at either its cost price or book value. There is evidence that certain members applied for but were refused permission to withdraw, the court ruled.

It is true that all were offered an opportunity to sign with the Washington Association. But this "opportunity" was only a nominal one to the member who did not have financial resources to make the required improvements, according to Judge Henderson.

Naturally after February 1, 1950 the non-patron members withdrew one by one, and sold their milk elsewhere in order to get a higher price than the manufacturers' price paid by Washington Association. Three signed releases before doing so. And these releases are in their terms broad enough to prevent them from having rights herein — unless the circumstances under which they were signed amounted to duress. (I have already referred to the failure of the association to permit withdrawal under fair and reasonable conditions after it was apparent non-patron members would ultimately be unable to use the plant.) By July 16, 1950 not one of the non-patron members was left.

"There is a strong doubt whether even a clear majority has the legal power to 'jettison' the minority members as was done here.

"But the complainants recognized they are confronted by a 'fait accomplix'".

Accounting Asked For

They ask only for an accounting during the period they were still shipping to the local plant and receiving a lower price than the patron-members; although complainants' milk was being commingled with patrons milk and shipped together in bulk as directed by Washington Association; and although the temporary permits were still valid under the health regulations of the District of Columbia.

But the local cooperative after February 1 no longer treated all its members alike. Although it said all are members, and all must ship through its plant when milk was pooled, it no longer pooled all the returns, Judge Henderson declared.

It said in effect "patrons funds are beyond our control, so non-patron members get only the manufacturer's price which the Washington Association is willing to give".

Under its marketing agreement with complainants the proceeds of milk shipped by its members were to be pooled. It continued to receive their milk — it required them to continue shipping. It should not now claim it cannot be held accountable for proceeds of patrons' milk merely because such proceeds did not pass through its hands.

No Precedent Cited

Counsel for both sides have been unable to find cases decided elsewhere that are exactly in point. But, as has been shown, elemental principles of justice and fair dealing justify the position contended for by complainants.

Judge Henderson decided that the complainants are entiled to an accounting. The defendant must take into consideration all milk shipped from its plant from February 1 to July 15, 1950, total the amounts received by patrons and non-patrons, determine the average price per hundred weight, and account to the complainants (who have not signed releases) for the difference between the amounts received by them and such higher average price.

The cases of those signing releases will be considered only if they file petitions setting out the facts surrounding the releases, and only if such alleged facts show duress, Judge Henderson concluded.

Labor Day

Labor Day has been observed as a holiday for more than 50 years. When observance of the day began, chief goal of organinzed labor was the eight-hour day. The eight-hour day has long since been achieved and forgotten in the press for many aims.

From this point forward organized labor, if it is wisely led, will adhere closely to the traditional American system, which spreads its benefits more widely than any the world ever knew.

The future of organized labor is in the keeping not of the leaders but of the rank and file of the workers. The average labor leader will not rise above the character of his followers. Frequently a leader yields, against his better judgment to the mistaken demands of members of his organization.

Labor Day is a day of solemn dedication to the principles which have made and kept America great. The one great goal in this industrial age should be the achievement of cooperation between labor, management and the government, with the latter acting always in the public interest, adhering to policies which guild America as a whole and do not give one segment of the populace an advantage at the cost of other segments.

As the nation follows that line it will gain strength. In the degree that it departs from it it invites weakness.

Rail Deadlock

It may be a long time before there is a settlement between the railroads and the two unions that forced government seizure of the lines by threatening to strike. Both sides to the dispute can sit back and wait, it appears, without worrying much about hurting their bargaining positions.

The unions called their strike in an effort to precipitate matters. They had been harassing management for big concessions for 17 months. But they had hoped that government seizure would be accompanied by government pressure on the roads. But is now seems that neither President Truman nor the Army will negotiate an agreement.

But the unions, as usual, will win out in the end. Union leaders wanted government seizure so they would be in better position to maneuver against management. Any new contract will be retroactive and the possibility of inflation may play into their hands.

As for the railroads, it is a case of heads you win, tails I lose. They agreed to the terms recommended by the President's fact-finding board, only to have the unions reject them. They went further by indicating approval of a compromise that would have given the unions still better terms—about 75 per cent of what had been demanded. In conscience, railroad management can hardly go further.

The situation is nothing to cheer about. These disputes should be settled without government seizure of the railroads. But the attitude of the unions is adamant, and it is no secret that government seizure has always resulted in granting their demands.

Beat Moscow To It

An estimated 10,000 Filipino guerillas called Hukbalahaps are terrorizing the government which Washington set up as a going concern four years ago. The United States guaranteed its independence just as the United Nations guaranteed that of South Korea, for which the United States has now gone to war.

Anything may happen in the Philippines unless steps are taken to break up the Huks. Dispatches indicate the insurrection is gaining strength.

The Huks are widely presumed to be communists, but they are held together basically by their grievances about government policy. Principally they are aggrieved about land policy. Landlords own most of the land and tenants are poverty-stricken. The Huks are reported to be made up largely of tenant farmers.

The Filipino government's army and constabulary are involved up to their necks in fighting Huks. If they aren't put down one way or another, American boys may be sent there to save this outpost in the line against communist aggression.

Land reforms might improve the situation not only in the Philippines but in several countries now struggling against radical movements. It would be highly desirable to see them achieved under U. S. leadership instead of letting the aggrieved continue to swell their ranks with the promise that Moscow will deliver the reforms they seek.

Homing Lobsters

The homing instinct of pigeons, while not precisely understood, has been made use of in various ways for years. Some dogs and cats, travelling great distances with no obvious guidance, have eventually reached home in safety. Now comes the lobster to join the ranks of these instinct-guided creatures.

Scientists at the Bermuda Biological Station have recently trapped lobsters, tagged them and carried them miles out to sea, and released them. These same crustaceans were found again in the Bermuda traps in three days' to a month's time. Conflicting tides and shoal barriers seemingly interposed no obstacles for the homing lobsters.

It might seem strange that man does not have this useful instinct. It may perhaps have existed in primitive man and been so suppressed by the urge to wander, explore and conquer that it has become atrophied. Parents searching for lost children deeply regret its absence.

Eating And Talking

The coffee houses of Vienna, long celebrated in song and story, seem to be on the way out. The war's effects have made their operation next to impossible, says a report from the city known as the home of the waltz.

At a recent meeting, representatives of cafe owners decided to petition the government for lower taxes, permission to buy food and drink at wholesale prices, and industrial rates for electricity. Even were these advantages to be obtained, many observers doubt that modern habits of Viennese living can make room for sessions in coffee houses.

Habitues of these cafes once had seemingly endless time in which to sit at tables, eating, drinking and discussing everything under the sun. Must this pleasant habit go by the board in a modern world geared to the snack-bar habit? Perched on a stool, today's customer gobbles his hamburger, gulps his coffee, and is off about his business. Do the old discussions go with him?

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Blood Donors Must Be Healthy

THERE is nothing personal about the modern blood transfusion. The donor seldom knows who is to benefit from the pint he gives; the recipient may be of any age, sex, race, or creed. After all, most of the material that is used nowadays comes from one of the 650 blood banks thruout the country.

It has been estimated that more than 1 million pints are used each year. This is big business. Studies in World War II confirmed our belief in the efficacy of transfusions and in addition opened up new fields for blood derivatives and substitutes. As a result, plasma, serum, and fibrin have become common words.

The importance of the donors cannot be underestimated. Their state of health must be good because each is a potential source of disease. This complication seldom occurs, but there have been isolated reports in the medical literature of the transmission in this manner of syphilis, leukemia, malaria, measles, smallpox, typhoid fever, gonorrhea, influenza, relapsing fever, and allergic hypersensitivity. These instances are so rare however, that no one who requires a transfusion should become apprehensive.

Furthermore, most donors are questioned about diseases of this nature before they are considered acceptable. A Wassermann or Kahn test is done to detect syphilis and a microscopic study of the blood is performed to eliminate such possibilities as leukemia and infection. Those who have had malaria in the recent past are rejected because parasites can remain active for a long time after the fluid is stored. For the donor's protection, his blood pressure is taken and blood counts and hemoglobin determinations are made to see whether he is anemic.

Beyond this, the physician relies upon the integrity of the individual who is donating or selling his blood. In the old days, when an emergency transfusion was needed a friend or relative offered his services. Because of the crisis, a Wassermann or Kahn was not done. You guessed it—the friend turned out to be the sick person's worst enemy by transmitting syphilis to him.

In recent years, many individuals have developed jaundice after plasma transfusions. With thousands of men and women donating to the pool, there are bound to be some who have had a recent liver infection (infectious hepatitis). They do not realize that the causative virus is still in their circulation. After reaching the pool serum, the organism remains indefinitely or until the product is used. Several weeks later the recipient begins to feel weak and tired and sooner or later his temperature rises and the skin and eyeballs assume a yellowish discoloration. Attempts are now being made to ward off this complication by rejecting everyone who has had jaundice in the past as well as by utilizing ultraviolet radiation to try to destroy the virus of infectious hepatitis.

The blood of the donor is classified according to type and the Rh factor to avoid serious reactions due to incompatibility. As a further check, a sample of the donor's blood is mixed with that of the recipient and studied under the microscope. If there is evidence that the cells are being destroyed, a new donor usually is selected.

This depends upon the cause of the blockage. If it is due to inflammation, penicillin or chloromycetin would be used to combat the organisms. But if an overgrowth of tissue is responsible, radium is most useful. The blowing out procedure is tried first, however, because it helps the majority of cases.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Harry Truman's experience of going broke as a haberdasher and paying off his debts for 20 years now influences his decisions as President of the United States. This was revealed at a White House conference called to discuss the defense of Alaska—the place which any Russian invasion might hit first.

Military advisers were trying to get the President to O. K. a plan for public housing and utilities in Alaska to be paid for over a 35-year period. Housing for troops in the bitter cold winters happens to be what Alaska needs most.

Mr. Truman listened carefully and then said: "No, I'm not going to approve that. I spent 20 years of my life with a heavy debt hanging over my head, and I'm not going to burden the people of Alaska with that kind of worry. Every year I paid $1,000 on the debt when my clothing store went under. It wasn't all paid until the year I was nominated for vice president.

Philosophically, Mr. Truman continued: "I don't want my children or children's children paying off the debts for mistakes I could make in the White House. That's why I don't want to commit our armed forces or resources to any such long-range plans as the Russians seem up to."

Cabinet Feud Gets Hotter

One of President Truman's most intimate associates was walking out of the White House grounds when a black limousine stopped and a voice said: "Want a lift."

It was the likeable, controversial Secretary of Defense, Louey Johnson. Truman's friend got in the car, and after some conversation, Louey put his hand on the friend's knee and said:

"We've got to get Acheson out of the Cabinet. You can help me. You can talk to the President about it whereas I can't. Let's pitch in and put this across."

Truman's close friend was noncommittal. He made no promises. But the incident illustrates the white heat which the Acheson-Johnson feud has reached. There have been Cabinet feuds in many previous administrations such as that between Jesse Jones and Vice President Wallace in Roosevelt's day. But seldom has there been such open sniping at a fellow Cabinet member as the current attack of Louey Johnson against Dean Acheson.

"Official" Cabinet Peace

Senators who sat in the closed-door session of the Appropriations Committee listening to the testimony of Secretaries Acheson and Johnson last week never would have dreamed there was any animosity between them. Their words almost dripped soothing syrup. On the other hand, several senators got into a row with the two Cabinet members and also between themselves.

Everyone present was sworn to secrecy; but here is what happened:

Senator Homer Ferguson, fiery, white-maned Michigan Republican did most of the sniping at Acheson and Johnson, asking needle-pointed questions in an attempt to rouse them against each other. After failing to provoke the two Cabinet officers into an open quarrel, Ferguson demanded bluntly whether Johnson "had always agreed" with Acheson's policies.

"It isn't a question of agreeing," replied the Secretary of Defense. He explained that both are members of the National Security Council, which thrashes out security problems. All members express their opinions freely, then the President makes the final decision.

"Since I have been on the job, I have followed straight through the policies of the Commander in Chief," added Johnson. Then he turned to Acheson and asked: "Isn't that true, Dean?"

"That is correct," the Secretary of State nodded.

Under Ferguson's persistent heckling, however, Johnson offered to outline his disagreements with Acheson over Formosa if it could be kept out of the official record. But this was turned down by the senators.

Tempers Flare

However, Senator Ken Wherry of Nebraska, sometimes called "the merry mortician," dropped all his merriment when Acheson accused him of "loose talk" on the subject of rearming Germany."

The Nebraskan leaped from his chair, his face red with rage.

"You can't accuse me of loose talking!" he thundered.

After tempers cooled down, California's beefy Senator Bill Knowland heated them up again with a demand to see the long-suppressed Wedemeyer report on China and Korea.

Acheson explained that the Senate's formal request for the Wedemeyer report had just arrived, and he couldn't give an answer until he had talked it over with the President. He added quite frankly, however, that his recommendation would be not to release the report.

This provoked a series of sharp questions from Knowland, until Tennessee's Chairman McKeller interrupted with a snort: "I don't like these political questions."

"I resent the statement of the chairman that politics is involved," bristled the Senator from California. "The questions I was asking are important to the defense of the nation. I am only interested in getting the facts."

Then he proceeded to enumerate the various times he had cooperated with the bipartisan foreign policy.

McKellar retorted that the committee's work had been delayed by repetitious questioning, and cited the second appearance of Central Intelligence chief Admiral Hillenkoetter, whom the aged McKellar insisted on calling "Admiral Hellicopter."

"We had Admiral Hellicopter up here," fussed McKellar, "and asked him question after question. Then we brought him back, and went over the same questions, same answers."

The Republican senators, however, came back with still more questioning of Johnson and Acheson and the session dragged on for three hours. By adjournment time, Defense Secretary Johnson still hadn't read his prepared statement and ECA boss Paul Hoffman was still waiting to testify. Their statements were incorporated into the official record without reading, so the senators could go home.

MATTER OF FACT

By STEWART ALSOP

How Shrewd Is Johnson

WASHINGTON

SECRETARY of Defense Louis Johnson's recent open letter to Rep. Anthony Tauriello, defending his record, is a choice item of Johnsoniana. Indeed, the distortions of facts are so obvious, and the bombast so peculiarly meaningless, that it almost seems likely that Johnson wrote the letter himself. If not, he should certainly hire a new ghost.

Leaving aside the oceans of guff, Johnson's self-defense apparently rests mainly on two points. One is a comparison between American military strength in March, 1948, and June, 1950. The other is a lengthy quotation from a speech delivered last April 4 by the able chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Carl Vinson.

If he really expected this defense to be taken seriously, Johnson must have made two peculiar assumptions. He must have assumed that no one would remember that he became Secretary of Defense, not in March, 1948, but in March, 1949. And he must have assumed that no one had bothered, or ever would bother, to read Vinson's speech. Unfortunately for Johnson, however, a ministry of truth, as described in George Orwell's book, "1948," has not yet been established in the United States to expunge the inconvenient facts of the past.

Trying Forrestal's Mantle

One of these facts is that even before March, 1948, and right up to the moment Johnson succeeded him in March, 1949, James Forrestal (in whose mantle Johnson is now rather unbeautifully attempting to drape himself) was trying desperately to increase the level of American strength. Because of the arbitrary budget limits imposed by President Truman, Forrestal's efforts met with partial failure—a failure which tortured Forrestal, and contributed to his end. But Forrestal's failure was only partial, and by the time Johnson took over, there had already been very real increases in being or authorized.

It was this increased strength which Johnson immediately began to hack away when he took over from Forrestal in March, 1949—which of course explains why Johnson chose March, 1948, instead of the later date. Moreover, the extent of the Johnsonian hacking was fully documented in the very speech from which Johnson quoted in his self-defense. This seems difficult to believe, but the speech is there, in the Congressional Record, for all to read.

Vinson did, as Johnson claimed, credit Johnson with real economies of about $600,000,000—and Johnson has always been credited in this space with about this much real saving. But then Vinson went on to demonstrate that the great bulk of the Johnsonian "economies" added up to "reductions in an amount of about $1.5 billion in the fighting capabilities of our armed forces."

"I want to state emphatically," continued Vinson, "that in my judgment Mr. Johnson's economy scalpel has cut . . . into the sinew and muscle of the armed services." The Vinson speech deserves to be read in full, but here are a few random excerpts which, for rather obvious reasons, Johnson chose not to include in his self-defense:

Johnson's Shrewdness Suspect

"A new thought is being germinated in Washington these days. It is that by reducing the armed forces we are, by some magical process, growing in strength and becoming militarily more effective. . . . The Army is much less effective than it was supposed to be on this date . . . The same is true of the Air Force . . . And the Navy? It has been reduced by 79 ships. Does that make the Navy stronger? Of course not . . . The Marine Corps air arm has been reduced by seven squadrons. I rather doubt that the marines have greatly improved in

Railroad Investments Might Be Risky Now

By ROGER W. BABSON

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 3.—In view of the railroad strikes in the United States and Canada, and the bullish tips that are being put out to get people to buy railroad stocks, I will this week discuss the railroads as an investment. At the close of World War II in 1946 the Index of Railroad Stocks averaged about 68.000. This declined to around 44.00 in June, 1949, and continued around these low figures until the Korean war broke out. Since then the Railroad Index has gone up to nearly 65.00. This means that these railroad stocks are now selling for almost as much as they did at their height during World War II.

Reasons For Being Bullish

1. Railroads have always prospered during wartime. This applies not only to the railroads serving such industrial centers as Pittsburgh, Detroit and Chicago but particularly the transcontinental lines. This should especially be true so long as the Korean difficulty lasts.

2. During the last depression many railroads cut their bonded debts and reduced other charges which should help the stocks. Even roads that were not re-organized were able to spend huge sums on improving their roadbeds, bridges, equipment, machine shops, etc.

3. Most railroads have little to fear from excess-profits taxes because they have such a large basic investment. In other words, the railroads have no watered stock. In some cases the asset value of railroad stocks is 10 times the price at which they are selling on the market.

4. After the war the railroads will have no reconversion problems such as many industrials will have. This is because war traffic uses the same rails, locomotives and equipment that peacetime traffic uses. The railroads should also benefit from the increase in population.

5. The railroads have been able to abandon much unprofitable mileage and to streamline their organizations. This latter is especially being illustrated by what the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company is now doing.

Reasons For Being Bearish

1. The oldest of the strong labor unions are in the railroad field. These unions in peacetime have usually "skimmed the cream" from the railroad earnings and have been a source of great trouble. If railroad wages could be reduced when earnings declined after a war, a fair readjustment could be made. As a matter of fact, the railroad wage increases given during war, when the earnings are abnormally good, cannot be withdrawn after the war is over, when earnings again decline.

2. Railroads have (subject to disputed government rate concessions) more or less, a monopoly during wartime; but after a war is over, they are confronted with more airplanes, more buses and more trucks than ever before. Therefore, railroads normally are subject to tremendous competition during peacetime. This will certainly be true as a settlement is gradually made with Russia.

3. When the Interstate Commerce Commission was formed railroads had a monopoly of transportation. There then were no private automobiles, no trucks, no buses and no airplanes. Such highways as then existed were very poor. Hence, the regulation of railroad rates and service was a necessity. Today, this regulation has turned into a nuisance to all concerned,—railroads, shippers and the public. Yet, the various railroad commissions, both federal and state, continue in office. In order to hold their jobs, they feel obliged to continue to regulate the railroads in both an unreasonable and a costly manner. In addition, the federal government is now suing the railroads for "overchanging" on War II business.

4. These competitors of the railroads, such as the automobiles, trucks, buses, etc., have their "roadbeds" built by the federal government and by the states, for which cost the railroads are obliged to pay their proportion in taxes. The railroads on the other hand, must pay the cost of building and maintaining their own roadbeds and terminals. In the case of the airplane, they have no roadbed to maintain as they use the air; while their expensive terminals are built by the federal or state governments, or by municipalities.

5. One third of the present railroad mileage is unprofitable and should be abandoned. Yet, when the railroads want to take up a little useless track, the shippers, the labor unions and the politicians combine to prevent it. Another fact to be considered is that each generation of young people will be less willing to patronize the railroads than are we older people.

Railroads As A Speculation

A study of the above and other factors leads a conservative investor to avoid being tempted to buy railroad stocks at this time. Some railroads may increase their dividends temporarily, but very few which now pay no dividends will go on a dividend basis. They will need the additional money for buying more equipment, etc. It probably would have been smart to have bought railroad stocks immediately when our troops first landed in Korea; but to buy them today for investment will be risky.

Probably some cheap railroad common stocks, upon which I never expect a dividend, may go up more in price due purely to speculation on the part of small speculators. There are only a relatively few shares of these stocks outstanding; and a little increased buying could easily send them up in price. Furthermore, they have such a big leverage when selling at low prices, they could double or perhaps triple in price. However, after the war is over and earnings decrease, these very facts can cause these stocks to go down in price just as rapidly. Intrinsically, stocks go up only when there are more buyers than sellers;

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Nutmeg State

THE advertising firm of Benton and Bowles continues in business in the state of Connecticut, William Benton being its United States Senator by grace of a deal between Chester Bowles, governor, and Raymond Baldwin, one-time U.S. Senator and a Republican, whereby the latter was appointed to a judgeship and vacated the senatorship. It was all smooth and pretty like an advertisement for a toothpaste.

Now comes an election and Bowles is again to run for governor on the Democratic ticket, assisted by the Socialist A. D. A. The Republicans hav nominated for this office John Lodge, brother of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., running independently is Jasper McLevy, mayor of Bridgeport, it would seem, forever.

Chester Bowles used to be a firm capitalist who went to Washington to run the OPA and now is politically indescribable. He comes of the great Springfield, Mass., Bowles family that produced the "Springfield Republican," which was once a newspaper of superb merit. His present association with the Social-Democratic A. D. A. (Americans for Democratic Action) must be regarded as merely political.

There can be no question but that John Lodge will put up a terrific campaign. Connecticut includes a very large population of Italian and Polish origin to whom Lodge's personality and abilities will appeal. He is now a member of the House of Representatives.

The Republican organization in Connecticut is not too strong, having been weakened by long tenure out of office and by the desertion of Raymond Baldwin. A large number of the leaders serve on various bipartisan boards and commissions, with the result that there is a temptation not to be too offensive to the Democrats in power.

Also, a great number of Republicans use Connecticut for bedroom purposes, their interest in the state being casual. In fact, this bedroom connection is true of Benton and Bowles on the Democratic side.

This year the citizens of Connecticut will be called upon to vote for two United States Senators. William Benton will run to complete Baldwin's term, Baldwin having quit to become a judge. Against him will run Prescott S. Bush, an associate in business with Averell Harriman, who is now President Truman's adviser on foreign policy. Mr. Bush is a New York banker who lives in Connecticut. It is not believed at this writing that Mr. Bush will be able to make an adequate fight, although wonders have happened in politics.

Running independently, for the United States Senate, on a ticket with Jasper McLevy, Socialist mayor of Bridgeport, is the extremely capitalistic Vivien Kellems, manufacturer. She is a personable lady, financially able to take care of herself, and an in-fighter of the swiftest order. She will pep up the campaign. As she does not believe that Mr. Bush has any chance at all, she feels that she is justified in throwing a monkey-wrench in what looks like a well-oiled victory for Mr. Benton.

The other senatorial candidate is Brien McMahon, currently chairman of the Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy and an associate of Senator Tydings in the whitewash of the State Department. For some weeks, during that investigation, it was widely rumored that Senator McMahon was going to do a hatchet job on Louis Budenz. A graduate of Fordham, at which Jesuit university Budenz is a professor, McMahon would have been in the position of attacking his alma mater. This would not have sat so well with the voters. So the job was handled by Senator Chavez of New Mexico.

Against McMahon runs Joseph E. Talbot. In Connecticut, religious affiliations play a political role, as they should not. Both these candidates are Roman Catholics. Mr. Talbot will undoubtedly fight his battle on the Amerasia case, in which connection Brien McMahon is vulnerable.

Pressures are being put on all the Republican candidates to avoid discussion of Teheran, Potsdam, Yalta, the Amerasia case, Korea and the China policy of Dean Acheson. As there is little else to talk about, it will be impossible to fight a campaign without discussing what the voters want to hear. Furthermore, if Miss Kellems goes to it tooth-and-nail, she is likely to set the pace.

Connecticut may produce interesting surprises in this election both in the character of the campaign and in the results. It is, at the moment, impossible to tell which way the cat will fly.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD

By DOROTHY MANNERS

(Substituting for vacationing Louella Parsons)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 3 (INS) — Plumb wonderful what studios do with old scripts. "Night After Night," made with George Raft and Mae West a snappy 20 years ago, is being revamped for Betty Hutton to play the George Raft role — you heard me — the RAFT role!

MAE WEST

George played a night club owner who gets mixed up with gangsters. Betty will play a girl who operates a night club and innocently becomes involved with the mobs.

If you remember the old picture, it's the one in which Mae muttered one of the lines which made her famous. When a hat-check girl said to her, "Goodness, what beautiful jewelry," Mae cracked:

"Goodness had nothing to do with it, dearie!"

• — • — •

There were no hard feelings either way when Ruth Warrick left the cast of "Carrie" at Paramount, replaced by Miriam Hopkins. Even though the change was so fast Agent Wynn Rocamora was routed from a concert at the Hollywood Bowl to close the deal for Miriam — Ruth was one of the first to agree with Willy Wyler and Laurence Olivier that she showed too young for the wife role.

Her commitment with Paramount for one picture still stands. The movie she makes may be "Alice Sit By the Fire."

• — • — •

June Haver will not make a picture until after the first of the year which is smart, smart, smart. She feels much better but still not strong enough for the strenuous dancing her musicals call for, so she is listening to her doctor's advice.

If Judy Garland and others we could mention had been so wise they would not be in the nervous and physical condition they are today.

Both Warners and 20th were most cooperative with little June when she said "no more pictures until I am completely well."

• — • — •

Writing a holiday column should not happen to a dog. Everybody's away having laughs and making no news. Even the good old stand-by press agents are off fishing, or loafing, or lying on the beach instead of phoning to me.

• — • — •

That's Lana Turner's real dressing room you'll be seeing in "Mr. Imperium"—and in technicolor, yet. As you know, Lana plays a movie star in the picture, so instead of building one on a set, the camera moved into Lana's own quarters.

You'll see her famed record cabinet in which she keeps one of the largest collection of platters (lots of Judy Garland's among them) in Hollywood.

The only change made will be turning a picture of her daughter, Cheryl, away from the camera on account of Lana doesn't have a little Cheryl in the script.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random:

Ruth Roman was with John Agar at the Encore which isn't to be taken too seriously. The scuttlebutt is that he has a new romance in Texas.

Whether Elizabeth Taylor and Nicky Hilton had a "serious" quarrel or not—her studio thought it important enough to dispatch a press agent to Chicago to handle the outburst of rumors.

Even if this is a press agent gag —it's a good one. Herman Hover, of Ciro's, is starting a baby sitter service for parents who want to come to his nitery. He has hired Mrs. Kitty Shard, a child nutritional expert, to provide expert "sitters" for potential customers who can't connect with one themselves.

Ava Gardner switched from you-know-who to go with Manager Benton Cole to the Palladium. She wanted to listen to the music of her good friend, Jerry Gray, and his band.

Sylvia Sidney is not coming back to Hollywood. After her tour with "The Innocents," she will settle in New York.

Byron Haskins, who directed "Treasure Island," has been secretly married to Terry Gates since August 19. Slipped over the border to tie the knot in Tijuana.

Buddy Rogers to New York Tuesday to prepare his television show.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

We're off to the jungle.

Yes, sir, to get authentic background for a movie called "They Killed To Live," the whole company, headed by Sabu, is going into the wilds of Malaya to capture leopards, panthers, tigers, lions and snakes.

It will be the most dangerous venture since the first tourist tried to cross Hollywood Boulevard against the light.

Of course, capturing these wild animals in their native habitat is a lot different from using animals trained for the movies. In Hollywood, if you want to capture a lion, all you have to do is arrange it with his agent.

I've been in a few jungle pictures myself and the wild animals in Hollywood are really sensitive. Every time you try to shoot one, it complains to its union.

But this movie company in Malaya may find it tough to convince the animals to leave the jungle. The animals may say, "We're scared to leave . . . we've been reading your newspaper headlines."

Two Men Held On Gaming Count

Joseph H. Hayhurst, 204 South Mechanic Street, and Beal A. Milleson, 113 Oak Street, were booked for gambling at police headquarters Saturday night. Milleson tried to place a bet after a police lieutenant entered the place, authorities stated.

The police docket shows bonds of $200 each were posted by the men.

Chief of Police R. E. Flynn said the arrests were made by Lt. Edwin R. Lilya Saturday at 4 p.m.

Lt. Lilya, while in plain clothes, walked into the Queen City Billiard Parlor just as a man he identified as Hayhurst shouted the name of a winning horse he had received over the telephone.

Lt. Lilya reported he walked over to Hayhurst and took the phone from him. The crowd remained stationary after they recognized Lilya, the officer said, and while he listened on the phone.

The lieutenant said that the only thing he heard over the telephone was a man saying "Hey Joe" and "What's the matter, Joe?" While he was listening, a man he identified as Milleson walked to the counter and attempted to place a bet with Hayhurst who was standing next to the lieutenant. Hayhurst, Lilya said, kept shoving the alleged bettor's money back.

Lilya said the unidentified caller on the other end of the line hung up when he heard the officer's voice tell him to "go ahead," apparently knowing it wasn't "Joe."

After this, Lilya escorted the pair to headquarters where both were booked on gaming charges.

The bond was posted for a hearing in Police Court this week.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

© 1950 by John F. Dille Co.

When your mirrors warn you that you are finding time for everything but yourself, take notice!

ONE OF THE smoothest and most admirable developments of this period is the evolution of the American business woman. To many like myself who can remember when it was a rare woman, indeed, who was employed outside the home, it is little less than startling to note the tremendous number in the business world today. Even more astonishing are the recent statistics proving there are as many married as single women holding jobs.

Which Corner to Cut

That countless thousands of women are able to run a job efficiently and a home lovingly at the same time is a source of humbling wonder to the mere man who finds his nine-to-five stint just about all he can take!

And with all this, the American woman in business is one of the most attractive and best-turned out women in the world.

But when the working wife or mother has to cut a sharp corner, what is it that gets neglected? Nine times out of ten, it's herself.

If such is the case with you, just consider these words of the old Bard: "Self-love, my liege, is not so great a crime as self-neglecting."

When you must steal time from any of your activities, make sure that it is not from yourself. For even though your self-neglect is so small that it goes undetected at present, eventually it will take its toll.

First Duty

The one part of your daily routine with which you should permit no interference is the twenty minutes per day minimum that every woman must spend on herself if she is to keep looking her best. Never slight the thorough cleansing and lubricating of your face, brushing of your hair, exercise for your special figure problem, the nail polish that needs patching and the grooming of your clothes. And more man any other woman, the working one needs to watch and clip the ads, so she can make the most of the rare hour when she finally finds time to shop. It's only by such watchfulness and careful planning that the working homemaker can possibly hope to find the clothes that are best suited to her.

The woman who finds time for everything but herself is not only slighting herself but everyone who loves her!

P. S. from J. R. P.

Tri-Towns C. Of C. Urges Completion Of Savage Dam

PIEDMONT, W. Va. — Recommendations citing the need for the completion of Savage River Dam were contained in letters sent to two Maryland senators and the congressmen from this section of Maryland and West Virginia by the Tri-Towns Chamber of Commerce.

As the dam is near to 95 per cent completion, it was pointed out that stoppage of the work now would result in the loss of some of the original investment and the section would be deprived of the advantages to be provided by the dam, although several millions of dollars have been spent on its construction.

A steady flow of water in the Potomac the year-round is needed by industries along the river, it was also pointed out. To halt efforts to regulate the flow might mean interruption of employment to many people in this section.

Westernport's water supply has been curtailed by the construction of the dam and the town is at the resent time put to an additional expense for pumping. That this handicap will be removed by the completion of the dam, is another point mentioned.

Three Typhoid Cases Are Noted In Mineral County

KEYSER, W. Va. — Despite the fact three cases of typhoid fever have been reported to the Mineral County Health Department, investigation discloses that only one of the persons had an opportunity to contract the disease within the county.

Two typhoid patients who have been admitted to Potomac Valley Hospital were residing in Morgantown, Monongalia County, and in Martin, Grant County, at the time of onset, William Waller, supervisor of the Mineral County Health Department, said yesterday.

"Typhoid is usually spread by way of contaminated water or milk," Waller said. "It may also be contracted by eating foods which have been contaminated with fly-borne filth. Shell fish, notably oysters, which have been dredged from polluted areas have been responsible for several epidemics."

Waller continued: "While one case of typhoid does not constitute an epidemic and there is no cause for alarm, certain precautions may be taken which will greatly reduce the liklihood of infection. Drink water from municipal water supplies, which are under constant vigilance of local and state health authorities.

"Should it become necessary to travel in areas where water of assured safety is not available, water may be made safe by the addition of ten drops of A-1 solution of chlorox, of Halizon tablets, which may be obtained from your local drug store, may be used as directed on container.

"Use milk from dairies displaying a Grade A label. Milk from these dairies is tested regularly and precautions are being taken to see that contamination does not enter the product.

"Swim only in areas known to be free from pollution. Typhoid may be contracted by taking the organism into the mouth while swimming.

"When purchasing shell fish look on the container for a permit number. A permit is issued by the U. S. Public Health Service to reputable packers who are dredging from clean areas.

"If your home is not located on a city sewer line, see that proper toilet facilities are provided," Waller concluded.

ALL-IN-ONE GOLF CLUB CONTINUES TO STIR UP STORM OF CONTROVERSY

By Central Press

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Uncle Sam's golf stick, the one that cost $100,000 to develop in World War II because it has four detachable heads, has been taken off the exclusive supply list of the Armed Forces and made available to civilians, but it's stirred up a storm of controversy.

Designed by Horton Smith, the Missouri pro, to provide recreation for men overseas and at the same time save shipping space, the unique device breaks down into six pieces. The shaft separates in two parts at the twist of a tiny lock wrench. Then there are four heads for separate shots. Each fits onto the end of the shaft which is machined with a special "T" lock.

• — • — •

PREVIOUS experimenters with novel all-in-one clubs have tried using screw-threaded joints but they soon trip smooth under the shock and weight of a few hard drives on the fairway. Other types also have used worm gears to adjust the angle of the heads. Not so with a new one, named after John J. Jacosky, the man who engineered the club after Smith's design which was evolved from ideas contributed by a joint athletic board of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The requisites of the ideal set were set forth, but the problem of making a good set of matched clubs operating off of one shaft, not to exceed three pounds of carrying weight, and small in bulk, was a real engineering puzzler.

But is was finally developed from the drawing board to the finished product; only after about $100,000 was allocated and used for this purpose.

Now, the four heads can be adjusted to make seven matched clubs,

Ready to play—with detachable club heads and each head has the correct angle of loft, angle of shaft line, length of shaft, weight of blade and balance. This is possible through variations in the dimensions and characteristics of the individual heads themselves.

• — • — •

RELEASE OF THE CLUB to civilian channels has stirred up a storm of controversy in the nation's 75,000 golf clubs, and caddies naturally have spearheaded the opposition because the all-in-one golf stick is certainly going to put some of them out of business.

The player carries his spare heads, balls and tees in a small leather bag suspended from a shoulder strap.

Up to now the U. S. National Golf Association has not accepted the club for official play, having classified it as "a mechanical aid to golf."

Thus, thousands of ex-GIs who played with the unique golf club on Armed Forces recreation greens at home, Tokyo, Nice and Biarritz at the close of World War II, are watching with interest the newest wrinkle in the eternal controversy of man vs. machine.

Golfers To Qualify

Members of the Women's Golf Association of the Cumberland Country Club will qualify for fall golf tournament tomorrow.

There also will be an odd hole tournament for women golfers tomorrow at the local club.

The Chief has a point there! You can rotate your own tires, but—confidentially—it's back-breaking work. Save yourself a "heap big job" and let us do it for you. By using the spare and rotating tires every 4000 miles, you can drive 20,000 miles, putting only 16,000 miles on each tire. "Resting" and "exercising" your tires prolongs their life.

Detroit Gains On Yanks, Kiner Sets 2-Year Homer Record

Tigers Pick Up Half Game, Top Pale Hose, 4-2

Hutchinson Notches 15th Win As Bengals Trail By Two Games

DETROIT, Sept. 3 (AP) — Right hander Freddie Hutchinson pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the Tigers picked up half a game on the idle New York Yankees.

The second-place Detroiters thus climbed to within two games of the American League leading Yankees.

Hutchinson had a five-hit shutout going into the ninth as he notched his 15th win and his third over the White Sox.

But Floyd Baker's single followed by Eddie Robinson's 17th homer drove both runs across and enabled the White Sox to escape a whitewashing. Box:

Tennis Tourney Halted By Rain

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 3 (INS)—A steady, all-day downpour of rain caused postponement today of all semi-final matches of the national tennis championships.

Bobby Feller Notches 13th Win Of Year

Mitchell, Doby Belt Homers In 8-1 Game

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (INS) — Bobby Feller registered his 13th victory of the season on a five-hit performance as the Cleveland Indians walloped the St. Louis Browns, 8-1, today before 5,683 St. Louis spectators.

The triumph gave Cleveland a sweep of the two-game series and brought the Tribe to within five games of the idle, first-place New York Yankees. It was the Indians' 13th win in 18 starts with the Brownies this year.

Cleveland racked four St. Louis hurlers for 13 hits, including a three-run circuit clout by Dale Mitchell and Larry Doby's 21st home run with the bases empty. Mitchell also touched off a four-run rally in the fourth by singling home Feller, who tripled.

Starter Don Johnson took the loss. He was followed on the mound by Clarence Marshall, Harry Dorish and Jack Bruner.

Feller gave up three walks and the lone Brown tally was unearned. Box:

Pep, Saddler Meet Friday

Sandy 5 To 7 Choice To Dethrone Champ

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP)—September's parade of championship fights gets under way this Friday night in Yankee Stadium when featherweight champion Willie Pep defends his crown against Sandy Saddler in their long awaited "rubber" bout.

A crowd of between 30,000 and 40,000 is expected to turn out to witness the scheduled 15-rounder. Saddler, four years younger than the champion, is rated a 5 to 7 choice to dethrone the little Hartford, Conn. titlist. Saddler is 24 and Pep 28.

Pep regained the title from Saddler by outpointing the skinny Harlem negro in a 15-round classic in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 11, 1949. Only three and a half months before, Saddler pulled one of the ring's greatest upsets by knocking out Pep in four rounds.

The bout will not be broadcast or televised.

Another champion, welterweight king Ray Robinson, also will see action this week but in a non-title bout. Robinson meets Billy Brown of Hartford, Conn. in a ten rounder at Brooklyn's Coney Island Velodrome Monday night.

Joe Feels Better:

Stydahar's Los Angeles Rams Swamp Baltimore Colts, 70-21

Get 11 Touchdowns In Exhibition Game

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams and Coach Joe Stydahar all felt much better today. In fact, they were downright exhuberant.

Coach Joe told the boys last night before they played the Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition that there were going to be some changes made if they didn't show him something. That something had to be a neat victory over the Colts.

Four nights before the Rams had lost to the Philadelphia Eagles, their conquerors in the league play-off last season, by a 49-14 score. It was the worst beating the Rams ever had suffered in the professional circuit.

Stydahar shook up the team. He had eight new starters. He said: "now if you guys don't do something there'll not only be another shake-up but quite a few of you will be leaving us."

So, what those fellows did to the Colts was well worth writing home about. They beat Baltimore 70-21. They made 11 touchdowns — one more than they scored in their entire first season in the league. They romped for 614 yards, 345 of it on the ground. Bob Waterfield engineered them to six touchdowns, passing for two. He whipped the ball 212 yards. Norman Van Brocklin quarterbacked the team for its other TD's.

The Ram scoring included a 64-yard punt return for a touchdown by Dan Towler, a 45-yard pass from Waterfield to Tommy Kaliminir and an 85-yard dash by Jerry Williams with a hand-off.

"Yes sir," said Stydahar, "the boys looked unbeatable. What impressed me was the team spirit. Their blocking was vicious, their tackling terrific. They all wanted to win and did it."

KINER SETS ANOTHER RECORD — Ralph Kiner (left) of the Pittsburgh Pirates grins happily in the dressing room with teammate Gus Bell after Kiner hit home runs Nos. 41 and 42 for the season, besting with 96 Hack Wilson's National League record for homers in two successive seasons. Kiner walked in the 10th and Bell drove him home to give the Buccaneers a 12-11 win over the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday at Pittsburgh.

The Lonaconing Republican Club defeated the Mt. Savage Braves by the score of 5-2 yesterday in the only contest played in the Bi-State Baseball League as rain washed out the other three games on the card.

Carl "Pete" Dicken, league secretary, last night announced that in event any of the four top teams wind-up in a tie at the conclusion of today's league program, the teams involved will clash on Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock. If postponed on Wednesday, the game or games must be played off before Saturday as plans are under way to start the circuit's Shaughnessy playoffs on that day.

Keyser is now tied with Westvaco for third place and there is still a possible chance for the two top teams to windup in a tie—that's if Midland loses and Hyndman's Firemen win today.

Lefty Lauber gained the nod over Lefty Bob Crump in a mound duel yesterday at Mt. Savage. The victory gave Lauber a 6-6 record for the season. The loss was Crump's 9th.

Curtis Cup Golf Series To Open

U. S. Women Favored To Defeat British

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Mark A. Porter, the national women's champion from Westmont, N. J., and Beverly Hanson, the long-hitting blonde from Fargo, N. D., were named today on the number one foursome for the opening tomorrow of the Curtis Cup golf matches with the British Isles team.

They will oppose the two Scotswomen of the British team, Mrs. George Valentine of Perthshire, runner-up in this year's British women's championship, and Jean Donald of North Berwick, runner-up for the British title two years ago.

With the weather clearing and the 6,280-yard Country Club of Buffalo course drying out rapidly, the distance-conscious Americans have become overwhelming favorites to retain the trophy they never have lost.

The eent consists of three foursomes tomorrow and six singles Tuesday, each worth one point. All matches will end on the 36th, a tie giving each team half a point.

Yanks, Senators Play Double Bill Sept. 22

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The league-leading New York Yankees will play off today's postponed doubleheader with Washington at the Yankee Stadium, Sept. 22, an open date for both teams. Today was to have been the Senators' last visit to New York but because of the importance of the two games to the Yankees' pennant chances, the teams arranged for the playoff here on the open date.

Moorefield stayed in the battle for the playoff spot by whipping the Hyndman Vets yesterday at Hyndman, 6-3.

The game was featured by home runs by Warden Hott and "Huck" Seymour of Moorefield and the relief pitching of Lefty Garrett who supplanted Dwight Kessel in the first inning and got credit for the triumph.

Moorefield pulled a triple play in the 9th inning to choke off Hyndman's threatened rally. Bryant lined to Shortstop Johnny Vance who completed the three-ply killing along with Warden Hott and "Huck" Seymour after the Vets had filled the bases.

Swimming Ends Today At Celanese Pool

The Celanese swimming pool season is closing today after Labor Day swimmers "call it a day." Hugo Keller, sponsor, said that the season has had approximately 27,000 paying customers, which is slightly under normal. James Scott, chairman of the pool committee of the Celanese Athletic Association, which owns and operates the pool, said that $3,000 was spent on improvements this year. A sliding board was installed, the area around the pool was concreted, and playground equipment added to the park.

Bucs' Clouter Wallops Pair In Wild Tilt

Season Total Hits 42 And 96 For Two Years In 12 To 11 Conquest

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rookie Gus Bell doubled Ralph Kiner home with the winning run in the last of the 10th inning today as the Pittsburgh Pirates outlasted the St. Louis Cardinals 12-11 in a hectic see-saw battle that featured eight home runs.

The Pirates trailed 11-9 going into the 10th but successive homers by Pete Castiglione and Bob Dillinger knotted the count. Kiner who hit his 41st and 42nd home runs of the season during the game, was intentionally passed, paving the way for Bell's game winning smash.

A sparse Sunday crowd of 12,578 thrilled to the home run spectacle.

Kiner's two blows broke the National League record for home runs in successive seasons, his two year total being 96. He hit 54 last year. Hack Wilson of the Cubs set the old record in 1929-30.

Danny O'Connell also homered for the Pirates and Tommy Glaviano, Stan Musial and Bill Howerton each belted one for the Cards. Box:

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (INS)—The Cincinnati Reds took advantage of two Chicago Cub errors in the 11th inning today to score a 7-5 victory before 18,197 fans in Wrigley Field.

The Reds lost an early 4-0 lead and came from behind with a run in the ninth to send the game into overtime. Ken. Raffensberger pitched scoreless ball for six innings but the Cubs hit him and reliefers Ed Smith and Herman Wehmeier for five runs in the seventh and eighth frames.

Eddie Erautt took over for Harry Perkowski in the ninth and received credit for the victory. Cincinnati's 13th in 17 contests with the Cubs this season. Doyle Lade was the victim of the Cub fielding lapses in the 11th and was charged with the loss. Each team used five hurlers. Box:

Blindman's Bluff

LAST night, in a mood for malt and malarkey, I stopped in to chin with Sammy Fuchs, proprietor of the Bowery Follies and honorary Mayor of that unwashed neck of the Manhattan woods.

"What's new and gruesome in your ballwick?" I asked mine host.

Billy Rose

"Nothing much," said Sammy, "except that Faker Kennedy died last week and left his eyes to a bartender down the block."

"Come again?" I said.

According to Sammy, the Faker was a professional blind man who had been rattling a tin cup on the Bowery for as long as he could remember. In spite of his calling, however, it was a standing joke around the flophouses that the cane-tapper could shoot off a bug's ear at a hundred paces.

"We used to kid Kennedy about his blindness," said Sammy, "but he never let on it was an act—if it was an act. And we were never sure because no one ever saw the old coot without his smoked glasses.

"Down at Gargan's Bar where the Faker used to hang out after hours," Sammy continued, "the proprietor had a kind of running gag at the bum's expense.

" 'When you die,' he used to say, 'will me your eyes. Mine are gettin' pretty tired from lookin' at the sawdust.'

" 'I'll leave 'em to ya, Gargan,' was the Faker's stock answer. 'And they'll come in handy if ya ever want to play marbles.'

"That's about how the talk went until one night not long ago when a couple of stick-up men walked into Gargan's and lined the customers up against the wall—all except the Faker who didn't budge from his usual place at the end of the bar.

"After the punks had cleaned out the register and what little was in the customers' pockets, one of them walked up to the Faker and jabbed a gun in his ribs.

" 'You wouldn't take pennies from a blind man, would ya?' said Kennedy.

" 'Don't gimme that pennies stuff,' said the thug. 'You guys always got a roll on ya.'

The Faker made out as if he was fumbling in his pockets, and then suddenly made a grab for the gun yanked it away from the hood and bopped him over the head with it. Then, using the body as a sort of shield, he pointed the gun at the other punk.

" 'Drop yer pistol,' he said, 'or I'll shoot the cigar outta yer mouth.'

"Well, it so happened the thug did have a cigar in his mouth, and when he heard the blind man's on the-button reference to it he got panicky and dropped his gun. A dozen guys jumped him, and a few minutes later he and his pal were in the precinct house.

"After that, of course, everybody on the Bowery was sure the Faker was a fake, but he never owned up. 'They got me all wrong,' he once told me. 'The stick-up guy was smokin' an Italian stogie and ya can smell them things a block away. And I guessed it was in his mouth by the way he talked.'

" 'A couple of weeks ago,' Sammy went on, "Faker Kennedy got pneumonia, and the day after his body was carted off to Potter's Field a package showed up in Gargan's mail with a pair of glass eyes."

"Sounds like the old man was telling the truth after all," I said.

"Nobody is convinced, one way or the other," said the Mayor of the Bowery. "Maybe the eyes came out of the Faker's head, and then again maybe he picked them up in a hockshop. You know, you never can tell about these cuckoos —he might have wanted to play the gag out to the end."

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN HURRY IS VITAL

THERE is no time to waste when you fear the defenders are trying to beat you with a ruffing trick. Hurry is vital then. Your job is to go after the trump suit at the very earliest opportunity, immediately if possible, except in one rare situation—when you are able to make sure that the hand which would lead to give his partner the ruff can be kept out of the lead later on. In all other cases, the contract depends on eliminating trumps from the prospective ruffer's hand.

That bidding was by a couple of hand-hogs. North should have put the side into 4-Spades as soon as he learned from the third bid of the suit that South had six spades. When he failed to, South should have settled on the 3-No Trumps by passing. But neither partner considered the other a good player of the cards. The 3-No Trumps could not have been made by a magician against a diamond lead anyway, but the spade game should have.

STICK IN A LOWER SUIT

IT IS NOT too infrequent that we hear an opponent bid 3-No Trumps, meaning it as an informative or takeout double, asking his partner to bid another suit, after the bidding has been opened with an attempted shutout suit bid of three. If the partner of the first bidder has a good fit with that suit, it is not always best for him to show it at once. In case he has another suit, which would be a better lead if the opponents buy the contract, it sometimes pays to stick in a call of it, especially if it is a lower-ranking suit.

In this social duplicate game, none of the players were using the conventional sequel to a hostile three bid whereby 3-No Trumps means a desire to play at that contract and the device

South bungled at the very first trick, when he let the club 2 run to his 10. To reach dummy for trump leads, he led toward the heart honors. East won with the A and returned the club 4, which the A won. A heart to the K enabled South to lead the spade 9, which was finessed to the Q. Now the third club gave East a ruff with the spade K, the diamond J was returned and the A set the contract.

South should have read the club 2 as probably a fourth-best, placing East with two. The sole sure preventative of a third-round ruff was elimination of trumps quickly. So he should have won the club lead with dummy's K and led the spade 9, finessing to the Q. He should have won the returned club with the 10 and laid down the spade A, hoping to drop the K from one defender or the other. That would have limited his lost tricks to one each in every suit but clubs to assure his contract.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

If North bids 3-Spades and East an artificial takeout double of 3-No Trumps, what should South do?

to cause a suit bid by partner would be the lowest-ranking suit above the bid, in this case 4-Clubs. Bidding was considerably different at the remaining five tables, but the sequences above show what developed where East over-called 3-Spades with 3-No Trumps as a new-suit request.

From that point, the result depended on what South did. At Table 1, where clubs were never called, North decided to put South in the lead so the latter could decide what suit to lead next. So North opened the spade 8, which the K won. Now having the lead, South could not beat the contract. He shifted to a diamond and the contract was a cinch.

Where South had bid clubs at Table 2, North led the club 3, so that two tricks there and one in spades beat the contract. At Table 3 the showing of the club fit caused South to overcall with 5-Spades eventually, a contract easy to make with the loss of only one trick in each red suit.

How should South play for 7-Diamonds after the spade J is led?

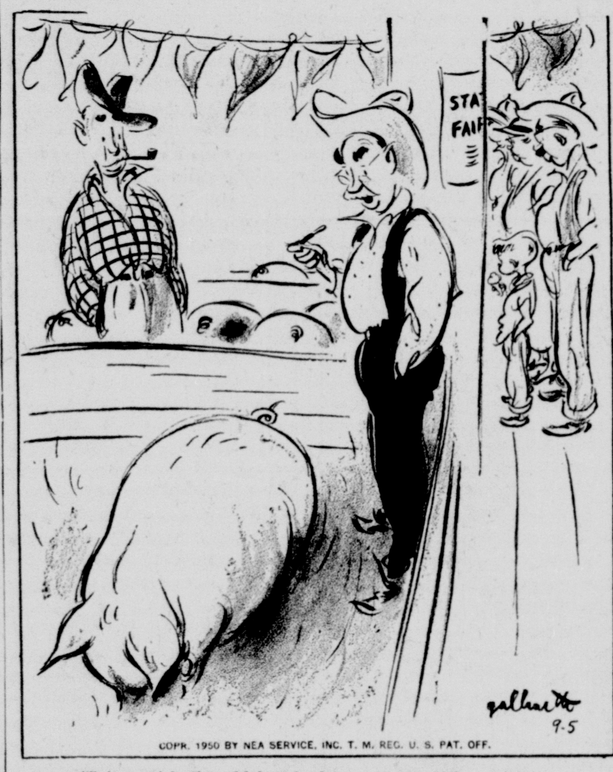
SIDE GLANCES — By Galbraith



"I just wish the old boy had more competitive spirit!"

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"After the summer I've been through, don't ever again let me hear you wishing the schoolhouse would burn down . . ."

Summer grit seems to delight in settling on your windowsills. But you won't have to scrub them so often if you wax them as part of your weekly cleaning, then dust them off with a flick of the mop the rest of the week.

To keep the glass in incandescent lamps from being fogged by the glowing filament, a small, but powerful, electromagnet is applied against one spot. This attracts all the particles, leaving the rest of the glass clear.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our husband and father, Lt. Edward L. Helmstetter, who died September 4th, 1949.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought his death so near.
Only those who have lost can tell,
The pain of parting without farewell.
He little thought when leaving home,
That he would never return,
That he so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss him,
Never shall his memory fade.
Loving thoughts shall ever wander,
To the spot where he is laid.
His Wife, Dorothy Helmstetter and Daughters, Nancy Lee and Diane

Calls Catholics To Fight Reds

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 3 (INS) — Pope Pius XII called on Catholics the world over today to join in a global fight against communism. The pontiff expressed certainty that "justice and law will prevail."

In a message addressed to the 74th German Catholic Congress, His Holiness urged Catholics "to have faith in this battle."

Enemy Hurled

West of this fighting, advance elements of a red force clambered up hill 501 — a bald, rugged mass of rock four and one-half miles northeast of Waegwan. U. S. Infantrymen regained most of the heights after a six hour fight.

Summing up the situation around Taegu, a First Cavalry spokesman said the reds now had been halted and "the next few hours will tell whether we can hold them or whether we will have to throw more in."

Railroad Investments

and go down when there are more sellers than buyers. Hence, purchasers of these cheap speculative railroad stocks may find themselves with good paper profits; but when they try to turn these paper profits into cash, it may be very difficult. If all speculators should attempt to do this at once, it would be impossible for any to cash in on their profits.

What About Street Railways?

Street railways and buses should profit from any war especially if the war leads to the rationing of gasoline, tires, etc., or to the curtailment of the sale of new automobiles. Street railway securities have not yet gone up in price as have railroad securities; in fact, in some instances, they are now selling for less than they have sold for many years. Although the market is thin for street railway securities, yet certain income bonds are worthy of consideration.

Mrs. Easton was making an effort to get to the other side of the highway to board a bus for the city. She had intended to go to Washington aboard a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad train to visit her daughter, Mrs. Goldia Gantt.

Matter Of Fact

fighting ability from that . . . There can be no doubt that these reductions have scaled down the fighting potentials of the armed services. It is absurd to contend that the more you reduce the stronger you get."

This, remember, is the very same speech which Johnson chose to quote in his own defense. This is the sort of thing which is leading those who have always credited Johnson with a certain shrewdness to suspect that he is really not very bright. But whether he is shrewd or not, John's past record is less important than what Johnson is doing today. And Johnson apparently believes it is shrewd to cooperate underground with the Republican attack on Secretary of State Acheson, in order to take the heat off himself.

He apparently also believes it is shrewd to preach on Capitol Hill the inevitability of general war, and to hint that the sooner the better. This is, of course, the only way he can possibly justify his demand for vast increases in military appropriations, when only a few months ago he was the chief exponent of the idea that a couple of billions more for the armed services would wreck the American economy. But this sort of talk measurably increases the chances of a war for which Johnson's own policies have left this country and its allies nakedly unprepared. If this is shrewdness, it is shrewdness of a sort which the country could certainly do without.

Hundreds Plan Outdoor Events As Holiday Ends

Area Highway Death Toll Rises To Six

Despite predictions of rather cloudy, humid weather with scattered thundershowers today, hundreds of Cumberlanders went ahead with plans for picnics and other outdoor activities to mark the close of the long Labor Day weekend.

Majority of the groves at Constitution Park have been reserved for family picnics today, according to Robert R. Golden, park superintendent.

Golden predicted only a "medium" day's business at the park today, however. He explained that most persons go out of town on long holiday weekends.

Yesterday's .02 inches of rain sent a number of pre-Labor Day picnickers scurrying home, but clearing weather later in the afternoon brought others to the park for picnic suppers, Golden said.

About 1,000 persons visited the park before the afternoon shower broke, he added.

Death Toll Rises

The highway death toll in this area has risen to six persons since motorists began jamming the roads Friday en route to vacation spots.

The latest fatality occurred yesterday, when Mrs. Virginia Pavey, 26, of Jarretsville, Md., was killed in an automobile accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike eight miles east of Somerset.

Authorities reported that the accident occurred on a single lane where repairs were being made. Mrs. Pavey lost control of the pickup truck she was driving and the truck overturned, pinning her beneath it.

Mrs. Pavey's husband, Robert, was treated at Somerset Hospital for lacerations of the hand and bruises about the body.

Two pedestrians, an elderly Braddock Farms woman and a 21-year-old man of Mann's Choice, Pa., were fatally injured in separate accidents Saturday.

On Friday, as the long holiday weekend began, a Garrett County man was killed when he leaped from a runaway truck in Frostburg, and a Flushing, N. Y., couple were killed when their car crashed into a tractor-trailer 11 miles west of Bedford on the Turnpike.

Meanwhile, State Police and transportation officials were bracing themselves for a peak in homeward bound travel tonight.

Rail, bus and airlines reported traffic was only slightly heavier than the average holiday increase.

Travel was heaviest to westbound points, they reported.

State Police said traffic was "very heavy" Saturday night but tapered off yesterday. Another peak is expected late this afternoon or tonight when motorists start their homeward trek.

46 Units To March

One of Cumberland's largest Labor Day parades will get underway this morning at 10:30, with 43 units in the line of march.

The parade will form at Laing Avenue and proceed to Baltimore Street via Virginia Avenue, Maryland Avenue, Williams Street; Park Street, Baltimore Street and then disband on South Mechanic Street.

A picnic and speaking will be held in the afternoon at Crystal Park with fireworks there at night.

L. L. Shinnamon Dies At Atlanta

Louis L. Shinnamon, 62, LaVale, father of Louis V. Shinnamon, Baltimore Street shoe store operator, died yesterday morning at the home of a daughter, Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga., where he had been visiting for the past week.

Mr. Shinnamon had been in failing health for the past year, and for about three months past had been residing with his son here. He was a native and lifelong resident of Maryland and his home was at Catonsville.

He had been employed for a number of years in the Income Tax division of the Internal Revenue Department, working through this area. He was well known throughout Western Maryland and vicinity. He officially retired shortly after the close of World War II.

Mr. Shinnamon was married to the late Hallie A. Wrightson Shinnamon, who died about five years ago. He was a life member of Howard Lodge No. 101, AF and A Masons, Elkridge, Md., and the Catonsville Methodist Church.

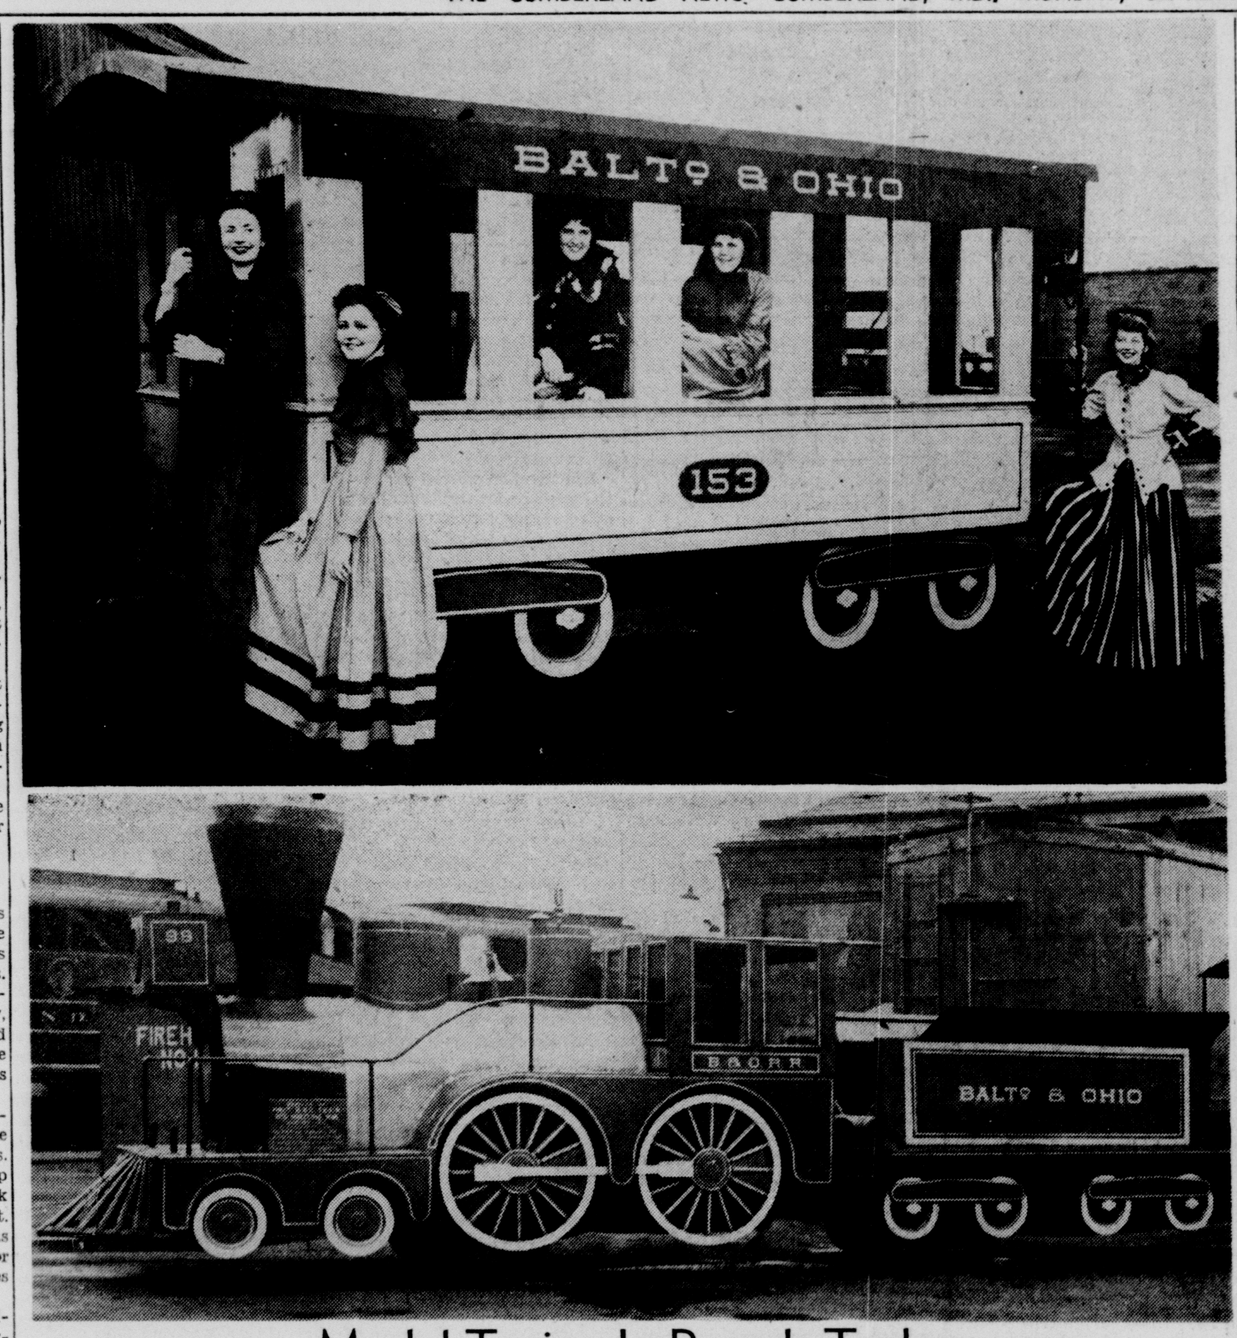
Surviving are five children: Louis V. Shinnamon, LaVale; Major Charles W. Shinnamon, San Bernadino, Calif.; Francis A. Shinnamon and Hallie Gale Shinnamon, Catonsville; and Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga.

The body will be taken today to Mitchell Funeral Home, 1900 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, where funeral services will be held Wednesday.

Derry To Give Organ Recital In Midland

The Midland Methodist Church is featuring an organ recital Tuesday at 8:15 p. m., by Prof. Joseph L. Derry, A. B.

The recital will be given on the new Wurlitzer Organ. It will be a complete demonstration on the two manual instruments. There will be no admission and everyone is invited to attend.



Model Trains In Parade Today

Former Lonaconing Coal Miner Credited With Naming Labor Day

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

A former Allegany County resident, a Lonaconing coal miner of the nineteenth century, is credited by some historians as being the man who proposed and named Labor Day.

According to available records, Robert Price, known as "Shouting Bob" Price, a native of near Aberystwith, Wales, July 16, 1833, worked in the Jackson Mine near Lonaconing for about 16 years.

He acquired his nickname from friends because he often was heard to shout "Amen" in church while the preacher delivered his sermon or offered prayer.

Price left school at the age of eight years to work with his father in a coal mine in his native country. When he was 31, he migrated to the United States and worked in the Pennsylvania coal fields for eight years, after which he became an "under boss" at the Lonaconing operation.

Leaving the Georges Creek Region, he went to Idaho and later went to Kansas. Records show he was 69 when he moved to Montana, and he died in his humble home on the outskirts of Helena, Mont. He was about 77 when he died. His funeral was reported "poorly attended and unceremonious."

For a time in his life, "Shouting Bob" was reported as "friendly with capital" and often helped avert trouble among the miners he worked with in Wales. However, when he was about 25, he had an experience which changed his ideas completely.

He was returning from a mine one day, when he found his "buddie," a young lad of about 17, lying on the ground and bleeding from the mouth and nose. His clothing was torn. Price picked up the lad, carried him two miles to his home, and sent for a doctor. But the boy died.

As he was dying, he told Price that the boss had beaten him for cutting the room too wide and asked, "Robert, are you one of us now?"

It is reported that ever after that Bob Price was a "fighting labor man and leader."

While in Lonaconing, Price was a member of Local Assembly No. 848 of the Knights of Labor. The grand master of the order was a labor leader named Powderly who had built up a strong organization.

Nearly all the miners in the Georges Creek Region, because of the efforts of "Shouting Bob" and others, were members when the Knights of Labor called a convention in New York in 1882. Price was named a delegate.

During the convention, the large and strong typographical union members staged a parade and the convention adjourned to witness it.

A short time later, during a lull in the convention proceedings, the record states: "Price arose. Tall, well formed and in the full flush of manhood. He stood erect and leaned far over the balcony. He caught the eye of Grand Master Powderly. He began to speak. All who recall his address on that day remember the enthusiasm it evoked.

"At the close of his address, which was filled with bursts of oratory and carried the hearers' thoughts of organization to what was then supposed to be unattainable heights, he stopped for a moment, and then said:—

"I move you Mr. Chairman, that it be the unanimous decision of this convention that hereafter one day of the year shall be set aside and on that day labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

"Shouting Bob" Price sat down and the cheering which followed his remarks made the building rock as a thousand labor men sprang to their feet in ovation.

"When order was restored, Powderly turned toward Price and asked, 'And what do you intend to call that day?'

"Without a moment's hesitation, Price jumped to his feet and shouted, 'Labor Day.'

"Again all semblence of order was destroyed and the meeting came to a sudden end. In 1884, the Knights of Labor again met in convention in New York and held a gigantic parade to mark Labor Day.

Colorado was the first state to make the first Monday in September a legal holiday in 1887. Labor Day was observed throughout the United States in 1909, except in Arizona and North Dakota.

This year, Labor Day is being observed in all states of the United States, in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Canal Zone, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Today is the day "Shouting Bob" Price declared, "Labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

Deaths

BETTY JANE HESS

A private service was held yesterday afternoon at the George Funeral Home for Betty Jane Hess, 16, LaVale, who died Friday night in Allegany Hospital after being stricken with polio.

Rev. W. W. Patterson, pastor of LaVale Methodist Church, officiated and interment was in Hillcrest Burial Park.

Pallbearers were Robert C. Morris, Thomas Smith, Edwin Cupler, Russell Hendrickson, Ford Lee and William Welsh.

The death is the first infantile paralysis fatality in Cumberland and vicinity since 1947 when several deaths occurred as a result of the disease. Only a few mild cases were reported in 1948 and 1949 but six other cases have been recorded so far this year. All except one, now being treated in Baltimore, are reported to be mild.

The girl was a student at Allegany High School and would have been a member of the junior class this year. She became ill Wednesday and had been treated at home until Friday morning when admitted to the hospital.

The girl's illness was diagnosed Friday morning as polio and the Health Department received a report of the case at 1 p. m.

Her physician said it was planned to take her to Baltimore for treatment at Children's Hospital. A portable lung of the Cumberland Police Department was available for use during the ambulance trip to the hospital.

She was born in Galeton, Pa., a daughter of Edgar and Hulda (Ingraham) Hess. A sister, Ida Belle Hess, also survives.

29th Division Assn. Urges UMT

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3. (AP)—The 29th Division Association urged the adoption of universal military training and opposed the seating of a communist China delegation in the United Nations, in resolutions adopted today.

Charles R. Bryan, Staunton, Va., was a nominating committee's choice for national commander. The slate proposed by the committee was unopposed for election tomorrow.

A resolution approving a proposed $100,000,000 American Loan to Spain was tabled without being brought to a vote. Delegates expressed the opinion that the matter should be left to the discretion of Congress.

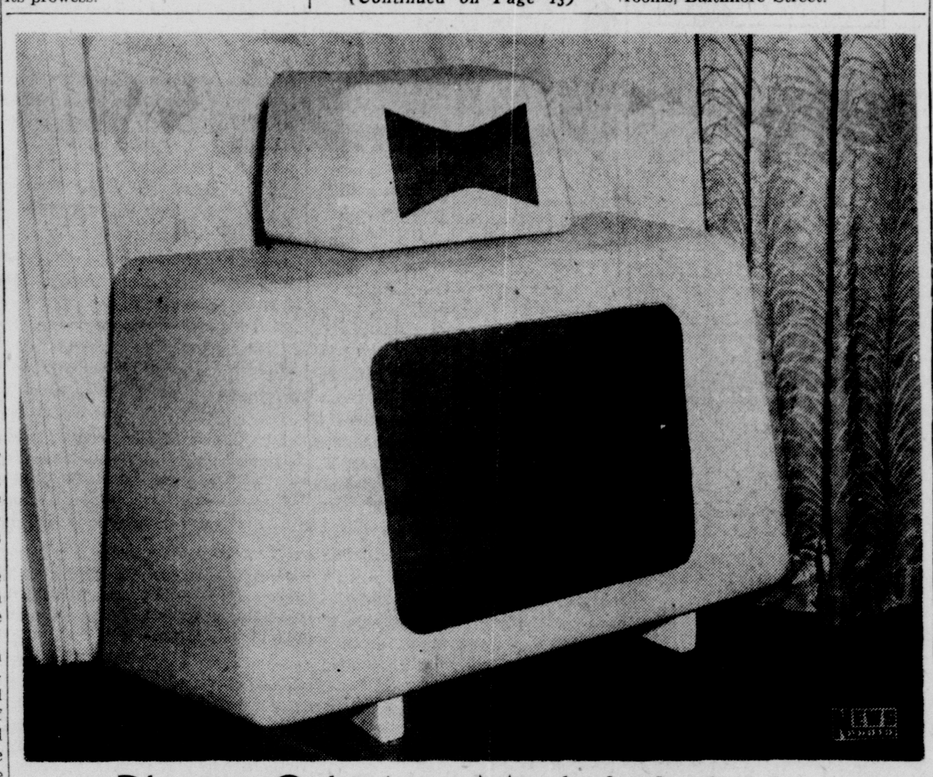
Another resolution urging approval of Maryland's anti-subversive Ober law also was adopted. The law will be the subject of a referendum at the November election in Maryland.

Delegates also voted for establishment of a permanent national headquarters to be located in Washington, and employment of a permanent administrative clerk there.

Previously, national headquarters was located each year in the home town of the current national commander.

Local Briefs

Secretary Lee Fuller of the Cumberland Outdoor Club has announced that the club will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. instead of today. The meeting will be held in the club rooms, Baltimore Street.



Plastic Cabinets Made In Lab Here

A. Derr Golladay, local designer and engineer, who has been experimenting with chemically cured plastic compounds which can be molded without presses or ovens, has built these two sound cabinets in his laboratory here. He says they definitely prove that his plastic compounds can be molded in any size without use of presses, and the combination of the two cabinets, the large and small, provides eight times the tone range on any existing amplification system in radio or record changer, and twice the range of those used in theaters.

Golladay Molds Large Plastic Sound Cabinets

Experiment Proves New Idea Practical

Experimenting for several months with self-curing or chemically-curing plastic compounds, A. Derr Golladay, Washington Street, has completed two cabinets that he terms the largest plastic items ever molded without use of expensive molds or presses.

Being an aeronautical engineer, Golladay first started experimenting with plastics because he believed that it would be practical and very cheap to mold a complete airplane in a single or perhaps in two or three separate units. Unable to establish a plant of sufficient size to permit him to build molds and make his plane, he has proceeded to work in his laboratory on these cabinets.

His latest experiment, he explained, served a two-fold purpose. He has been able to show without any question that low pressure molding of chemically cured plastic in large items is practical and cheap, and also has been able to produce an amplification cabinet which he says surpasses in quality anything marketed today.

Wider Tone Range

Golladay explains that the loud speaker cabinets molded from plastic give about eight times the tone range of the usual radio or record player. It is also about twice the range of the best motion picture film sound track, he declares.

The cabinets as designed and molded and the power of the sound system will more than handle the largest theatres in this area free from distortion, he said. Used in the home with a good FM receiver and amplifier it will reproduce a radio program exactly as if the listener were in the studio, since the hearing range is not restricted by any distortion whatever.

The largest speaker cabinet previously molded in plastic is with a television console measuring 34 by 18 by 18 and ¾ inches. This particular cabinet was molded under high pressure on a 2,500 ton press, Golladay claims.

His own cabinet, he explains, measures 43 by 25 by 20 inches, was molded free of pressure on very inexpensive molds.

The wall thickness of the cabinet is one and a half inches and is made of an inside and outside skin of fiberglas reinforced plastic, with sugar cane board laminated between. The inside is coated with spun fiberglas wool for sound insulation.

This construction, the designer explains, requires no curing ovens or heated molds as the resin mix he has developed is self-curing chemically. It results in a cabinet of one solid piece free of any vibration or parts to become unglued. It clearly demonstrates that this method of plastic molding is practical for doors, bath tubs, large pieces of furniture, automobile bodies and airplanes, he maintains.

Uses Two Cabinets

Golladay discovered in his experiments that a large cabinet could be designed to reproduce the deep tones or notes, and a smaller cabinet could be used to reproduce the higher pitched sounds. By a combination of the two, he has covered the whole range of the human ear without distortion.

He explains that with a good record player with variable reluctance cartridges, recorded music can be reproduced with maximum lifelikeness. The radio and record player are mounted in a chairside cabinet for convenience, with the speaker cabinets at another location in the room. This provides greater listening enjoyment as it is not necessary to sit next to the radio to get the tone or volume or selectivity desired.

The separate cabinet for each speaker is practical, he believes, so that the high frequency one can be moved around easily. The low tones flood the room regardless of cabinet position, but the high notes, to be heard, must come from the smaller cabinet aimed directly at the listener. These high sounds come out of any speaker like a fan-shaped light beam, Golladay explains.

The smaller speaker is merely a fiberglas reinforced plastic shell also chemically cured in an inexpensive mold.

Golladay said there is a possibility that a small radio manufacturing plant could be set up. Manufacturers already have been lined up to produce the top quality radio and amplifier chassis to his specifications, he explains, as well as record changers and other electronic equipment needed.

To set up a plant, he would need space for molding the cabinets and assembling the radios. He said the plant might also manufacture a few electronic devices which are not yet obtainable in sufficient quality.

The local market would not be great for such a high quality sound system, Golladay acknowledges, but largely populated sections such as New York offer many sales possibilities. He said he already has several requests from well established firms in that area to handle the sales of all the cabinets and radios he can manufacture.

Mountain District Legion To Meet

A meeting of all post commanders of Mountain District American Legion, and district executive committeemen will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Farrady Post No. 24 Legion home, Frostburg.

Russell C. Paupe, commander said recommendations for state department and district committee appointments will be made at the meeting.

The Weather

Yesterday's uncertain weather and high temperatures were not overly favorable for weekend vacationers, but many took advantage of the brief periods of sunshine. The highest temperature at Constitution Park was 76 with a low of 68. Downtown temperatures ran just a little higher, with an 82 high and a 71 low. Last night was one for good sleeping which was used to advantage by many late sleepers on this Labor Day morning. Today might be similar to yesterday—cloudy, warm, and humid, with possible thundershowers in the afternoon.

Carl W. Smith Is Found Dead

Carl William Smith, 43, this city, was found dead about 9 a.m. yesterday in his room at the Windsor Hotel, Baltimore and George Streets, and police said he died from a cerebral hemorrhage due to a self inflicted injury with a .22 caliber, single shot rifle.

Thomas Mullaney, co-owner of the hotel, found the body and immediately called police. Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer James Snyder investigated.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy medical examiner in Allegany County, was summoned and pronounced Smith dead, estimating that death had occurred eight hours previously. Dr. Deming called it suicide.

Formerly employed at Lou's Auto Stores, Smith was unemployed at the time of his death, police said, adding that he had been separated from his wife for about three weeks. He had been staying at the Windsor since August 14.

Smith, who was born February 1, 1907, was a son of Lawrence Edward Smith, 1120 Shade's Lane, and the late Emiley Lauterbach Smith.

He left a note to his wife directing her to dispose of his personal belongings.

He was a member of the Lutheran Church.

Also surviving, besides his father, are two brothers, J. Edward and Robert L. Smith, Cumberland; and three sisters, Mrs. Clifford O. Albright, Ellerslie; and Mrs. Thomas Mears and Mrs. James C. McGee, both of this city.

The body will remain at the George Funeral Home.

How Can It Be Done, Asks Lane

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Governor Lane asked George P. Mahoney today to "stop waving those vague millions about" and say how he would cut state expenditures.

Lane and Mahoney are rivals for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Lane said in a statement that Mahoney hasn't said how he would cut millions from the state budget because "he wouldn't dare do it."

"It cannot be done," the Governor said, "unless the people of this state want the school system to collapse into a shambles, the road system to go to pot, and our hospitals to deteriorate into pest houses."

The Governor said Mahoney "refuses to give the public a single specific idea where these 'millions and millions' are going to be found." He added:

"George P. Mahoney wouldn't dare to tell the people of Maryland that he proposed to cut so many millions from the schools; so many millions from the hospital appropriations; so many millions from the road appropriations; so many millions from the salaries of teachers, doctors, nurses, hospital attendants and other state employes; so many millions from the overall public-health program x x x or so many millions from the approximately $60,000,000 which the state this year will collect and turn over to Baltimore City, the towns and counties.

"These are the only programs from which millions could be cut—and it is time for Mr. Mahoney to say where he would cut, or stop waving these vague millions about, trying to confuse and mislead the people."

Birth Announcements

Memorial Hospital reported the following births over the weekend:

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth M. Emerick, Hyndman, Pa., a daughter yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Orndorff, 125 West Oldtown Road, a son Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mulvey, 200 Grand Avenue, a son Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil L. Abe, 507 Greenway Avenue, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Thrasher, 10 East Oldtown Road, a daughter Saturday.

Births reported at Allegany Hospital follow:

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver G. Lewis, 90 Armstrong Street, Frostburg, a son yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kenney, 317 South Waverly Terrace, a son Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Smith, Hyndman, Pa., a daughter Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Baldacchino, a son August 26 at Allegany Hospital. Mrs. Baldacchino is the former Miss Sarah McIntyre, R. N., daughter of Mrs. Sarah McIntyre, Kitzmiller. Dr. Baldacchino is serving with the Coast Guard in the Pacific.

School Lunch Institute Is Set Tomorrow

105 Employes To Attend Session

An institute for all employes of the county school lunch program will be held Tuesday at West Side School.

This was announced last night by William P. Cooper, director of the school lunch program for the Allegany County Board of Education.

Arrangements for the "cooks' institute" were made by Mrs. Gladys M. Eaton, supervisor of the school lunch program.

The institute will open at 9:30 a. m. with a brief talk by Dr. Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools.

Starting at 9:45, Stanley C. Rolfness, food preservation specialist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, will give an hour's illustrated lecture on "Food Care and Storage."

Mrs. Eaton will evaluate the 1949-50 school lunch program in the county. She also will discuss menus, marketing, orders, inventory and in-service training.

Cooper will give the concluding talk, outlining school lunch policies for the coming school year.

The director said last night that all 105 school lunch employes will attend the institute.

The program covers all public schools in the county. Lunches are served at 35 schools and are taken in thermos containers to five others where kitchen facilities are not available.

Last year, Cooper said, about 10,000 children were fed daily under the program. During the school year a total of 1,720,000 lunches were served, he added.

Mahoney Attacks Lane's Campaign

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—George P. Mahoney said today he may "have no alternative but to reveal some of the shocking incidents concerning Mr. Lane that have been brought to my attention during my travels throughout the state."

Mahoney and Governor Lane are rivals for the Democratic nomination for governor in the forthcoming primary election.

Mahoney said in a statement today that "Mr. Lane has been very busy with his highly paid state staff searching my private life from my boyhood on."

"I do not have time to waste looking into Mr. Lane's personal life," he continued. "There are many more important matters that I feel the people of the state are entitled to know about Mr. Lane's administrative record.

"However, if Mr. Lane continues to waste taxpayers time with personal attacks on me, I will have no alternative but to reveal some of the shocking incidents concerning Mr. Lane that have been brought to my attention during my travels throughout the state."

Mahoney said that throughout the campaign he had confined himself to facts and figures, but that Lane had not.

"A candidate in a political contest should be judged on his record," Mahony said. "I have made no personal attacks on Mr. Lane. I have not invaded his personal life or alluded to his personality defects. I have not wasted time in this sort of nazi smear tactic. I have been too busy pointing out to the voters of our state the course they must follow to escape the scourge of mounting taxation and debt."

Young Frostburg Soldier Missing

A young Frostburg soldier has been reported missing in action in Korea, less than one month after going overseas.

He is Pfc. James William Rafferty, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Rafferty, 144 McCulloh Street.

The parents were notified yesterday by the Department of Defense that Pfc. Rafferty has been missing since August 16.

A graduate of St. Michael's Parochial School, Pfc. Rafferty attended Beall High School before entering the Army a year and a half ago.

He received basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., and was transferred to Fort Lewis, Wash., before going overseas July 24.

Pfc. Rafferty visited his parents in Frostburg on a short furlough about two weeks before he was assigned to duty in Korea.

Tomorrow Is County Registration Day

Citizens who are not registered to vote in Allegany County may do so tomorrow at their neighborhood polling places from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

There are 78 registration places in the county's 35 election districts.

Registration tomorrow will make voters eligible to vote in the Primary election September 18, and General Election November 7.

In recent weeks, about 5,000 names were stricken from the books, many for failure to vote. These people have been notified by mail, and should re-register tomorrow. New voters, those just 21, or those past 21 who have never registered may also enroll tomorrow. Those desiring transportation to register should call 456.

Weather Forecast
Warm and humid with scattered showers today.

REDS RENEW NORTHERN OFFENSIVE

Fears Attack By Red-Backed Ho Chi Minh

Assault Expected About October 1

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3. (AP)—The United States was reported today to be speeding its arms aid to Indochina in the expectation of a new crisis within a few weeks in that sector of the Asiatic front.

Reports from American and French sources forecast, officials said, that Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh is getting ready to launch a long-prepared offensive against the French and Allied Vietnam forces by October 1 or soon thereafter.

By that date weather conditions, which currently are balking any Chinese communist invasion of Formosa, are expected to become favorable for a renewal of large-scale fighting in Indochina.

Ho, according to State Department and Pentagon advices, is being heavily reinforced by his Chinese backers for what his Viet Minh radio has proclaimed as a decisive "conquer offensive" against the "imperialists."

To help meet the threat, the U. S. already has poured a substantial stream of arms and military supplies into the country which many consider the key to all Southeast Asia. Further shipments are en route. Still to go, it is reported, are numerous Naval landing craft which are being reconditioned at Mare Island, Cal., and in the Puget Sound area, with crews in training to sail them across the Pacific.

Arms reported already delivered include weapons and equipment for a dozen newly formed Vietnam combat battalions, and ammunition and supplies for the French Metropolitan forces which have been fighting Ho's guerrillas four years. Included also are transport planes which the French rate highly useful for shifting troops and supplies in the Tonkin area, facing the China frontier, and along the long Indochina coastline.

Ho is credited with an effective fighting force of around 150,000 men. That is about the size of the combined French and Vietnam forces. American authorities—with a stress on one big "if"—say they believe the odds favor checkmating Ho.

The uncertainty is the same as that which beclouds U. N. prospects in Korea. This is whether communist China joins in with a full-dress invasion by its veteran armies.

Holiday's Death Toll Reaches 198

Rate Is Behind Council Figures

[By The Associated Press]

Accidents killed at least 198 persons in the Labor Day weekend by early Sunday night — more than half way through the three-day holiday period.

But the rate was running slightly behind the National Safety Council's prediction.

Traffic accidents claimed 156 lives; 14 persons drowned and 28 died in miscellaneous mishaps.

The Safety Council forecast a traffic death toll of 435 for the holiday period from 6 p.m. (Local Time) Friday to Monday midnight. The prediction was based on expected movement of 36,000,000 cars throughout the nation during the weekend.

Four persons were killed and four injured near Hopkinsville, Ky., when two automobiles collided head-on at the top of a hill. Three of the dead and all four of the injured were members of one family.

Nine died Saturday in a suburban electric train crash near Milwaukee.

Four auto fatalities resulted from two separate crashes in which law enforcement officials were pursuing cars. At Phenix City, Ala., a fleeing robber killed himself and the driver of another car in a collision. And in California, two persons were killed when their car was hit by another in which two youths were fleeing a deputy sheriff at 80 miles an hour.

The deaths by states, with motor vehicle traffic listed first, drownings second, and miscellaneous third:

U. S. Labor Can Meet Defense Need, Tobin Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Secretary of Labor Tobin said today the nation has untapped sources of manpower and the ingenuity to meet any labor demands for defense.

Tobin, in an interview on the Columbia Broadcasting System, said there are many factors which would offset the comparatively small number of unemployed.

Last week, the Census Bureau reported a record 62,000,000 persons in the work force, and fewer than 3,000,000 unemployed.

There were 8,000,000 unemployed in 1940, Tobin said, when President Roosevelt was stepping up the defense program in World War II.

But Tobin said:

The work force now is not only larger but "much better-trained, a great deal more capable and skillful." The nation has more and better factories and equipment to produce military goods than in 1940.

The total labor force could be raised far above the World War II peak because the population has increased by 20,000,000 in the past decade.

There are "many untapped sources left for us to reach." Older workers will return to jobs "impelled by patriotic motives." Several million women war workers likewise "will be glad to return if they feel their country needs them."

The average work week now is slightly over 40 hours, but "American workers will be willing to work much longer hours in order to bring about the production which is necessary to have our country adequately and properly defended."

Tobin cautioned against drafting skilled workers unless the armed forces are prepared to use their skills. There are 48 critical skills in short supply now, he said, and "we should make absolutely sure that people in those critical skills x x x are used in their skills whether they be professional or whether they be craftsmen."

Tobin expressed confidence that American ingenuity will solve any kind of manpower problem "that our country might meet in the years that lie ahead."

Commies Cooled Off

Communists demonstrating before City Hall in West Berlin scatter under a water barrage from a high pressure water hose on police truck after they turned the water on to disperse angry, shouting demonstrators — Germans who live in West Berlin but work in East Berlin — who were protesting a recent western order which banned their exchanging east mark earnings for west marks.

Johnson Blamed For Resignation Of Forrestal

Accused Of Spreading Gossip, Criticism

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rep. Tauriello (D-NY) said today he hears that Secretary of Defense Johnson spread gossip and criticism about the late James Forrestal and forced him to resign as the first Defense Secretary.

Renewing his demand that Johnson quit, the Buffalo congressman made public a letter to the Cabinet officer which said:

"I am informed by reliable officials and newspaper correspondents that you contributed in no small way to the persecution of Mr. Forrestal.

"I understand you gathered and relayed gossip and information critical of Mr. Forrestal, and, in effect, forced his resignation."

(Forrestal, ill and under extreme nervous condition, resigned early last year and a few weeks later committed suicide.)

The congressman's letter was dated Friday. There was no immediate comment from Johnson.

Tauriello also implied that only patriotism kept General Omar Bradley from quitting as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff over Johnson's "attempts to dominate and dictate" to the chiefs. He wrote that such conduct was "common knowledge among high military officials" and has resulted in friction and confusion.

The congressman charged Johnson with "intrigue against the State Department" causing confusion at home and abroad. He accused the secretary of failing to co-operate with the National Security Resources Board, leading to conflicts over stockpiling war critical materials.

54 Girls Seek Coveted Title 'Miss America'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 3 (AP) — Fifty-four gorgeous girls begin a cloistered week today, each with her eye on the nation's most coveted beauty title — Miss America.

For the winner there is a $5,000 scholarship, a new automobile, several modelling and acting contracts, and an opportunity to earn something like $50,000 in the next year.

The girls range in age from 18 to 24 and come in all sizes. Brunettes dominate this year's crop.

Mundt, Kilgore Differ On Reds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Charges of "police state" tactics were hurled today between Senator Mundt (R-SD) and Senator Kilgore (D-WVa) over their sharply differing plans for dealing with homefront communists.

Mundt is one of the architects of a section of a sweeping omnibus anti-subversives bill which would require registration of communist political and front organizations. Kilgore says interning reds in time of national emergency would work better.

The omnibus measure, on which the Senate will start debate Tuesday, was put together by Chairman McCarran (D-Nev) of the Senate Judiciary Committee from five separate Senate and House bills. It goes far a field from proposals advanced by President Truman for internal security.

Kilgore wants to rip out the registration section. He and other senators are trying to work out a plan to replace it with authority to throw known communists into internment camps when the President and Congress declare a national emergency.

Labor Renews Fight Against Communism, Taft-Hartley

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Leaders of labor today dedicated the mid-century Labor Day to two common aims: (1) To beat off Communist aggression anywhere and (2) to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act at home.

Key messages were issued by AFL President William Green, leader of 8,000,000 union members, and CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray's organization has just finished an anti-red purge which cost it 11 unions and about a sixth of the CIO's 6,000,000 members. The operation was planned by Murray and his associates last Labor Day.

In his message today, Murray said:

"The American people, who had hoped to live at peace with themselves and with the world, are confronted by a new threat of world war. The threat comes from the masters of communist world strategy. x x x

The workers of America want a peaceful world, in which men and women may work to improve their living standards, their democratic institutions, their personal good and welfare. These are precious goals, and we will strive for their achievement."

Murray added: "Let no man think he can take advantage of our national crisis to weaken our unions or to rob our people of hard-won gains."

At the half-way mark in the 20th Century, both Murray and Green urged active political roles for their union adherents, and declared it to be their prime political aim to elect a Congress which would wipe out the Taft-Hartley act.

Said Green:

"I am convinced that prompt repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act should stand as the number one item on our national defense program. It would revitalize the workers of this country, inspire them as no other action could, to pitch in and do the tremendous job that lies ahead of them."

U.S. Officer Escapes From North Koreans

By STAN SWINTON

ON THE MASAN FRONT, Korea, Sept. 3 (AP) — A 23-year-old West Pointer escaped today after two days in the hands of North Koreans. He said that the reds, contrary to their propaganda claims, treat American negro prisoners "with contempt."

Second Lt. Billy, J. Rountree, Victoria, Tex., a white officer who commanded a negro infantry platoon said that while the red Koreans treated him as an equal, "they would not even let the colored boys talk to each other. When they started to the reds would make them shut up. They were not brutal toward them—they just treated them with contempt."

Rountree returned after a fabulous adventure. Twice the North Koreans made him and several negro prisoners accompany them on attacks. Once an American bullet grazed his chin.

His is one of the most intimate accounts yet of how the North Koreans fight.

"They were confident of victory and said they held all American soldiers in contempt," said Rountree.

"They had no non-commissioned officers in the group that held us most of the time. They would hold a roundtable discussion whenever a big decision had to be made. But when it came time to attack they made up in boldness what they lacked in organization."

Rountree and some of his men were captured when a platoon on his flank retreated. A band of 150 North Koreans grabbed him. They passed him on to a patrol of eight men, three of them wounded.

"One told me, 'I consider you a friend, not a prisoner.' From what I hear such things rarely happen but the reds did not mistreat us. One took my boots and gave me a pair of ballet slippers he was wearing. They did not fit so another gave me some shoes that did.

"They lived off the food in the fields—corn, pears and squash. They shared their food with us. They were cut off but they did not threaten to kill us.

"The communists seemed not to know about the United Nations. They had only heard about the Americans. They kept asking why we were in Korea—they did not know about the background of this war," said the young 25th Division officer.

Two Jet Pilots Die In Crash

MARIETTA, Ga., Sept. 3 (AP)—Two jet pilots were killed today when their National Guard planes collided at terrific speed.

The planes—F-84 Thunderjets — were part of a four-plane formation on a training flight from Dobbins Air Force Base. Maj. Walter M. Armistead, operations officer, said they crashed 25,000 feet up at more than 500 miles an hour.

Hurricane Heads Up Gulf Coast Of Fla.

Winds Near Center Speed To 85 Miles

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 3 (AP)—A small hurricane swept over the Florida Keys, then headed up the gulf coast of Florida late today, gathering some strength as it went.

Winds near the storm center increased to 85 miles an hour.

Strong gales spread out as much as 150 miles eastward. At Miami, gusts hit 65 miles an hour.

At 4 p. m. (EST), the weather bureau reported the center was about 85 miles south-southwest of Fort Myers, the palm-lined resort where Thomas A. Edison had his winter home.

Gulf Coast hurricane warnings were hoisted north to Tarpon Springs, 15 miles north of Tampa.

The hurricane was a tricky performer. Last night it sprinted across Cuba at 20 to 24 miles an hour after remaining almost stationary for two days. It whirled past Key West at 10 a. m., leaving scant damage in its wake.

Grounds Navy Barge

Its winds toppled trees, tore down wires, littered streets with shredded shrubbery, and blew a Navy barge aground but wreaked no structural damage at Key West. A steamship, the Gulfshore, in the Florida Straits east of Key West, reported it was struck by winds of full hurricane force—75 miles an hour—as the storm moved by.

The "baby" storm was described by Grady Norton, chief forecaster at the Miami Weather Bureau, as a "stop and go, ebb and flow" type of disturbance.

It spawned two days ago out of a blacklash of another hurricane which moved inland over northwest Florida and Alabama Wednesday night. Once born, the hurricane virtually sat in one place with winds spinning around its center. It was within 100 miles of its birthplace when it developed sudden agility and jumped 200 miles in 10 hours, crossing Cuba without causing damage or casualties.

As this infant storm gyrated, a giant hurricance crept northwestward at a snail's pace 1,000 miles east-southeast of Florida. This great storm, ranking with the mighty blows of the past quarter century, hurled its 160-mile winds against the open sea, but nobody quite knew where it might head next.

Thousands Made Homeless

In its wake the British West Indies Island of Antigua surveyed damage it caused there. A belated report from Pan American Airway's base at St. Johns, capital of Antigua, reported thousands homeless, $1,000,000 damage, every boat on the island sunk or driven ashore, food stocks damaged, warehouses destroyed and communications ruined. Two casualties were reported but it was not specified if they were fatal.

Closer at hand, the oil tanker Texas Trader was shaking clear of a fearful beating it took last night from the great storm's 160-mile winds north of Puerto Rico. The ship reported early today that it was edging out of the hurricane and winds had dropped to about 70 miles an hour.

No emergency was reported by the vessel.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—Discoveries that may lead to an electrical defense against virus diseases were announced tonight to the American Chemical Society.

This defense would be to set up an electrical blockade in human bodies against invading viruses. Or else to hit the viruses with an electrical counterattack.

It is based on evidence for a theory that viruses must have electric charges to hook onto living cells. And that the cells can be made immune by giving them the right kind of electrical defense.

These findings were described by Dr Theodore T. Puck, biophysicist of the University of Colorado Medical Center, Denver. His report was made public on the eve of the Chemical Society's 118th national meeting, which 10,000 chemists are expected to attend.

Viruses are tiny disease agents that cause many different sicknesses, including polio, influenza, yellow fever, measles and mumps. A virus is harmless until it penetrates the kind of living cell that it attacks. Then it multiplies rapidly and sickens or kills the cell.

GOP Holds Offense In Nov. Voting

Gains Ground As Result Of Korea

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—With two months of political campaigning to go before the November congressional elections, Republicans appeared today to have gained the offensive as an outgrowth of the Korean War.

Two months ago the Democrats—operating in an atmosphere of general prosperity—were carrying the ball with President Truman's "fair deal" program.

With the exception of a lone counter-offensive based on charges that communists had infiltrated the government, the Republicans at that time generally were busy building defenses against the Brannan farm plan, against compulsory health insurance, against repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and against what they called "socialism."

The President's decision to send troops into Korea and the resulting early reverses for American arms changed all of that. The Republicans' somewhat limited offensive against communists at home was swallowed up in an over-all assault on what the GOP labels as administration "bungling" in far eastern affairs.

The Republican chorus has grown so loud that Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, found it necessary recently to devote almost all of a 15 minute broadcast to Illinois voters explaining that, far from bungling, President Truman had "saved our civilization" by his Korean decision.

At about the time Lucas was recording this broadcast, Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio) was putting into words in a House speech:

"Is the Truman Administration competent to either attain peace or prepare for war?"

His answer, of course, was that the administration is not.

Assassination Plot On Envoy Heath Revealed

SAIGON, Indochina, Sept. 3 (AP)—An assassination plot by Vietminh terrorists against Donald R. Heath, United States Minister to Indochina, was disclosed today by an American Legation spokesman.

French authorities warned Heath last night that police had information Heath's name was high on an assassination list of the communist-led Vietminh regime of Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh.

As a result of the threat, Heath will be guarded by 12 United States marines, who arrived here last week. He normally had two bodyguards assigned to him by the French and Vietnamese police.

Heath has been a prime target for propaganda blasts by the Vietminh radio, which hammers against the American policy of military aid to Indochina. A fourth shipload of such aid was being unloaded today in Saigon's river port from the American Freighter Steel Voyager.

The Vietminh radio has unleashed its most virulent personal attacks against Heath because of his Bulgarian background. The former American minister in Bulgaria was ordered out of that country by the communist regime on charges of spying.

Enemy Hurled Back In Area Near Yongsan

Entire 120-Mile Front Is Afire

By MILTON MARMOR

TOKYO, Monday, Sept. 4 (AP) — Koreans reds, in a savage new offensive from the north, smashed within less than 10 miles of the hub city of Taegu Sunday and hammered hard at the extreme eastern and southern ends of the Korean defense front.

In the south-center, U. S. Marines and the Army Second Division counterattacked and hurled the enemy back three miles west and six miles south of Yongsan.

The entire 120-mile front, a zigzag but roughly rectangular line, was afire.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters summary early Monday said, however, that the reds' heavy assaults had everywhere failed to produce the weak spots they were seeking.

9 Divisions Identified

Nine red divisions, about 90,000 men, have been identified on the battlefront, and estimates are that possibly three others — making a total of 120,000 — are in action, with 30,000 more in reserve.

Opposing them, four U. S. Army divisions, a U. S. Marine brigade and five Korean Republican divisions have been identified.

As the flank of a Pacific typhoon lashed Korea with rain and lightning, this was the picture along the entire front:

Masan front in extreme south: Reds renewed attacks on U. S. 25th Division but made little or no progress in bloody fighting. Under orders to take Masan by Sunday, they remained nine miles west of their goal.

Southwest near Yongsan: Marines and U. S. Second Division counterattacked in efforts to erase communist bulge near confluence of Naktong and Nam Rivers. The reds had advanced eight and one-half miles eastward for their biggest gain of the southern offensive Friday and Saturday but the Americans recovered about half of it.

Northwest and North, Waegwan-Taegu sector: The reds uncorked a Sunday drive that gained three and one-half miles down the "bowling alley" stretch of the Tabu-Taegu highway. Forward patrols reached within 10 miles of Taegu before counterattacking First Cavalry infantrymen banged into the spearhead and halted it.

South Koreans Fall Back

East coast, around Pohang: South Koreans fell back several thousand yards before red hordes jumping off from Kigye, nine miles northwest of Pohang. The reds threatened the junction city of Kyongju on the Taegu-Pusan highway.

The main enemy effort appeared to be north of Taegu, key city in the Allied defense.

It was the Tabu-Taegu highway that became a graveyard of red armor in an eight-day battle that began Aug. 15. The communists lost 30 out of 40 tanks in a futile effort to smash down the road that U. S. soldiers dubbed "the bowling alley."

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported that the new attack towards Taegu opened Saturday evening with a 70-minute artillery barrage in which at least 2,000 shells were hurled at American lines.

Then the red machine began to move. Communist soldiers punched ahead three and one-half miles. Patrols infiltrated down both sides of the highway two miles south of Tabu but the town itself was still held by the First Cavalry. Americans counterattacked the advanced reds.

Drowning out the din of battle was an electrical rainstorm.

Crete's National Love Story Upset By Police

ATHENS, Sept. 3 (AP)—The story book lovers of Crete were separated today by a government move which may lead to renewal of a bloody mountain feud on that Mediterranean Island.

Athens police took Constantine Kephaloyannis, the dashing island Romeo, into custody on a warrent sworn out by Crete's public prosecutor charging him with kidnapping Tassoula Petracogeorgi.

The couple were married Friday in a remote Cretan monastery atop fabled Mount Ida 11 days after Constantine made off with 20-year-old, sultry-eyed Tassoula.

The impetuous, mustachioed lover said bad blood which has existed for generations between the Kephaloyannis and Petracogeorgis made a normal courtship impossible.

After the marriage the two young lovers flew to Athens to ask the blessing of Archbishop Spyridon of the Greek Orthodox Church. The bride spent Saturday night at the archbishop's residence and it was reported early today that he had blessed the union.

Later this was denied, but it is understood that the archbishop considered the marriage legal.

Tassoula was released from clerical chaperonage and rejoined her husband. She was with him when police picked him up on the kidnapping warrant this morning. After the arrest she took refuge with her husband's uncle instead of returning to her family.

"I love Costa and married him of my free will," the girl told newsmen yesterday. "My love developed as I was with him in the mountains. He is a proud, brave man. Above all his behavior and respect were beyond reproach."

REDS RENEW NORTHERN OFFENSIVE

U.S. Prepares For Crisis In Indochina

Fears Attack By Red-Backed Ho Chi Minh

Assault Expected About October 1

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3. (AP)—The United States was reported today to be speeding its arms aid to Indochina in the expectation of a new crisis within a few weeks in that sector of the Asiatic front.

Reports from American and French sources forecast, officials said, that Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh is getting ready to launch a long-prepared offensive against the French and Allied Vietnam forces by October 1 or soon thereafter.

By that date weather conditions, which currently are balking any Chinese communist invasion of Formosa, are expected to become favorable for a renewal of large-scale fighting in Indochina.

Ho, according to State Department and Pentagon advices, is being heavily reinforced by his Chinese backers for what his Viet Minh radio has proclaimed as a decisive "conquer offensive" against the "imperialists."

To help meet the threat, the U. S. already has poured a substantial stream of arms and military supplies into the country which many consider the key to all Southeast Asia. Further shipments are en route. Still to go, it is reported, are numerous Naval landing craft which are being reconditioned at Mare Island, Cal., and in the Puget Sound area, with crews in training to sail them across the Pacific.

Arms reported already delivered include weapons and equipment for a dozen newly formed Vietnam combat battalions, and ammunition and supplies for the French Metropolitan forces which have been fighting Ho's guerrillas four years. Included also are transport planes which the French rate highly useful for shifting troops and supplies in the Tonkin area, facing the China frontier, and along the long Indochina coastline.

Ho is credited with an effective fighting force of around 150,000 men. That is about the size of the combined French and Vietnam forces. American authorities—with a stress on one big "if"—say they believe the odds favor checkmating Ho.

The uncertainty is the same as that which beclouds U. N. prospects in Korea. This is whether communist China joins in with a full-dress invasion by its veteran armies.

Holiday's Death Toll Reaches 198

Rate Is Behind Council Figures

[By The Associated Press]

Accidents killed at least 198 persons in the Labor Day weekend by early Sunday night — more than half way through the three-day holiday period.

But the rate was running slightly behind the National Safety Council's prediction.

Traffic accidents claimed 156 lives; 14 persons drowned and 28 died in miscellaneous mishaps.

The Safety Council forecast a traffic death toll of 435 for the holiday period from 6 p.m. (Local Time) Friday to Monday midnight. The prediction was based on expected movement of 36,000,000 cars throughout the nation during the weekend.

Four persons were killed and four injured near Hopkinsville, Ky., when two automobiles collided head-on at the top of a hill. Three of the dead and all four of the injured were members of one family.

Nine died Saturday in a suburban electric train crash near Milwaukee.

Four auto fatalities resulted from two separate crashes in which law enforcement officials were pursuing cars. At Phenix City, Ala., a fleeing robber killed himself and the driver of another car in a collision. And in California, two persons were killed when their car was hit by another in which two youths were fleeing a deputy sheriff at 80 miles an hour.

The deaths by states, with motor vehicle traffic listed first, drownings second, and miscellaneous third:

U. S. Labor Can Meet Defense Need, Tobin Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Secretary of Labor Tobin said today the nation has untapped sources of manpower and the ingenuity to meet any labor demands for defense.

Tobin, in an interview on the Columbia Broadcasting System, said there are many factors which would offset the comparatively small number of unemployed.

Last week, the Census Bureau reported a record 62,000,000 persons in the work force, and fewer than 3,000,000 unemployed.

There were 8,000,000 unemployed in 1940, Tobin said, when President Roosevelt was stepping up the defense program in World War II.

But Tobin said:

The work force now is not only larger but "much better-trained, a great deal more capable and skillful." The nation has more and better factories and equipment to produce military goods than in 1940.

The total labor force could be raised far above the World War II peak because the population has increased by 20,000,000 in the past decade.

There are "many untapped sources left for us to reach." Older workers will return to jobs "impelled by patriotic motives." Several million women war workers likewise "will be glad to return if they feel their country needs them."

The average work week now is slightly over 40 hours, but "American workers will be willing to work much longer hours in order to bring about the production which is necessary to have our country adequately and properly defended."

Tobin cautioned against drafting skilled workers unless the armed forces are prepared to use their skills. There are 48 critical skills in short supply now, he said, and "we should make absolutely sure that people in those critical skills x x x are used in their skills whether they be professional or whether they be craftsmen."

Tobin expressed confidence that American ingenuity will solve any kind of manpower problem "that our country might meet in the years that lie ahead."

Commies Cooled Off

Communists demonstrating before City Hall in West Berlin scatter under a water barrage from a high pressure water hose on police truck after they turned the water on to disperse angry, shouting demonstrators — Germans who live in West Berlin but work in East Berlin — who were protesting a recent western order which banned their exchanging east mark earnings for west marks.

Johnson Blamed For Resignation Of Forrestal

Accused Of Spreading Gossip, Criticism

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rep. Tauriello (D-NY) said today he hears that Secretary of Defense Johnson spread gossip and criticism about the late James Forrestal and forced him to resign as the first Defense Secretary.

Renewing his demand that Johnson quit, the Buffalo congressman made public a letter to the Cabinet officer which said:

"I am informed by reliable officials and newspaper correspondents that you contributed in no small way to the persecution of Mr. Forrestal.

"I understand you gathered and relayed gossip and information critical of Mr. Forrestal, and, in effect, forced his resignation."

(Forrestal, ill and under extreme nervous condition, resigned early last year and a few weeks later committed suicide.)

The congressman's letter was dated Friday. There was no immediate comment from Johnson.

Tauriello also implied that only patriotism kept General Omar Bradley from quitting as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff over Johnson's "attempts to dominate and dictate" to the chiefs. He wrote that such conduct was "common knowledge among high military officials" and has resulted in friction and confusion.

The congressman charged Johnson with "intrigue against the State Department" causing confusion at home and abroad. He accused the secretary of failing to co-operate with the National Security Resources Board, leading to conflicts over stockpiling war critical materials.

54 Girls Seek Coveted Title 'Miss America'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 3 (AP) — Fifty-four gorgeous girls begin a cloistered week today, each with her eye on the nation's most coveted beauty title — Miss America.

For the winner there is a $5,000 scholarship, a new automobile, several modelling and acting contracts, and an opportunity to earn something like $50,000 in the next year.

The girls range in age from 18 to 24 and come in all sizes. Brunettes dominate this year's crop.

Mundt, Kilgore Differ On Reds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Charges of "police state" tactics were hurled today between Senator Mundt (R-SD) and Senator Kilgore (D-WVa) over their sharply differing plans for dealing with home-front communists.

Mundt is one of the architects of a section of a sweeping omnibus anti-subversives bill which would require registration of communist political and front organizations. Kilgore says interning reds in time of national emergency would work better.

The omnibus measure, on which the Senate will start debate Tuesday, was put together by Chairman McCarran (D-Nev) of the Senate Judiciary Committee from five separate Senate and House bills. It goes far a field from proposals advanced by President Truman for internal security.

Kilgore wants to rip out the registration section. He and other senators are trying to work out a plan to replace it with authority to throw known communists into internment camps when the President and Congress declare a national emergency.

Labor Renews Fight Against Communism, Taft-Hartley

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — Leaders of labor today dedicated the mid-century Labor Day to two common aims: (1) To beat off Communist aggression anywhere and (2) to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act at home.

Key messages were issued by AFL President William Green, leader of 8,000,000 union members, and CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray's organization has just finished an anti-red purge which cost it 11 unions and about a sixth of the CIO's 6,000,000 members. The operation was planned by Murray and his associates last Labor Day.

In his message today, Murray said:

"The American people, who had hoped to live at peace with themselves and with the world, are confronted by a new threat of world war. The threat comes from the masters of communist world strategy. x x x

The workers of America want a peaceful world, in which men and women may work to improve their living standards, their democratic institutions, their personal good and welfare. These are precious goals, and we will strive for their achievement."

Murray added: "Let no man think he can take advantage of our national crisis to weaken our unions or to rob our people of hard-won gains."

At the half-way mark in the 20th Century, both Murray and Green urged active political roles for their union adherents, and declared it to be their prime political aim to elect a Congress which would wipe out the Taft-Hartley act.

Said Green:

"I am convinced that prompt repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act should stand as the number one item on our national defense program. It would revitalize the workers of this country, inspire them as no other action could, to pitch in and do the tremendous job that lies ahead of them."

It spawned two days ago out of a blacklash of another hurricane which moved inland over northwest Florida and Alabama Wednesday night. Once born, the hurricane virtually sat in one place with winds spinning around its center. It was within 100 miles of its birthplace when it developed sudden agility and jumped 200 miles in 10 hours, crossing Cuba without causing damage or casualties.

As this infant storm gyrated, a giant hurricance crept northwestward at a snail's pace 1,000 miles east-southeast of Florida. This great storm, ranking with the mighty blows of the past quarter century, hurled its 160-mile winds against the open sea, but nobody quite knew where it might head next.

Thousands Made Homeless

In its wake the British West Indies Island of Antigua surveyed damage it caused there. A belated report from Pan American Airway's base at St. Johns, capital of Antigua, reported thousands homeless, $1,000,000 damage, every boat on the island sunk or driven ashore, food stocks damaged, warehouses destroyed and communications ruined. Two casualties were reported but it was not specified if they were fatal.

Closer at hand, the oil tanker Texas Trader was shaking clear of a fearful beating it took last night from the great storm's 160-mile winds north of Puerto Rico. The ship reported early today that it was edging out of the hurricane and winds had dropped to about 70 miles an hour.

No emergency was reported by the vessel.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—Discoveries that may lead to an electrical defense against virus diseases were announced tonight to the American Chemical Society.

This defense would be to set up an electrical blockade in human bodies against invading viruses. Or else to hit the viruses with an electrical counterattack.

It is based on evidence for a theory that viruses must have electric charges to hook onto living cells. And that the cells can be made immune by giving them the right kind of electrical defense.

These findings were described by Dr Theodore T. Puck, biophysicist of the University of Colorado Medical Center, Denver. His report was made public on the eve of the Chemical Society's 118th national meeting, which 10,000 chemists are expected to attend.

Viruses are tiny disease agents that cause many different sicknesses, including polio, influenza, yellow fever, measles and mumps. A virus is harmless until it penetrates the kind of living cell that it attacks. Then it multiplies rapidly and sickens or kills the cell.

GOP Holds Offense In Nov. Voting

Gains Ground As Result Of Korea

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—With two months of political campaigning to go before the November congressional elections, Republicans appeared today to have gained the offensive as an outgrowth of the Korean War.

Two months ago the Democrats—operating in an atmosphere of general prosperity—were carrying the ball with President Truman's "fair deal" program.

With the exception of a lone counter-offensive based on charges that communists had infiltrated the government, the Republicans at that time generally were busy building defenses against the Brannan farm plan, against compulsory health insurance, against repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and against what they called "socialism."

The President's decision to send troops into Korea and the resulting early reverses for American arms changed all of that. The Republicans' somewhat limited offensive against communists at home was swallowed up in an over-all assault on what the GOP labels as administration "bungling" in far eastern affairs.

The Republican chorus has grown so loud that Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, found it necessary recently to devote almost all of a 15 minute broadcast to Illinois voters explaining that, far from bungling, President Truman had "saved our civilization" by his Korean decision.

At about the time Lucas was recording this broadcast, Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio) was putting into words in a House speech:

"Is the Truman Administration competent to either attain peace or prepare for war?"

His answer, of course, was that the administration is not.

Assassination Plot On Envoy Heath Revealed

SAIGON, Indochina, Sept. 3 (AP)—An assassination plot by Vietminh terrorists against Donald R. Heath, United States Minister to Indochina, was disclosed today by an American Legation spokesman.

French authorities warned Heath last night that police had information Heath's name was high on an assassination list of the communist-led Vietminh regime of Moscow-Trained Ho Chi Minh.

As a result of the threat, Heath will be guarded by 12 United States marines, who arrived here last week. He normally had two bodyguards assigned to him by the French and Vietnamese police.

Heath has been a prime target for propaganda blasts by the Vietminh radio, which hammers against the American policy of military aid to Indochina. A fourth shipload of such aid was being unloaded today in Saigon's river port from the American Freighter Steel Voyager.

The Vietminh radio has unleashed its most virulent personal attacks against Heath because of his Bulgarian background. The former American minister in Bulgaria was ordered out of that country by the communist regime on charges of spying.

Enemy Hurled Back In Area Near Yongsan

Entire 120-Mile Front Is Afire

By MILTON MARMOR

TOKYO, Monday, Sept. 4 (AP) — Koreans reds, in a savage new offensive from the north, smashed within less than 10 miles of the hub city of Taegu Sunday and hammered hard at the extreme eastern and southern ends of the Korean defense front.

In the south-center, U. S. Marines and the Army Second Division counterattacked and hurled the enemy back three miles west and six miles south of Yongsan.

The entire 120-mile front, a zigzag but roughly rectangular line, was afire.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters summary early Monday said, however, that the reds' heavy assaults had everywhere failed to produce the weak spots they were seeking.

9 Divisions Identified

Nine red divisions, about 90,000 men, have been identified on the battlefront, and estimates are that possibly three others — making a total of 120,000 — are in action, with 30,000 more in reserve.

Opposing them, four U. S. Army divisions, a U. S. Marine brigade and five Korean Republican divisions have been identified.

As the flank of a Pacific typhoon lashed Korea with rain and lightning, this was the picture along the entire front:

Masan front in extreme south: Reds renewed attacks on U. S. 25th Division but made little or no progress in bloody fighting. Under orders to take Masan by Sunday, they remained nine miles west of their goal.

Southwest near Yongsan: Marines and U. S. Second Division counter-attacked in efforts to erase communist bulge near confluence of Naktong and Nam Rivers. The reds had advanced eight and one-half miles eastward for their biggest gain of the southern offensive Friday and Saturday but the Americans recovered about half of it.

Northwest and North, Waegwan-Taegu sector: The reds uncorked a Sunday drive that gained three and one-half miles down the "bowling alley" stretch of the Tabu-Taegu highway. Forward patrols reached within 10 miles of Taegu before counterattacking First Cavalry infantrymen banged into the spearhead and halted it.

South Koreans Fall Back

East coast, around Pohang: South Koreans fell back several thousand yards before red hordes jumping off from Kigye, nine miles northwest of Pohang. The reds threatened the junction city of Kyongju on the Taegu-Pusan highway.

The main enemy effort appeared to be north of Taegu, key city in the Allied defense.

It was the Tabu-Taegu highway that became a graveyard of red armor in an eight-day battle that began Aug. 15. The communists lost 30 out of 40 tanks in a futile effort to smash down the road that U. S. soldiers dubbed "the bowling alley."

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported that the new attack towards Taegu opened Saturday evening with a 70-minute artillery barrage in which at least 2,000 shells were hurled at American lines.

Then the red machine began to move. Communist soldiers punched ahead three and one-half miles. Patrols infiltrated down both sides of the highway two miles south of Tabu but the town itself was still held by the First Cavalry. Americans counterattacked the advanced reds.

Drowning out the din of battle was an electrical rainstorm.

Crete's National Love Story Upset By Police

ATHENS, Sept. 3 (AP)—The story book lovers of Crete were separated today by a government move which may lead to renewal of a bloody mountain feud on that Mediterranean Island.

Athens police took Constantine Kephaloyannis, the dashing island Romeo, into custody on a warrent sworn out by Crete's public prosecutor charging him with kidnapping Tassoula Petracogeorgi.

The couple were married Friday in a remote Cretan monastery atop fabled Mount Ida 11 days after Constantine made off with 20-year-old, sultry-eyed Tassoula.

The impetuous, mustachioed lover said bad blood which has existed for generations between the Kephaloyannis and Petracogeorgis made a normal courtship impossible.

After the marriage the two young lovers flew to Athens to ask the blessing of Archbishop Spyridon of the Greek Orthodox Church. The bride spent Saturday night at the archbishop's residence and it was reported early today that he had blessed the union.

Later this was denied, but it is understood that the archbishop considered the marriage legal.

Tassoula was released from clerical chaperonage and rejoined her husband. She was with him when police picked him up on the kidnapping warrant this morning. After the arrest she took refuge with her husband's uncle instead of returning to her family.

"I love Costa and married him of my free will," the girl told newsmen yesterday. "My love developed as I was with him in the mountains. He is a proud, brave man. Above all his behavior and respect were beyond reproach."

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

THE new social security bill will now give benefits to around 45 million people, including self-employed, regularly employed agricultural workers, certain federal employes, state and local employes and employes of non-profit organizations if they wish to come in under the system.

Professional people such as doctors, osteopaths, optometrists, architects, certified public accountants, etc., are not included. However, if any of this group is employed full time on salary basis by some firm, then they would come under social security. Full time insurance salesmen on a salary basis or door-to-door salesmen on a salary are also included.

However, men working on a commission are self-employed as is the man who owns a filling station or a grocery store. If any of these or similar groups earn as much as $400 a year, they come under social security. These self-employed people will pay their social security taxes along with their income taxes, once a year, instead of having it deducted from wages or salaries. This means that the first payment comes due on March 15, 1952, for full coverage in 1951. The amount self-employed people have to pay depends on their earnings. But no one pays on more than $3,600 a year which is the maximum income from which social security deductions are made.

Farm owners or operators of rented farms do not come under the bill. But a regular hired hand does if he works for any farmer for as long as 60 days and earns as much as $50 in that quarter, which is three months time. The farm owner or operator must deduct the social security tax from the worker's pay and match the amount himself. Then he sends this money to the Treasury.

If a family employs a regular maid, cook or chauffeur on a weekly or monthly basis, these employes are covered and also any domestic who works as much as 24 days in any quarter of the year for the same person and earns more than $50 in that time. Casual workers, such as maids who come in by the day and who divide their time among several employes are not included. It hasn't been decided how the tax on domestics is to be collected. It may be in the form of stamps bought and then pasted in a book or by the employer collecting and sending it to the Treasury, the same as the farm owners.

There is an increase eventually in the amount to be deducted. At present 1½ per cent each is paid by the worker and the employer on earnings up to $3,000 a year. Under the new plan the worker and the employer will still pay 1½ per cent but it will be on the basis of up to $3,600 a year. This will continue through 1955. After that, starting in 1956, the rate will be 2 per cent and climb gradually to 3¼ per cent in 1970.

For this increase in deductions and payments, social security payments are almost doubled. For instance, the minimum payment has been raised from $10 to $20 a month. The maximum for an individual is raised from $46 to $68.50 a month. The worker with a wife and dependent children also has increases. It goes from $85 a month to $150. No payments, however, can exceed 80 per cent of the average monthly wages of the insured worker.

Under the new law, eligibility is increased. For instance, a person now 60 years old would require only 10 quarters or 2½ years to be eligible; at 61 only 8 quarters or 2 years; at 62 only 6 quarters or 18 months is required. Those quarters may include coverage earned before 1951 as well as coverage after that. All persons will be fully insured if they have been covered by social security payments for 40 quarters or 10 years.

Veterans of World War II are granted credits of $160 a month for time spent in the service between Sept. 16, 1940, and July 24, 1947, so that they do not lose any coverage.

There are death benefits of anywhere between $60 and $200. A widow receives ¾ of the primary benefits of her husband, and children under 18 also receive increased benefits. Widowers of women who are under the social security laws may receive benefits as well as divorced wives who are not remarried and have no job. Mothers and parents of insured men and women may also receive benefits.

Under the new law, those receiving benefits may now earn as much as $50 a month in outside work and still retain those benefits. After 75 years of age, they may earn any amount they wish without losing social security payments.

Thus this new bill makes it possible to give more real social security by raising the amount of benefits and by covering more groups.

UNDER THE DOME

My bill authorizing the acceptance of land along the C. and O. Canal was passed by the House last week. It has now gone to the Senate and I am hopeful that quick action will be taken.

Because of the large expenditure involved, $14,000,000, I objected to the Washington Airport Bill when it came before the House under unanimous consent. However, the bill was later brought to the floor and passed. I further objected to the bill feeling that the new International Friendship Airport at Baltimore could be used.

I have contacted the commandant of the Marine Corps relative to the separation of twin boys in the service. The boys have never been separated, followed the same trade and worked together. They were both members of the Marine Reserves and after being sent to camp have now been separated and I am asking that they be allowed to serve together.

I am receiving many letters regarding the lifting of tariff on some articles. At the present time the Tariff Commission and the State Department are going over the Tariff laws with the view of making revisions.

It is harder for flies to get into a house when the screen doors open outward.

Dairymen Win Case Against Cooperative

In Circuit Court on Saturday, Judge George Henderson handed down an opinion in which he favored a group of dairymen in their case against the Cooperative Milk Services, Inc.

Orlan C. Hepner and a number of other dairy farmers brought suit for an accounting of all milk shipped from the local plant to the Washington market for about a six-month period.

Judge Henderson said that "there is no evidence whatever of fraud or bad faith on the part of the directors of the defendant cooperative".

"The controversy results from measure taken by the directors in their effort to solve a difficult situation in some way that would be for the best interests of a majority of their members," Judge Henderson stated.

"Unfortunately, the methods adopted worked injustice to the complainants, and in my opinion entitles them to relief".

Facts Recited

The facts in the case are as follows:

The Cooperative Milk Service, Inc., is a cooperative association organized in accordance with the cooperative laws of Maryland in 1948. At the time of the formation of the association the board of directors approved a form of marketing contract, which all patrons of the association who are members, were required to sign.

In April, 1948 it purchased the milk receiving station of the Embassy Dairy of Washington, D. C., at 416 Pennsylvania Avenue, this city, from James J. Ward and his wife. Thereafter the association sold its milk to this same Embassy Dairy, which paid the association the Maryland "blend price" for this milk, which is considerably higher than "manufacturers' price".

The association dealt with the Embassy Dairy from May 1, 1948 until June 30, 1949.

After a survey of the eastern sea-board outlets the board of directors determined that the Washington market paid the highest blended milk prices.

The directors also determined that the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., known as the "Washington Association", distributed 85 per cent of the milk in Washington and was interested in adding a new milk shed in this area if it could be secured.

Directors of the association here contacted an official of the "Washington Association" with reference to using that association as an outlet for milk of its producers.

On July 25, 1949, at a meeting in the LaVale Fire Hall members of the Cumberland association decided to enter into a special arrangement with the Washington Association.

Favored By Majority

Another meeting of the 60 members, 52 of whom were present, was held August 22, 1949 with 37 voting in favor of entering into a patron's agreement and 14 balloting against the proposal.

Following the meeting, a representative of the Washington Association arranged that members of the local association who had indicated an interest in joining the Washington group should do so. Such members executed a patron's agreement in which the local plant was designated as receiving station for his milk.

The member also executed an assignment addressed to the Washington Association authorizing it to deduct from the moneys due him monthly under the marketing contract such sums as the local association indicated was necessary to cover his pro rata share of the cost of operating the plant that month.

As to those members of the local association who did not join the Washington Association, the association continued to collect their milk and dispose of it to the Washington Association. This milk was commingled with the milk of local members of the Washington Association and sent to Washington in tank trucks of the local group.

The refusal of the complainants and certain other members to join the Washington Association was due to their financial inability, or their unwillingness, to spend the amount in improving their respective milk plants so as to comply with the requirements of the Washington health authorities.

It was also apparent, Judge Henderson stated, that upon the expiration of the temporary permits the local plant would be usable only by patrons, and that some other means would have to be found to dispose of the milk of the original members who remained only members and not "patrons".

No Withdrawal Permitted

Nevertheless no steps were taken to authorize them to withdraw from the association taking with them their respective shares in the so-called "revolving fund" which their patronage had helped the defendant to build up, and to enable them to turn their common and preferred stock at either its cost price or book value. There is evidence that certain members applied for but were refused permission to withdraw, the court ruled.

It is true that all were offered an opportunity to sign with the Washington Association. But this "opportunity" was only a nominal one to the member who did not have financial resources to make the required improvements, according to Judge Henderson.

Naturally after February 1, 1950 the non-patron members withdrew one by one, and sold their milk elsewhere in order to get a higher price than the manufacturers' price paid by Washington Association. Three signed releases before doing so. And these releases are in their terms broad enough to prevent them from having rights herein — unless the circumstances under which they were signed amounted to duress. (I have already referred to the failure of the association to permit withdrawal under fair and reasonable conditions after it was apparent non-patron members would ultimately be unable to use the plant.) By July 16, 1950 not one of the non-patron members was left.

"There is a strong doubt whether even a clear majority has the legal power to 'jettison' the minority members as was done here.

"But the complainants recognized they are confronted by a 'fait accomplix' ".

Accounting Asked For

They ask only for an accounting during the period they were still shipping to the local plant and receiving a lower price than the patron-members; although complainants' milk was being commingled with patrons milk and shipped together in bulk as directed by Washington Association; and although the temporary permits were still valid under the health regulations of the District of Columbia.

But the local cooperative after February 1 no longer treated all its members alike. Although it said all are members, and all must ship through its plant when milk was pooled, it no longer pooled all the returns, Judge Henderson declared.

It said in effect "patrons funds are beyond our control, so non-patron members get only the manufacturer's price which the Washington Association is willing to give".

Under its marketing agreement with complainants the proceeds of milk shipped by its members were to be pooled. It continued to receive their milk — it required them to continue shipping. It should not now claim it cannot be held accountable for proceeds of patrons' milk merely because such proceeds did not pass through its hands.

No Precedent Cited

Counsel for both sides have been unable to find cases decided elsewhere that are exactly in point. But, as has been shown, elemental principles of justice and fair dealing justify the position contended for by complainants.

Judge Henderson decided that the complainants are entiled to an accounting. The defendant must take into consideration all milk shipped from its plant from February 1 to July 15, 1950, total the amounts received by patrons and non-patrons, determine the average price per hundred weight, and account to the complainants (who have not signed releases) for the difference between the amounts received by them and such higher average price.

The cases of those signing releases will be considered only if they file petitions setting out the facts surrounding the releases, and only if such alleged facts show duress, Judge Henderson concluded.

Dairymen Win Case Against Cooperative

In Circuit Court on Saturday, Judge George Henderson handed down an opinion in which he favored a group of dairymen in their case against the Cooperative Milk Services, Inc.

Orlan C. Hepner and a number of other dairy farmers brought suit for an accounting of all milk shipped from the local plant to the Washington market for about a six-month period.

Judge Henderson said that "there is no evidence whatever of fraud or bad faith on the part of the directors of the defendant cooperative".

"The controversy results from measure taken by the directors in their effort to solve a difficult situation in some way that would be for the best interests of a majority of their members," Judge Henderson stated.

"Unfortunately, the methods adopted worked injustice to the complainants, and in my opinion entitles them to relief".

Facts Recited

The facts in the case are as follows:

The Cooperative Milk Service, Inc., is a cooperative association organized in accordance with the cooperative laws of Maryland in 1948. At the time of the formation of the association the board of directors approved a form of marketing contract, which all patrons of the association who are members, were required to sign.

In April, 1948 it purchased the milk receiving station of the Embassy Dairy of Washington, D. C., at 416 Pennsylvania Avenue, this city, from James J. Ward and his wife. Thereafter the association sold its milk to this same Embassy Dairy, which paid the association the Maryland "blend price" for this milk, which is considerably higher than "manufacturers' price".

The association dealt with the Embassy Dairy from May 1, 1948 until June 30, 1949.

After a survey of the eastern seaboard outlets the board of directors determined that the Washington market paid the highest blended milk prices.

The directors also determined that the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., known as the "Washington Association", distributed 85 per cent of the milk in Washington and was interested in adding a new milk shed in this area if it could be secured.

Directors of the association here contacted an official of the "Washington Association" with reference to using that association as an outlet for milk of its producers.

On July 25, 1949, at a meeting in the LaVale Fire Hall members of the Cumberland association decided to enter into a special arrangement with the Washington Association.

Favored By Majority

Another meeting of the 60 members, 52 of whom were present, was held August 22, 1949 with 37 voting in favor of entering into a patron's agreement and 14 balloting against the proposal.

Following the meeting, a representative of the Washington Association arranged that members of the local association who had indicated an interest in joining the Washington group should do so. Such members executed a patron's agreement in which the local plant was designated as receiving station for his milk.

The member also executed an assignment addressed to the Washington Association authorizing it to deduct from the moneys due him monthly under the marketing contract such sums as the local association indicated was necessary to cover his pro rata share of the cost of operating the plant that month.

As to those members of the local association who did not join the Washington Association, the association continued to collect their milk and dispose of it to the Washington Association. This milk was commingled with the milk of local members of the Washington Association and sent to Washington in tank trucks of the local group.

The refusal of the complainants and certain other members to join the Washington Association was due to their financial inability, or their unwillingness, to spend the amount in improving their respective milk plants so as to comply with the requirements of the Washington health authorities.

It was also apparent, Judge Henderson stated, that upon the expiration of the temporary permits the local plant would be usable only by patrons, and that some other means would have to be found to dispose of the milk of the original members who remained only members and not "patrons".

No Withdrawal Permitted

Nevertheless no steps were taken to authorize them to withdraw from the association taking with them their respective shares in the so-called "revolving fund" which their patronage had helped the defendant to build up, and to enable them to turn their common and preferred stock at either its cost price or book value. There is evidence that certain members applied for but were refused permission to withdraw, the court ruled.

It is true that all were offered an opportunity to sign with the Washington Association. But this "opportunity" was only a nominal one to the member who did not have financial resources to make the required improvements, according to Judge Henderson.

Naturally after February 1, 1950 the non-patron members withdrew one by one, and sold their milk elsewhere in order to get a higher price than the manufacturers' price paid by Washington Association. Three signed releases before doing so. And these releases are in their terms broad enough to prevent them from having rights herein — unless the circumstances under which they were signed amounted to duress. (I have already referred to the failure of the association to permit withdrawal under fair and reasonable conditions after it was apparent non-patron members would ultimately be unable to use the plant.) By July 16, 1950 not one of the non-patron members was left.

"There is a strong doubt whether even a clear majority has the legal power to 'jettison' the minority members as was done here.

"But the complainants recognized they are confronted by a 'fait accomplix'".

They ask only for an accounting during the period they were still shipping to the local plant and receiving a lower price than the patron-members; although complainants' milk was being commingled with patrons milk and shipped together in bulk as directed by Washington Association; and although the temporary permits were still valid under the health regulations of the District of Columbia.

But the local cooperative after February 1 no longer treated all its members alike. Although it said all are members, and all must ship through its plant when milk was pooled, it no longer pooled all the returns, Judge Henderson declared.

It said in effect "patrons funds are beyond our control, so non-patron members get only the manufacturer's price which the Washington Association is willing to give".

Under its marketing agreement with complainants the proceeds of milk shipped by its members were to be pooled. It continued to receive their milk — it required them to continue shipping. It should not now claim it cannot be held accountable for proceeds of patrons' milk merely because such proceeds did not pass through its hands.

Labor Day

Labor Day has been observed as a holiday for more than 50 years. When observance of the day began, chief goal of organinzed labor was the eight-hour day. The eight-hour day has long since been achieved and forgotten in the press for many aims.

From this point forward organized labor, if it is wisely led, will adhere closely to the traditional American system, which spreads its benefits more widely than any the world ever knew.

The future of organized labor is in the keeping not of the leaders but of the rank and file of the workers. The average labor leader will not rise above the character of his followers. Frequently a leader yields, against his better judgment to the mistaken demands of members of his organization.

Labor Day is a day of solemn dedication to the principles which have made and kept America great. The one great goal in this industrial age should be the achievement of cooperation between labor, management and the government, with the latter acting always in the public interest, adhering to policies which guild America as a whole and do not give one segment of the populace an advantage at the cost of other segments.

As the nation follows that line it will gain strength. In the degree that it departs from it it invites weakness.

Rail Deadlock

It may be a long time before there is a settlement between the railroads and the two unions that forced government seizure of the lines by threatening to strike. Both sides to the dispute can sit back and wait, it appears, without worrying much about hurting their bargaining positions.

The unions called their strike in an effort to precipitate matters. They had been harassing management for big concessions for 17 months. But they had hoped that government seizure would be accompanied by government pressure on the roads. But is now seems that neither President Truman nor the Army will negotiate an agreement.

But the unions, as usual, will win out in the end. Union leaders wanted government seizure so they would be in better position to maneuver against management. Any new contract will be retroactive and the possibility of inflation may play into their hands.

As for the railroads, it is a case of heads you win, tails I lose. They agreed to the terms recommended by the President's fact-finding board, only to have the unions reject them. They went further by indicating approval of a compromise that would have given the unions still better terms—about 75 per cent of what had been demanded. In conscience, railroad management can hardly go further.

The situation is nothing to cheer about. These disputes should be settled without government seizure of the railroads. But the attitude of the unions is adamant, and it is no secret that government seizure has always resulted in granting their demands.

Beat Moscow To It

An estimated 10,000 Filipino guerillas called Hukbalahaps are terrorizing the government which Washington set up as a going concern four years ago. The United States guaranteed its independence just as the United Nations guaranteed that of South Korea, for which the United States has now gone to war.

Anything may happen in the Philippines unless steps are taken to break up the Huks. Dispatches indicate the insurrection is gaining strength.

The Huks are widely presumed to be communists, but they are held together basically by their grievances about government policy. Principally they are aggrieved about land policy. Landlords own most of the land and tenants are poverty-stricken. The Huks are reported to be made up largely of tenant farmers.

The Filipino government's army and constabulary are involved up to their necks in fighting Huks. If they aren't put down one way or another, American boys may be sent there to save this outpost in the line against communist aggression.

Land reforms might improve the sitaution not only in the Philippines but in several countries now struggling against radical movements. It would be highly desirable to see them achieved under U. S. leadership instead of letting the aggrieved continue to swell their ranks with the promise that Moscow will deliver the reforms they seek.

Homing Lobsters

The homing instinct of pigeons, while not precisely understood, has been made use of in various ways for years. Some dogs and cats, travelling great distances with no obvious guidance, have eventually reached home in safety. Now comes the lobster to join the ranks of these instinct-guided creatures.

Scientists at the Bermuda Biological Station have recently trapped lobsters, tagged them and carried them miles out to sea, and released them. These same crustaceans were found again in the Bermuda traps in three days' to a month's time. Conflicting tides and shoal barriers seemingly interposed no obstacles for the homing lobsters.

It might seem strange that man does not have this useful instinct. It may perhaps have existed in primitive man and been so suppressed by the urge to wander, explore and conquer that it has become atrophied. Parents searching for lost children deeply regret its absence.

Eating And Talking

The coffee houses of Vienna, long celebrated in song and story, seem to be on the way out. The war's effects have made their operation next to impossible, says a report from the city known as the home of the waltz.

At a recent meeting, representatives of cafe owners decided to petition the government for lower taxes, permission to buy food and drink at wholesale prices, and industrial rates for electricity. Even were these advantages to be obtained, many observers doubt that modern habits of Viennese living can make room for sessions in coffee houses.

Habitues of these cafes once had seemingly endless time in which to sit at tables, eating, drinking and discussing everything under the sun. Must this pleasant habit go by the board in a modern world geared to the snack-bar habit? Perched on a stool, today's customer gobbles his hamburger, gulps his coffee, and is off about his business. Do the old discussions go with him?

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Blood Donors Must Be Healthy

THERE is nothing personal about the modern blood transfusion. The donor seldom knows who is to benefit from the pint he gives; the recipient may be of any age, sex, race, or creed. After all, most of the material that is used nowadays comes from one of the 650 blood banks thruout the country.

It has been estimated that more than 1 million pints are used each year. This is big business. Studies in World War II confirmed our belief in the efficacy of transfusions and in addition opened up new fields for blood derivatives and substitutes. As a result, plasma, serum, and fibrin have become common words.

• — • — •

The importance of the donors cannot be underestimated. Their state of health must be good because each is a potential source of disease. This complication seldom occurs, but there have been isolated reports in the medical literature of the transmission in this manner of syphilis, leukemia, malaria, measles, smallpox, typhoid fever, gonorrhea, influenza, relapsing fever, and allergic hypersensitivity. These instances are so rare however, that no one who requires a transfusion should become apprehensive.

Furthermore, most donors are questioned about diseases of this nature before they are considered acceptable. A Wassermann or Kahn test is done to detect syphilis and a microscopic study of the blood is performed to eliminate such possibilities as leukemia and infection. Those who have had malaria in the recent past are rejected because parasites can remain active for a long time after the fluid is stored. For the donor's protection, his blood pressure is taken and blood counts and hemoglobin determinations are made to see whether he is anemic.

Beyond this, the physician relies upon the integrity of the individual who is donating or selling his blood. In the old days, when an emergency transfusion was needed a friend or relative offered his services. Because of the crisis, a Wassermann or Kahn was not done. You guessed it—the friend turned out to be the sick person's worst enemy by transmitting syphilis to him.

• — • — •

In recent years, many individuals have developed jaundice after plasma transfusions. With thousands of men and women donating to the pool, there are bound to be some who have had a recent liver infection (infectious hepatitis). They do not realize that the causative virus is still in their circulation. After reaching the pool serum, the organism remains indefinitely or until the product is used. Several weeks later the recipient begins to feel weak and tired and sooner or later his temperature rises and the skin and eyeballs assume a yellowish discoloration. Attempts are now being made to ward off this complication by rejecting everyone who has had jaundice in the past as well as by utilizing ultraviolet radiation to try to destroy the virus of infectious hepatitis.

The blood of the donor is classified according to type and the Rh factor to avoid serious reactions due to incompatibility. As a further check, a sample of the donor's blood is mixed with that of the recipient and studied under the microscope. If there is evidence that the cells are being destroyed, a new donor usually is selected.

This depends upon the cause of the blockage. If it is due to inflammation, penicillin or chloromycetin would be used to combat the organisms. But if an overgrowth of tissue is responsible, radium is most useful. The blowing out procedure is tried first, however, because it helps the majority of cases.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Harry Truman's experience of going broke as a haberdasher and paying off his debts for 20 years now influences his decisions as President of the United States. This was revealed at a White House conference called to discuss the defense of Alaska—the place which any Russian invasion might hit first.

Military advisers were trying to get the President to O. K. a plan for public housing and utilities in Alaska to be paid for over a 35-year period. Housing for troops in the bitter cold winters happens to be what Alaska needs most.

Mr. Truman listened carefully and then said: "No, I'm not going to approve that. I spent 20 years of my life with a heavy debt hanging over my head, and I'm not going to burden the people of Alaska with that kind of worry. Every year I paid $1,000 on the debt when my clothing store went under. It wasn't all paid until the year I was nominated for vice president.

Philosophically, Mr. Truman continued: "I don't want my children or children's children paying off the debts for mistakes I could make in the White House. That's why I don't want to commit our armed forces or resources to any such long-range plans as the Russians seem up to."

Cabinet Feud Gets Hotter

One of President Truman's most intimate associates was walking out of the White House grounds when a black limousine stopped and a voice said: "Want a lift."

It was the likeable, controversial Secretary of Defense, Louey Johnson. Truman's friend got in the car, and after some conversation, Louey put his hand on the friend's knee and said:

"We've got to get Acheson out of the Cabinet. You can help me. You can talk to the President about it whereas I can't. Let's pitch in and put this across."

Truman's close friend was noncommittal. He made no promises. But the incident illustrates the white heat which the Acheson-Johnson feud has reached. There have been Cabinet feuds in many previous administrations such as that between Jesse Jones and Vice President Wallace in Roosevelt's day. But seldom has there been such open sniping at a fellow Cabinet member as the current attack of Louey Johnson against Dean Acheson.

"Official" Cabinet Peace

Senators who sat in the closed-door session of the Appropriations Committee listening to the testimony of Secretaries Acheson and Johnson last week never would have dreamed there was any animosity between them. Their words almost dripped soothing syrup. On the other hand, several senators got into a row with the two Cabinet members and also between themselves.

Everyone present was sworn to secrecy; but here is what happened:

Senator Homer Ferguson, fiery, white-maned Michigan Republican did most of the sniping at Acheson and Johnson, asking needle-pointed questions in an attempt to rouse them against each other. After failing to provoke the two Cabinet officers into an open quarrel, Ferguson demanded bluntly whether Johnson "had always agreed" with Acheson's policies.

"It isn't a question of agreeing," replied the Secretary of Defense. He explained that both are members of the National Security Council, which thrashes out security problems. All members express their opinions freely, then the President makes the final decision.

"Since I have been on the job, I have followed straight through the policies of the Commander in Chief," added Johnson. Then he turned to Acheson and asked: "Isn't that true, Dean?"

"That is correct," the Secretary of State nodded.

Under Ferguson's persistent heckling, however, Johnson offered to outline his disagreements with Acheson over Formosa if it could be kept out of the official record. But this was turned down by the senators.

Tempers Flare

However, Senator Ken Wherry of Nebraska, sometimes called "the merry mortician," dropped all his merriment when Acheson accused him of "loose talk" on the subject of rearming Germany."

The Nebraskan leaped from his chair, his face red with rage.

"You can't accuse me of loose talking!" he thundered.

After tempers cooled down, California's beefy Senator Bill Knowland heated them up again with a demand to see the long-suppressed Wedemeyer report on China and Korea.

Acheson explained that the Senate's formal request for the Wedemeyer report had just arrived, and he couldn't give an answer until he had talked it over with the President. He added quite frankly, however, that his recommendation would be not to release the report.

This provoked a series of sharp questions from Knowland, until Tennessee's Chairman McKeller interrupted with a snort: "I don't like these political questions."

"I resent the statement of the chairman that politics is involved," bristled the Senator from California. "The questions I was asking are important to the defense of the nation. I am only interested in getting the facts."

Then he proceeded to enumerate the various times he had cooperated with the bipartisan foreign policy.

McKellar retorted that the committee's work had been delayed by repetitious questioning, and cited the second appearance of Central Intelligence chief Admiral Hillenkoetter, whom the aged McKellar insisted on calling "Admiral Hellicopter."

"We had Admiral Hellicopter up here," fussed McKellar, "and asked him question after question. Then we brought him back, and went over the same questions, same answers."

The Republican senators, however, came back with still more questioning of Johnson and Acheson and the session dragged on for three hours. By adjournment time, Defense Secretary Johnson still hadn't read his prepared statement and ECA boss Paul Hoffman was still waiting to testify. Their statements were incorporated into the official record without reading, so the senators could go home.

Trying Forrestal's Mantle

One of these facts is that even before March, 1948, and right up to the moment Johnson succeeded him in March, 1949, James Forrestal (in whose mantle Johnson is now rather unbeautifully attempting to drape himself) was trying desperately to increase the level of American strength. Because of the arbitrary budget limits imposed by President Truman, Forrestal's efforts met with partial failure—a failure which tortured Forrestal, and contributed to his end. But Forrestal's failure was only partial, and by the time Johnson took over, there had already been very real increases in being or authorized.

It was this increased strength which Johnson immediately began to hack away when he took over from Forrestal in March, 1949—which of course explains why Johnson chose March, 1948, instead of the later date. Moreover, the extent of the Johnsonian hacking was fully documented in the very speech from which Johnson quoted in his self-defense. This seems difficult to believe, but the speech is there, in the Congressional Record, for all to read.

Vinson did, as Johnson claimed, credit Johnson with real economies of about $600,000,000—and Johnson has always been credited in this space with about this much real saving. But then Vinson went on to demonstrate that the great bulk of the Johnsonian "economies" added up to "reductions in an amount of about $1.5 billion in the fighting capabilities of our armed forces."

"I want to state emphatically," continued Vinson, "that in my judgment Mr. Johnson's economy scalpel has cut . . . into the sinew and muscle of the armed services." The Vinson speech deserves to be read in full, but here are a few random excerpts which, for rather obvious reasons, Johnson chose not to include in his self-defense:

Johnson's Shrewdness Suspect

"A new thought is being germinated in Washington these days. It is that by reducing the armed forces we are, by some magical process, growing in strength and becoming militarily more effective. . . . The Army is much less effective than it was supposed to be on this date . . . The same is true of the Air Force . . . And the Navy? It has been reduced by 79 ships. Does that make the Navy stronger? Of course not . . . The Marine Corps air arm has been reduced by seven squadrons. I rather doubt that the marines have greatly improved in

How Shrewd Is Johnson

WASHINGTON

SECRETARY of Defense Louis Johnson's recent open letter to Rep. Anthony Tauriello, defending his record, is a choice item of Johnsoniana. Indeed, the distortions of facts are so obvious, and the bombast so peculiarly meaningless, that it almost seems likely that Johnson wrote the letter himself. If not, he should certainly hire a new ghost.

Leaving aside the oceans of guff, Johnson's self-defense apparently rests mainly on two points. One is a comparison between American military strength in March, 1948, and June, 1950. And he must have assumed that no one had bothered, or ever would bother, to read Vinson's speech. Railroad Investments Might Be Risky Now

By ROGER W. BABSON

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 3.—In view of the railroad strikes in the United States and Canada, and the bullish tips that are being put out to get people to buy railroad stocks, I will this week discuss the railroads as an investment. At the close of World War II in 1946 the Index of Railroad Stocks averaged about 68.000. This declined to around 44.00 in June, 1949, and continued around these low figures until the Korean war broke out. Since then the Railroad Index has gone up to nearly 65.00. This means that these railroad stocks are now selling for almost as much as they did at their height during World War II.

Reasons For Being Bullish

1. Railroads have always prospered during wartime. This applies not only to the railroads serving such industrial centers as Pittsburgh, Detroit and Chicago but particularly the transcontinental lines. This should especially be true so long as the Korean difficulty lasts.

2. During the last depression many railroads cut their bonded debts and reduced other charges which should help the stocks. Even roads that were not re-organized were able to spend huge sums on improving their roadbeds, bridges, equipment, machine shops, etc.

3. Most railroads have little to fear from excess-profits taxes because they have such a large basic investment. In other words, the railroads have no watered stock. In some cases the asset value of railroad stocks is 10 times the price at which they are selling on the market.

4. After the war the railroads will have no reconversion problems such as many industrials will have. This is because war traffic uses the same rails, locomotives and equipment that peacetime traffic uses. The railroads should also benefit from the increase in population.

5. The railroads have been able to abandon much unprofitable mileage and to streamline their organizations. This latter is especially being illustrated by what the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company is now doing.

Reasons For Being Bearish

1. The oldest of the strong labor unions are in the railroad field. These unions in peacetime have usually "skimmed the cream" from the railroad earnings and have been a source of great trouble. If railroad wages could be reduced when earnings declined after a war, a fair readjustment could be made. As a matter of fact, the railroad wage increases given during war, when the earnings are abnormally good, cannot be withdrawn after the war is over, when earnings again decline.

2. Railroads have (subject to disputed government rate concessions) more or less, a monopoly during wartime; but after a war is over, they are confronted with more airplanes, more buses and more trucks than ever before. Therefore, railroads normally are subject to tremendous competition during peacetime. This will certainly be true as a settlement is gradually made with Russia.

3. When the Interstate Commerce Commission was formed railroads had a monopoly of transportation. There then were no private automobiles, no trucks, no buses and no airplanes. Such highways as then existed were very poor. Hence, the regulation of railroad rates and service was a necessity. Today, this regulation has turned into a nuisance to all concerned,—railroads, shippers and the public. Yet, the various railroad commissions, both federal and state, continue in office. In order to hold their jobs, they feel obliged to continue to regulate the railroads in both an unreasonable and a costly manner. In addition, the federal government is now suing the railroads for "overchanging" on War II business.

4. These competitors of the railroads, such as the automobiles, trucks, buses, etc., have their "roadbeds" built by the federal government and by the states, for which cost the railroads are obliged to pay their proportion in taxes. The railroads on the other hand, must pay the cost of building and maintaining their own roadbeds and terminals. In the case of the airplane, they have no roadbed to maintain as they use the air; while their expensive terminals are built by the federal or state governments, or by municipalities.

5. One third of the present railroad mileage is unprofitable and should be abandoned. Yet, when the railroads want to take up a little useless track, the shippers, the labor unions and the politicians combine to prevent it. Another fact to be considered is that each generation of young people will be less willing to patronize the railroads than are we older people.

Railroads As A Speculation

A study of the above and other factors leads a conservative investor to avoid being tempted to buy railroad stocks at this time. Some railroads may increase their dividends temporarily, but very few which now pay no dividends will go on a dividend basis. They will need the additional money for buying more equipment, etc. It probably would have been smart to have bought railroad stocks immediately when our troops first landed in Korea; but to buy them today for investment will be risky.

Probably some cheap railroad common stocks, upon which I never expect a dividend, may go up more in price due purely to speculation on the part of small speculators. There are only a relatively few shares of these stocks outstanding; and a little increased buying could easily send them up in price. Furthermore, they have such a big leverage when selling at low prices, they could double or perhaps triple in price. However, after the war is over and earnings decrease, these very facts can cause these stocks to go down in price just as rapidly. Intrinsically, stocks go up only when there are more buyers than sellers;

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Nutmeg State

THE advertising firm of Benton and Bowles continues in business in the state of Connecticut, William Benton being its United States Senator by grace of a deal between Chester Bowles, governor, and Raymond Baldwin, one-time U.S. Senator and a Republican, whereby the latter was appointed to a judgeship and vacated the senatorship. It was all smooth and pretty like an advertisement for a toothpaste.

Now comes an election and Bowles is again to run for governor on the Democratic ticket, assisted by the Socialist A. D. A. The Republicans hav nominated for this office John Lodge, brother of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., running independently is Jasper McLevy, mayor of Bridgeport, it would seem, forever.

Chester Bowles used to be a firm capitalist who went to Washington to run the OPA and now is politically indescribable. He comes of the great Springfield, Mass., Bowles family that produced the "Springfield Republican," which was once a newspaper of superb merit. His present association with the Social-Democratic A. D. A. (Americans for Democratic Action) must be regarded as merely political.

There can be no question but that John Lodge will put up a terrific campaign. Connecticut includes a very large population of Italian and Polish origin to whom Lodge's personality and abilities will appeal. He is now a member of the House of Representatives.

The Republican organization in Connecticut is not too strong, having been weakened by long tenure out of office and by the desertion of Raymond Baldwin. A large number of the leaders serve on various bipartisan boards and commissions, with the result that there is a temptation not to be too offensive to the Democrats in power.

Also, a great number of Republicans use Connecticut for bedroom purposes, their interest in the state being casual. In fact, this bedroom connection is true of Benton and Bowles on the Democratic side.

This year the citizens of Connecticut will be called upon to vote for two United States Senators. William Benton will run to complete Baldwin's term, Baldwin having quit to become a judge. Against him will run Prescott S. Bush, an associate in business with Averell Harriman, who is now President Truman's adviser on foreign policy. Mr. Bush is a New York banker who lives in Connecticut. It is not believed at this writing that Mr. Bush will be able to make an adequate fight, although wonders have happened in politics.

Running independently, for the United States Senate, on a ticket with Jasper McLevy, Socialist mayor of Bridgeport, is the extremely capitalistic Vivien Kellems, manufacturer. She is a personable lady, financially able to take care of herself, and an in-fighter of the swiftest order. She will pep up the campaign. As she does not believe that Mr. Bush has any chance at all, she feels that she is justified in throwing a monkey-wrench in what looks like a well-oiled victory for Mr. Benton.

The other senatorial candidate is Brien McMahon, currently chairman of the Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy and an associate of Senator Tydings in the whitewash of the State Department. For some weeks, during that investigation, it was widely rumored that Senator McMahon was going to do a hatchet job on Louis Budenz. A graduate of Fordham, at which Jesuit university Budenz is a professor, McMahon would have been in the position of attacking his alma mater. This would not have sat so well with the voters. So the job was handled by Senator Chavez of New Mexico.

Against McMahon runs Joseph E. Talbot. In Connecticut, religious affiliations play a political role, as they should not. Both these candidates are Roman Catholics. Mr. Talbot will undoubtedly fight his battle on the Amerasia case, in which connection Brien McMahon is vulnerable.

Pressures are being put on all the Republican candidates to avoid discussion of Teheran, Potsdam, Yalta, the Amerasia case, Korea and the China policy of Dean Acheson. As there is little else to talk about, it will be impossible to fight a campaign without discussing what the voters want to hear. Furthermore, if Miss Kellems goes to it tooth-and-nail, she is likely to set the pace.

Connecticut may produce interesting surprises in this election both in the character of the campaign and in the results. It is, at the moment, impossible to tell which way the cat will fly.

Labor Day

Labor Day has been observed as a holiday for more than 50 years. When observance of the day began, chief goal of organinzed labor was the eight-hour day. The eight-hour day has long since been achieved and forgotten in the press for many aims.

From this point forward organized labor, if it is wisely led, will adhere closely to the traditional American system, which spreads its benefits more widely than any the world ever knew.

The future of organized labor is in the keeping not of the leaders but of the rank and file of the workers. The average labor leader will not rise above the character of his followers. Frequently a leader yields, against his better judgment to the mistaken demands of members of his organization.

Labor Day is a day of solemn dedication to the principles which have made and kept America great. The one great goal in this industrial age should be the achievement of cooperation between labor, management and the government, with the latter acting always in the public interest, adhering to policies which guild America as a whole and do not give one segment of the populace an advantage at the cost of other segments.

As the nation follows that line it will gain strength. In the degree that it departs from it it invites weakness.

Rail Deadlock

It may be a long time before there is a settlement between the railroads and the two unions that forced government seizure of the lines by threatening to strike. Both sides to the dispute can sit back and wait, it appears, without worrying much about hurting their bargaining positions.

The unions called their strike in an effort to precipitate matters. They had been harassing management for big concessions for 17 months. But they had hoped that government seizure would be accompanied by government pressure on the roads. But is now seems that neither President Truman nor the Army will negotiate an agreement.

But the unions, as usual, will win out in the end. Union leaders wanted government seizure so they would be in better position to maneuver against management. Any new contract will be retroactive and the possibility of inflation may play into their hands.

As for the railroads, it is a case of heads you win, tails I lose. They agreed to the terms recommended by the President's fact-finding board, only to have the unions reject them. They went further by indicating approval of a compromise that would have given the unions still better terms—about 75 per cent of what had been demanded. In conscience, railroad management can hardly go further.

The situation is nothing to cheer about. These disputes should be settled without government seizure of the railroads. But the attitude of the unions is adamant, and it is no secret that government seizure has always resulted in granting their demands.

Beat Moscow To It

An estimated 10,000 Filipino guerillas called Hukbalahaps are terrorizing the government which Washington set up as a going concern four years ago. The United States guaranteed its independence just as the United Nations guaranteed that of South Korea, for which the United States has now gone to war.

Anything may happen in the Philippines unless steps are taken to break up the Huks. Dispatches indicate the insurrection is gaining strength.

The Huks are widely presumed to be communists, but they are held together basically by their grievances about government policy. Principally they are aggrieved about land policy. Landlords own most of the land and tenants are poverty-stricken. The Huks are reported to be made up largely of tenant farmers.

The Filipino government's army and constabulary are involved up to their necks in fighting Huks. If they aren't put down one way or another, American boys may be sent there to save this outpost in the line against communist aggression.

Land reforms might improve the situation not only in the Philippines but in several countries now struggling against radical movements. It would be highly desirable to see them achieved under U. S. leadership instead of letting the aggrieved continue to swell their ranks with the promise that Moscow will deliver the reforms they seek.

Homing Lobsters

The homing instinct of pigeons, while not precisely understood, has been made use of in various ways for years. Some dogs and cats, travelling great distances with no obvious guidance, have eventually reached home in safety. Now comes the lobster to join the ranks of these instinct-guided creatures.

Scientists at the Bermuda Biological Station have recently trapped lobsters, tagged them and carried them miles out to sea, and released them. These same crustaceans were found again in the Bermuda traps in three days' to a month's time. Conflicting tides and shoal barriers seemingly interposed no obstacles for the homing lobsters.

It might seem strange that man does not have this useful instinct. It may perhaps have existed in primitive man and been so suppressed by the urge to wander, explore and conquer that it has become atrophied. Parents searching for lost children deeply regret its absence.

Eating And Talking

The coffee houses of Vienna, long celebrated in song and story, seem to be on the way out. The war's effects have made their operation next to impossible, says a report from the city known as the home of the waltz.

At a recent meeting, representatives of cafe owners decided to petition the government for lower taxes, permission to buy food and drink at wholesale prices, and industrial rates for electricity. Even were these advantages to be obtained, many observers doubt that modern habits of Viennese living can make room for sessions in coffee houses.

Habitues of these cafes once had seemingly endless time in which to sit at tables, eating, drinking and discussing everything under the sun. Must this pleasant habit go by the board in a modern world geared to the snack-bar habit? Perched on a stool, today's customer gobbles his hamburger, gulps his coffee, and is off about his business. Do the old discussions go with him?

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Blood Donors Must Be Healthy

THERE is nothing personal about the modern blood transfusion. The donor seldom knows who is to benefit from the pint he gives; the recipient may be of any age, sex, race, or creed. After all, most of the material that is used nowadays comes from one of the 650 blood banks thruout the country.

It has been estimated that more than 1 million pints are used each year. This is big business. Studies in World War II confirmed our belief in the efficacy of transfusions and in addition opened up new fields for blood derivatives and substitutes. As a result, plasma, serum, and fibrin have become common words.

• — • — •

The importance of the donors cannot be underestimated. Their state of health must be good because each is a potential source of disease. This complication seldom occurs, but there have been isolated reports in the medical literature of the transmission in this manner of syphilis, leukemia, malaria, measles, smallpox, typhoid fever, gonorrhea, influenza, relapsing fever, and allergic hypersensitivity. These instances are so rare however, that no one who requires a transfusion should become apprehensive.

Furthermore, most donors are questioned about diseases of this nature before they are considered acceptable. A Wassermann or Kahn test is done to detect syphilis and a microscopic study of the blood is performed to eliminate such possibilities as leukemia and infection. Those who have had malaria in the recent past are rejected because parasites can remain active for a long time after the fluid is stored. For the donor's protection, his blood pressure is taken and blood counts and hemoglobin determinations are made to see whether he is anemic.

Beyond this, the physician relies upon the integrity of the individual who is donating or selling his blood. In the old days, when an emergency transfusion was needed a friend or relative offered his services. Because of the crisis, a Wassermann or Kahn was not done. You guessed it—the friend turned out to be the sick person's worst enemy by transmitting syphilis to him.

• — • — •

In recent years, many individuals have developed jaundice after plasma transfusions. With thousands of men and women donating to the pool, there are bound to be some who have had a recent liver infection [infectious hepatitis]. They do not realize that the causative virus is still in their circulation. After reaching the pool serum, the organism remains indefinitely or until the product is used. Several weeks later the recipient begins to feel weak and tired and sooner or later his temperature rises and the skin and eyeballs assume a yellowish discoloration. Attempts are now being made to ward off this complication by rejecting everyone who has had jaundice in the past as well as by utilizing ultraviolet radiation to try to destroy the virus of infectious hepatitis.

The blood of the donor is classified according to type and the Rh factor to avoid serious reactions due to incompatibility. As a further check, a sample of the donor's blood is mixed with that of the recipient and studied under the microscope. If there is evidence that the cells are being destroyed, a new donor usually is selected.

TOMORROW: Discomfort associated with long car or truck rides.

This depends upon the cause of the blockage. If it is due to inflammation, penicillin or chloromycetin would be used to combat the organisms. But if an overgrowth of tissue is responsible, radium is most useful. The blowing out procedure is tried first, however, because it helps the majority of cases.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Harry Truman's experience of going broke as a haberdasher and paying off his debts for 20 years now influences his decisions as President of the United States. This was revealed at a White House conference called to discuss the defense of Alaska—the place which any Russian invasion might hit first.

Military advisers were trying to get the President to O. K. a plan for public housing and utilities in Alaska to be paid for over a 35-year period. Housing for troops in the bitter cold winters happens to be what Alaska needs most.

Mr. Truman listened carefully and then said: "No, I'm not going to approve that. I spent 20 years of my life with a heavy debt hanging over my head, and I'm not going to burden the people of Alaska with that kind of worry. Every year I paid $1,000 on the debt when my clothing store went under. It wasn't all paid until the year I was nominated for vice president.

Philosophically, Mr. Truman continued: "I don't want my children or children's children paying off the debts for mistakes I could make in the White House. That's why I don't want to commit our armed forces or resources to any such long-range plans as the Russians seem up to."

Cabinet Feud Gets Hotter

One of President Truman's most intimate associates was walking out of the White House grounds when a black limousine stopped and a voice said: "Want a lift."

It was the likeable, controversial Secretary of Defense, Louey Johnson. Truman's friend got in the car, and after some conversation, Louey put his hand on the friend's knee and said:

"We've got to get Acheson out of the Cabinet. You can help me. You can talk to the President about it whereas I can't. Let's pitch in and put this across."

Truman's close friend was noncommittal. He made no promises. But the incident illustrates the white heat which the Acheson-Johnson feud has reached. There have been Cabinet feuds in many previous administrations such as that between Jesse Jones and Vice President Wallace in Roosevelt's day. But seldom has there been such open sniping at a fellow Cabinet member as the current attack of Louey Johnson against Dean Acheson.

"Official" Cabinet Peace

Senators who sat in the closed-door session of the Appropriations Committee listening to the testimony of Secretaries Acheson and Johnson last week never would have dreamed there was any animosity between them. Their words almost dripped soothing syrup. On the other hand, several senators got into a row with the two Cabinet members and also between themselves.

Everyone present was sworn to secrecy; but here is what happened:

Senator Homer Ferguson, fiery, white-maned Michigan Republican did most of the sniping at Acheson and Johnson, asking needle-pointed questions in an attempt to rouse them against each other. After failing to provoke the two Cabinet officers into an open quarrel, Ferguson demanded bluntly whether Johnson "had always agreed" with Acheson's policies.

"It isn't a question of agreeing," replied the Secretary of Defense. He explained that both are members of the National Security Council, which thrashes out security problems. All members express their opinions freely, then the President makes the final decision.

"Since I have been on the job, I have followed straight through the policies of the Commander in Chief," added Johnson. Then he turned to Acheson and asked: "Isn't that true, Dean?"

"That is correct," the Secretary of State nodded.

Under Ferguson's persistent heckling, however, Johnson offered to outline his disagreements with Acheson over Formosa if it could be kept out of the official record. But this was turned down by the senators.

Tempers Flare

However, Senator Ken Wherry of Nebraska, sometimes called "the merry mortician," dropped all his merriment when Acheson accused him of "loose talk" on the subject of rearming Germany."

The Nebraskan leaped from his chair, his face red with rage.

"You can't accuse me of loose talking!" he thundered.

After tempers cooled down, California's beefy Senator Bill Knowland heated them up again with a demand to see the long-suppressed Wedemeyer report on China and Korea.

Acheson explained that the Senate's formal request for the Wedemeyer report had just arrived, and he couldn't give an answer until he had talked it over with the President. He added quite frankly, however, that his recommendation would be not to release the report.

This provoked a series of sharp questions from Knowland, until Tennessee's Chairman McKeller interrupted with a snort: "I don't like these political questions."

"I resent the statement of the chairman that politics is involved," bristled the Senator from California. "The questions I was asking are important to the defense of the nation. I am only interested in getting the facts."

Then he proceeded to enumerate the various times he had cooperated with the bipartisan foreign policy.

McKellar retorted that the committee's work had been delayed by repetitious questioning, and cited the second appearance of Central Intelligence chief Admiral Hillenkoetter, whom the aged McKellar insisted on calling "Admiral Hellicopter."

"We had Admiral Hellicopter up here," fussed McKellar, "and asked him question after question. Then we brought him back, and went over the same questions, same answers."

The Republican senators, however, came back with still more questioning of Johnson and Acheson and the session dragged on for three hours. By adjournment time, Defense Secretary Johnson still hadn't read his prepared statement and ECA boss Paul Hoffman was still waiting to testify. Their statements were incorporated into the official record without reading, so the senators could go home.

MATTER OF FACT

By STEWART ALSOP

How Shrewd Is Johnson

WASHINGTON

SECRETARY of Defense Louis Johnson's recent open letter to Rep. Anthony Tauriello, defending his record, is a choice item of Johnsoniana. Indeed, the distortions of facts are so obvious, and the bombast so peculiarly meaningless, that it almost seems likely that Johnson wrote the letter himself. If not, he should certainly hire a new ghost.

Leaving aside the oceans of guff, Johnson's self-defense apparently rests mainly on two points. One is a comparison between American military strength in March, 1948, and June, 1950. The other is a lengthy quotation from a speech delivered last April 4 by the able chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Carl Vinson.

If he really expected this defense to be taken seriously, Johnson must have made two peculiar assumptions. He must have assumed that no one would remember that he became Secretary of Defense, not in March, 1948, but in March, 1949. And he must have assumed that no one had bothered, or ever would bother, to read Vinson's speech. Unfortunately for Johnson, however, a ministry of truth, as described in George Orwell's book, "1948," has not yet been established in the United States to expunge the inconvenient facts of the past.

Trying Forrestal's Mantle

One of these facts is that even before March, 1948, and right up to the moment Johnson succeeded him in March, 1949, James Forrestal (in whose mantle Johnson is now rather unbeautifully attempting to drape himself) was trying desperately to increase the level of American strength. Because of the arbitrary budget limits imposed by President Truman, Forrestal's efforts met with partial failure—a failure which tortured Forrestal, and contributed to his end. But Forrestal's failure was only partial, and by the time Johnson took over, there had already been very real increases in being or authorized.

It was this increased strength which Johnson immediately began to hack away when he took over from Forrestal in March, 1949—which of course explains why Johnson chose March, 1948, instead of the later date. Moreover, the extent of the Johnsonian hacking was fully documented in the very speech from which Johnson quoted in his self-defense. This seems difficult to believe, but the speech is there, in the Congressional Record, for all to read.

Vinson did, as Johnson claimed, credit Johnson with real economies of about $600,000,000—and Johnson has always been credited in this space with about this much real saving. But then Vinson went on to demonstrate that the great bulk of the Johnsonian "economies" added up to "reductions in an amount of about $1.5 billion in the fighting capabilities of our armed forces."

"I want to state emphatically," continued Vinson, "that in my judgment Mr. Johnson's economy scalpel has cut . . . into the sinew and muscle of the armed services." The Vinson speech deserves to be read in full, but here are a few random excerpts which, for rather obvious reasons, Johnson chose not to include in his self-defense:

Railroad Investments Might Be Risky Now

By ROGER W. BABSON

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 3.—In view of the railroad strikes in the United States and Canada, and the bullish tips that are being put out to get people to buy railroad stocks, I will this week discuss the railroads as an investment. At the close of World War II in 1946 the Index of Railroad Stocks averaged about 68.000. This declined to around 44.00 in June, 1949, and continued around these low figures until the Korean war broke out. Since then the Railroad Index has gone up to nearly 65.00. This means that these railroad stocks are now selling for almost as much as they did at their height during World War II.

Reasons For Being Bullish

1. Railroads have always prospered during wartime. This applies not only to the railroads serving such industrial centers as Pittsburgh, Detroit and Chicago but particularly the transcontinental lines. This should especially be true so long as the Korean difficulty lasts.

2. During the last depression many railroads cut their bonded debts and reduced other charges which should help the stocks. Even roads that were not re-organized were able to spend huge sums on improving their roadbeds, bridges, equipment, machine shops, etc.

3. Most railroads have little to fear from excess-profits taxes because they have such a large basic investment. In other words, the railroads have no watered stock. In some cases the asset value of railroad stocks is 10 times the price at which they are selling on the market.

4. After the war the railroads will have no reconversion problems such as many industrials will have. This is because war traffic uses the same rails, locomotives and equipment that peacetime traffic uses. The railroads should also benefit from the increase in population.

5. The railroads have been able to abandon much unprofitable mileage and to streamline their organizations. This latter is especially being illustrated by what the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company is now doing.

Reasons For Being Bearish

1. The oldest of the strong labor unions are in the railroad field. These unions in peacetime have usually "skimmed the cream" from the railroad earnings and have been a source of great trouble. If railroad wages could be reduced when earnings declined after a war, a fair readjustment could be made. As a matter of fact, the railroad wage increases given during war, when the earnings are abnormally good, cannot be withdrawn after the war is over, when earnings again decline.

2. Railroads have (subject to disputed government rate concessions) more or less, a monopoly during wartime; but after a war is over, they are confronted with more airplanes, more buses and more trucks than ever before. Therefore, railroads normally are subject to tremendous competition during peacetime. This will certainly be true as a settlement is gradually made with Russia.

3. When the Interstate Commerce Commission was formed railroads had a monopoly of transportation. There then were no private automobiles, no trucks, no buses and no airplanes. Such highways as then existed were very poor. Hence, the regulation of railroad rates and service was a necessity. Today, this regulation has turned into a nuisance to all concerned,—railroads, shippers and the public. Yet, the various railroad commissions, both federal and state, continue in office. In order to hold their jobs, they feel obliged to continue to regulate the railroads in both an unreasonable and a costly manner. In addition, the federal government is now suing the railroads for "overchanging" on War II business.

4. These competitors of the railroads, such as the automobiles, trucks, buses, etc., have their "roadbeds" built by the federal government and by the states, for which cost the railroads are obliged to pay their proportion in taxes. The railroads on the other hand, must pay the cost of building and maintaining their own roadbeds and terminals. In the case of the airplane, they have no roadbed to maintain as they use the air; while their expensive terminals are built by the federal or state governments, or by municipalities.

5. One third of the present railroad mileage is unprofitable and should be abandoned. Yet, when the railroads want to take up a little useless track, the shippers, the labor unions and the politicians combine to prevent it. Another fact to be considered is that each generation of young people will be less willing to patronize the railroads than are we older people.

Railroads As A Speculation

A study of the above and other factors leads a conservative investor to avoid being tempted to buy railroad stocks at this time. Some railroads may increase their dividends temporarily, but very few which now pay no dividends will go on a dividend basis. They will need the additional money for buying more equipment, etc. It probably would have been smart to have bought railroad stocks immediately when our troops first landed in Korea; but to buy them today for investment will be risky.

Probably some cheap railroad common stocks, upon which I never expect a dividend, may go up more in price due purely to speculation on the part of small speculators. There are only a relatively few shares of these stocks outstanding; and a little increased buying could easily send them up in price. Furthermore, they have such a big leverage when selling at low prices, they could double or perhaps triple in price. However, after the war is over and earnings decrease, these very facts can cause these stocks to go down in price just as rapidly. Intrinsically, stocks go up only when there are more buyers than sellers;

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Nutmeg State

THE advertising firm of Benton and Bowles continues in business in the state of Connecticut, William Benton being its United States Senator by grace of a deal between Chester Bowles, governor, and Raymond Baldwin, one-time U.S. Senator and a Republican, whereby the latter was appointed to a judgeship and vacated the senatorship. It was all smooth and pretty like an advertisement for a toothpaste.

Now comes an election and Bowles is again to run for governor on the Democratic ticket, assisted by the Socialist A. D. A. The Republicans hav nominated for this office John Lodge, brother of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., running independently is Jasper McLevy, mayor of Bridgeport, it would seem, forever.

Chester Bowles used to be a firm capitalist who went to Washington to run the OPA and now is politically indescribable. He comes of the great Springfield, Mass., Bowles family that produced the "Springfield Republican," which was once a newspaper of superb merit. His present association with the Social-Democratic A. D. A. (Americans for Democratic Action) must be regarded as merely political.

There can be no question but that John Lodge will put up a terrific campaign. Connecticut includes a very large population of Italian and Polish origin to whom Lodge's personality and abilities will appeal. He is now a member of the House of Representatives.

The Republican organization in Connecticut is not too strong, having been weakened by long tenure out of office and by the desertion of Raymond Baldwin. A large number of the leaders serve on various bipartisan boards and commissions, with the result that there is a temptation not to be too offensive to the Democrats in power.

Also, a great number of Republicans use Connecticut for bedroom purposes, their interest in the state being casual. In fact, this bedroom connection is true of Benton and Bowles on the Democratic side.

This year the citizens of Connecticut will be called upon to vote for two United States Senators. William Benton will run to complete Baldwin's term, Baldwin having quit to become a judge. Against him will run Prescott S. Bush, an associate in business with Averell Harriman, who is now President Truman's adviser on foreign policy. Mr. Bush is a New York banker who lives in Connecticut. It is not believed at this writing that Mr. Bush will be able to make an adequate fight, although wonders have happened in politics.

Running independently, for the United States Senate, on a ticket with Jasper McLevy, Socialist mayor of Bridgeport, is the extremely capitalistic Vivien Kellems, manufacturer. She is a personable lady, financially able to take care of herself, and an in-fighter of the swiftest order. She will pep up the campaign. As she does not believe that Mr. Bush has any chance at all, she feels that she is justified in throwing a monkey-wrench in what looks like a well-oiled victory for Mr. Benton.

The other senatorial candidate is Brien McMahon, currently chairman of the Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy and an associate of Senator Tydings in the whitewash of the State Department. For some weeks, during that investigation, it was widely rumored that Senator McMahon was going to do a hatchet job on Louis Budenz. A graduate of Fordham, at which Jesuit university Budenz is a professor, McMahon would have been in the position of attacking his alma mater. This would not have sat so well with the voters. So the job was handled by Senator Chavez of New Mexico.

Against McMahon runs Joseph E. Talbot. In Connecticut, religious affiliations play a political role, as they should not. Both these candidates are Roman Catholics. Mr. Talbot will undoubtedly fight his battle on the Amerasia case, in which connection Brien McMahon is vulnerable.

Pressures are being put on all the Republican candidates to avoid discussion of Teheran, Potsdam, Yalta, the Amerasia case, Korea and the China policy of Dean Acheson. As there is little else to talk about, it will be impossible to fight a campaign without discussing what the voters want to hear. Furthermore, if Miss Kellems goes to it tooth-and-nail, she is likely to set the pace.

Connecticut may produce interesting surprises in this election both in the character of the campaign and in the results. It is, at the moment, impossible to tell which way the cat will fly.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

(Substituting for vacationing Louella Parsons)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 3 (INS) — Plumb wonderful what studios do with old scripts. "Night After Night," made with George Raft and Mae West a snappy 20 years ago, is being revamped for Betty Hutton to play the George Raft role — you heard me — the RAFT role!

MAE WEST

George played a night club owner who gets mixed up with gangsters. Betty will play a girl who operates a night club and innocently becomes involved with the mobs.

If you remember the old picture, it's the one in which Mae muttered one of the lines which made her famous. When a hat-check girl said to her, "Goodness, what beautiful jewelry," Mae cracked:

"Goodness had nothing to do with it, dearie!"

• — • — •

There were no hard feelings either way when Ruth Warrick left the cast of "Carrie" at Paramount, replaced by Miriam Hopkins. Even though the change was so fast Agent Wynn Rocamora was routed from a concert at the Hollywood Bowl to close the deal for Miriam — Ruth was one of the first to agree with Willy Wyler and Laurence Olivier that she showed too young for the wife role.

Her commitment with Paramount for one picture still stands. The movie she makes may be "Alice Sit By the Fire."

• — • — •

June Haver will not make a picture until after the first of the year which is smart, smart, smart. She feels much better but still not strong enough for the strenuous dancing her musicals call for, so she is listening to her doctor's advice.

If Judy Garland and others we could mention had been so wise they would not be in the nervous and physical condition they are today.

Both Warners and 20th were most cooperative with little June when she said "no more pictures until I am completely well."

• — • — •

Writing a holiday column should not happen to a dog. Everybody's away having laughs and making no news. Even the good old stand-by press agents are off fishing, or loafing, or lying on the beach instead of phoning to me.

• — • — •

That's Lana Turner's real dressing room you'll be seeing in "Mr. Imperium"—and in technicolor, yet. As you know, Lana plays a movie star in the picture, so instead of building one on a set, the camera moved into Lana's own quarters.

You'll see her famed record cabinet in which she keeps one of the largest collection of platters (lots of Judy Garland's among them) in Hollywood.

The only change made will be turning a picture of her daughter, Cheryl, away from the camera on account of Lana doesn't have a little Cheryl in the script.

• — • — •

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random:

Ruth Roman was with John Agar at the Encore which isn't to be taken too seriously. The scuttlebutt is that he has a new romance in Texas.

Whether Elizabeth Taylor and Nicky Hilton had a "serious" quarrel or not—her studio thought it important enough to dispatch a press agent to Chicago to handle the outburst of rumors.

Even if this is a press agent gag —it's a good one. Herman Hover, of Ciro's, is starting a baby sitter service for parents who want to come to his nitery. He has hired Mrs. Kitty Shard, a child nutritional expert, to provide expert "sitters" for potential customers who can't connect with one themselves.

Ava Gardner switched from you-know-who to go with Manager Benton Cole to the Palladium. She wanted to listen to the music of her good friend, Jerry Gray, and his band.

Sylvia Sidney is not coming back to Hollywood. After her tour with "The Innocents," she will settle in New York.

Byron Haskins, who directed "Treasure Island," has been secretly married to Terry Gates since August 19. Slipped over the border to tie the knot in Tijuana.

Buddy Rogers to New York Tuesday to prepare his television show.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

We're off to the jungle.

Yes, sir, to get authentic background for a movie called "They Killed To Live," the whole company, headed by Sabu, is going into the wilds of Malaya to capture leopards, panthers, tigers, lions and snakes.

It will be the most dangerous venture since the first tourist tried to cross Hollywood Boulevard against the light.

Of course, capturing these wild animals in their native habitat is a lot different from using animals trained for the movies. In Hollywood, if you want to capture a lion, all you have to do is arrange it with his agent.

I've been in a few jungle pictures myself and the wild animals in Hollywood are really sensitive. Every time you try to shoot one, it complains to its union.

But this movie company in Malaya may find it tough to convince the animals to leave the jungle. The animals may say, "We're scared to leave . . . we've been reading your newspaper headlines."

Two Men Held On Gaming Count

Joseph H. Hayhurst, 204 South Mechanic Street, and Beal A. Milleson, 113 Oak Street, were booked for gambling at police headquarters Saturday night. Milleson tried to place a bet after a police lieutenant entered the place, authorities stated.

The police docket shows bonds of $200 each were posted by the men.

Chief of Police R. E. Flynn said the arrests were made by Lt. Edwin R. Lilya Saturday at 4 p.m.

Lt. Lilya, while in plain clothes, walked into the Queen City Billiard Parlor just as a man he identified as Hayhurst shouted the name of a winning horse he had received over the telephone.

Lt. Lilya reported he walked over to Hayhurst and took the phone from him. The crowd remained stationary after they recognized Lilya, the officer said, and while he listened on the phone.

The lieutenant said that the only thing he heard over the telephone was a man saying "Hey Joe" and "What's the matter, Joe?" While he was listening, a man he identified as Milleson walked to the counter and attempted to place a bet with Hayhurst who was standing next to the lieutenant. Hayhurst, Lilya said, kept shoving the alleged bettor's money back.

Lilya said the unidentified caller on the other end of the line hung up when he heard the officer's voice tell him to "go ahead," apparently knowing it wasn't "Joe."

After this, Lilya escorted the pair to headquarters where both were booked on gaming charges.

The bond was posted for a hearing in Police Court this week.

SECRETS OF CHARM

© 1950 by John F. Dille Co.

When your mirrors warn you that you are finding time for everything but yourself, take notice!

ONE OF THE smoothest and most admirable developments of this period is the evolution of the American business woman. To many like myself who can remember when it was a rare woman, indeed, who was employed outside the home, it is little less than startling to note the tremendous number in the business world today. Even more astonishing are the recent statistics proving there are as many married as single women holding jobs.

Which Corner to Cut

That countless thousands of women are able to run a job efficiently and a home lovingly at the same time is a source of humbling wonder to the mere man who finds his nine-to-five stint just about all he can take!

And with all this, the American woman in business is one of the most attractive and best-turned out women in the world.

But when the working wife or mother has to cut a sharp corner, what is it that gets neglected? Nine times out of ten, it's herself.

If such is the case with you, just consider these words of the old Bard: "Self-love, my liege, is not so great a crime as self-neglecting."

When you must steal time from any of your activities, make sure that it is not from yourself. For even though your self-neglect is so small that it goes undetected at present, eventually it will take its toll.

First Duty

The one part of your daily routine with which you should permit no interference is the twenty minutes per day minimum that every woman must spend on herself if she is to keep looking her best. Never slight the thorough cleansing and lubricating of your face, brushing of your hair, exercise for your special figure problem, the nail polish that needs patching and the grooming of your clothes. And more man any other woman, the working one needs to watch and clip the ads, so she can make the most of the rare hour when she finally finds time to shop. It's only by such watchfulness and careful planning that the working homemaker can possibly hope to find the clothes that are best suited to her.

The woman who finds time for everything but herself is not only slighting herself but everyone who loves her!

P. S. from J. R. P.

Tri-Towns C. Of C. Urges Completion Of Savage Dam

PIEDMONT, W. Va. — Recommendations citing the need for the completion of Savage River Dam were contained in letters sent to two Maryland senators and the congressmen from this section of Maryland and West Virginia by the Tri-Towns Chamber of Commerce.

As the dam is near to 95 per cent completion, it was pointed out that stoppage of the work now would result in the loss of some of the original investment and the section would be deprived of the advantages to be provided by the dam, although several millions of dollars have been spent on its construction.

A steady flow of water in the Potomac the year-round is needed by industries along the river, it was also pointed out. To halt efforts to regulate the flow might mean interruption of employment to many people in this section.

Westernport's water supply has been curtailed by the construction of the dam and the town is at the resent time put to an additional expense for pumping. That this handicap will be removed by the completion of the dam, is another point mentioned.

Lab School Opens Sept. 6

FROSTBURG — Dr. Magdalen Eichert, principal of the Laboratory School of State Teachers College, announced that the school will reopen Wednesday at 9 a. m.

Children enrolled in the First Grade will report to Miss Irene Condry in the room on the second floor of the Laboratory School building next to the principal's office. Other children will report to the classes in which they are enrolled.

Mrs. Charles Kopp, a former teacher in the Laboratory School and a graduate of the college, will be the Second Grade teacher this year. Because of the shortage of teachers, she accepted the request of President Compton to take the position.

Miss Margaret Jones will teach Third Grade and Mrs. Rita C. Clark, another former teacher in the Laboratory School, will teach Fourth Grade during the absence of Miss Ruth Sherman, who is studying at the University of Maryland Graduate School.

Miss Betty Roemmelmyer will teach Fifth Grade and Miss Angela Brady will teach Sixth Grade.

College Makes Faculty Changes

FROSTBURG — Miss Lillian C. Compton, president of State Teachers College, announced that Mrs. Joseph A. Kohout will succeed Mrs. Rebekah S. Hufnut as dietitian at the college dormitory. Mrs. Hufnut latter resigned to care for her brother who is in ill health.

Mrs. Kohout has a bachelor's degree in home economics and took advance training in the same field at the University of Tennessee. She formerly taught home economics at Rhea Central High School, Dayton, Tenn.

Miss Eleanor K. Arnett will replace Ronald Green as assistant librarian. Green, a reservist, was called into the armed forces. Miss Arnett is a graduate of Ohio State University and has a master's degree from Teachers College, Columbia University. Prior to coming to Frostburg, she resided at East Orange, N. J.

Approximately 500 students are expected to enroll this week. Anyone who has not made application for admission but would like to do so, is asked to apply Wednesday at 8:45 a.m. in the college dining hall. Parents and friends of the college will be welcome to inspect the college buildings during registration week.

Three Typhoid Cases Are Noted In Mineral County

KEYSER, W. Va. — Despite the fact three cases of typhoid fever have been reported to the Mineral County Health Department, investigation discloses that only one of the persons had an opportunity to contract the disease within the county.

Two typhoid patients who have been admitted to Potomac Valley Hospital were residing in Morgantown, Monongalia County, and in Martin, Grant County, at the time of onset, William Waller, supervisor of the Mineral County Health Department, said yesterday.

"Typhoid is usually spread by way of contaminated water or milk," Waller said. "It may also be contracted by eating foods which have been contaminated with fly-borne filth. Shell fish, notably oysters, which have been dredged from polluted areas have been responsible for several epidemics."

Waller continued: "While one case of typhoid does not constitute an epidemic and there is no cause for alarm, certain precautions may be taken which will greatly reduce the liklihood of infection. Drink water from municipal water supplies, which are under constant vigilance of local and state health authorities.

"Should it become necessary to travel in areas where water of assured safety is not available, water may be made safe by the addition of ten drops of A-1 solution of chlorox, of Halizon tablets, which may be obtained from your local drug store, may be used as directed on container.

"Use milk from dairies displaying a Grade A label. Milk from these dairies is tested regularly and precautions are being taken to see that contamination does not enter the product.

"Swim only in areas known to be free from pollution. Typhoid may be contracted by taking the organism into the mouth while swimming.

"When purchasing shell fish look on the container for a permit number. A permit is issued by the U. S. Public Health Service to reputable packers who are dredging from clean areas.

"If your home is not located on a city sewer line, see that proper toilet facilities are provided," Waller concluded.

Tri-Towns C. Of C. Urges Completion Of Savage Dam

PIEDMONT, W. Va. — Recommendations citing the need for the completion of Savage River Dam were contained in letters sent to two Maryland senators and the congressmen from this section of Maryland and West Virginia by the Tri-Towns Chamber of Commerce.

As the dam is near to 95 per cent completion, it was pointed out that stoppage of the work now would result in the loss of some of the original investment and the section would be deprived of the advantages to be provided by the dam, although several millions of dollars have been spent on its construction.

A steady flow of water in the Potomac the year-round is needed by industries along the river, it was also pointed out. To halt efforts to regulate the flow might mean interruption of employment to many people in this section.

Westernport's water supply has been curtailed by the construction of the dam and the town is at the present time put to an additional expense for pumping. That this handicap will be removed by the completion of the dam, is another point mentioned.

Three Typhoid Cases Are Noted In Mineral County

KEYSER, W. Va. — Despite the fact three cases of typhoid fever have been reported to the Mineral County Health Department, investigation discloses that only one of the persons had an opportunity to contract the disease within the county.

Two typhoid patients who have been admitted to Potomac Valley Hospital were residing in Morgantown, Monongalia County, and in Martin, Grant County, at the time of onset, William Waller, supervisor of the Mineral County Health Department, said yesterday.

"Typhoid is usually spread by way of contaminated water or milk," Waller said. "It may also be contracted by eating foods which have been contaminated with fly-borne filth. Shell fish, notably oysters, which have been dredged from polluted areas have been responsible for several epidemics."

Waller continued: "While one case of typhoid does not constitute an epidemic and there is no cause for alarm, certain precautions may be taken which will greatly reduce the liklihood of infection. Drink water from municipal water supplies, which are under constant vigilance of local and state health authorities.

"Should it become necessary to travel in areas where water of assured safety is not available, water may be made safe by the addition of ten drops of A-1 solution of chlorox, of Halizon tablets, which may be obtained from your local drug store, may be used as directed on container.

"Use milk from dairies displaying a Grade A label. Milk from these dairies is tested regularly and precautions are being taken to see that contamination does not enter the product.

"Swim only in areas known to be free from pollution. Typhoid may be contracted by taking the organism into the mouth while swimming.

"When purchasing shell fish look on the container for a permit number. A permit is issued by the U. S. Public Health Service to reputable packers who are dredging from clean areas.

"If your home is not located on a city sewer line, see that proper toilet facilities are provided," Waller concluded.

ALL-IN-ONE GOLF CLUB CONTINUES TO STIR UP STORM OF CONTROVERSY

By Central Press

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Uncle Sam's golf stick, the one that cost $100,000 to develop in World War II because it has four detachable heads, has been taken off the exclusive supply list of the Armed Forces and made available to civilians, but it's stirred up a storm of controversy.

Designed by Horton Smith, the Missouri pro, to provide recreation for men overseas and at the same time save shipping space, the unique device breaks down into six pieces. The shaft separates in two parts at the twist of a tiny lock wrench. Then there are four heads for separate shots. Each fits onto the end of the shaft which is machined with a special "T" lock.

• — • — •

PREVIOUS experimenters with novel all-in-one clubs have tried using screw-threaded joints but they soon trip smooth under the shock and weight of a few hard drives on the fairway. Other types also have used worm gears to adjust the angle of the heads. Not so with a new one, named after John J. Jacosky, the man who engineered the club after Smith's design which was evolved from ideas contributed by a joint athletic board of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The requisites of the ideal set were set forth, but the problem of making a good set of matched clubs operating off of one shaft, not to exceed three pounds of carrying weight, and small in bulk, was a real engineering puzzler.

But is was finally developed from the drawing board to the finished product; only after about $100,000 was allocated and used for this purpose.

Now, the four heads can be adjusted to make seven matched clubs,

Ready to play—with detachable club heads

and each head has the correct angle of loft, angle of shaft line, length of shaft, weight of blade and balance. This is possible through variations in the dimensions and characteristics of the individual heads themselves.

• — • — •

RELEASE OF THE CLUB to civilian channels has stirred up a storm of controversy in the nation's 75,000 golf clubs, and caddies naturally have spearheaded the opposition because the all-in-one golf stick is certainly going to put some of them out of business.

The player carries his spare heads, balls and tees in a small leather bag suspended from a shoulder strap.

Up to now the U. S. National Golf Association has not accepted the club for official play, having classified it as "a mechanical aid to golf."

Thus, thousands of ex-GIs who played with the unique golf club on Armed Forces recreation greens at home, Tokyo, Nice and Biarritz at the close of World War II, are watching with interest the newest wrinkle in the eternal controversy of man vs. machine.

Golfers To Qualify

Members of the Women's Golf Association of the Cumberland Country Club will qualify for fall golf tournament tomorrow.

There also will be an odd hole tournament for women golfers tomorrow at the local club.

ROTATE TIRES

The Chief has a point there! You can rotate your own tires, but—confidentially—it's back-breaking work. Save yourself a "heap big job" and let us do it for you. By using the spare and rotating tires every 4000 miles, you can drive 20,000 miles, putting only 16,000 miles on each tire. "Resting" and "exercising" your tires prolongs their life.

ALL-IN-ONE GOLF CLUB CONTINUES TO STIR UP STORM OF CONTROVERSY

By Central Press

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Uncle Sam's golf stick, the one that cost $100,000 to develop in World War II because it has four detachable heads, has been taken off the exclusive supply list of the Armed Forces and made available to civilians, but it's stirred up a storm of controversy.

Designed by Horton Smith, the Missouri pro, to provide recreation for men overseas and at the same time save shipping space, the unique device breaks down into six pieces. The shaft separates in two parts at the twist of a tiny lock wrench. Then there are four heads for separate shots. Each fits onto the end of the shaft which is machined with a special "T" lock.

• — • — •

PREVIOUS experimenters with novel all-in-one clubs have tried using screw-threaded joints but they soon trip smooth under the shock and weight of a few hard drives on the fairway. Other types also have used worm gears to adjust the angle of the heads. Not so with a new one, named after John J. Jacosky, the man who engineered the club after Smith's design which was evolved from ideas contributed by a joint athletic board of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The requisites of the ideal set were set forth, but the problem of making a good set of matched clubs operating off of one shaft, not to exceed three pounds of carrying weight, and small in bulk, was a real engineering puzzler.

But is was finally developed from the drawing board to the finished product; only after about $100,000 was allocated and used for this purpose.

Now, the four heads can be adjusted to make seven matched clubs, and each head has the correct angle of loft, angle of shaft line, length of shaft, weight of blade and balance. This is possible through variations in the dimensions and characteristics of the individual heads themselves.

• — • — •

RELEASE OF THE CLUB to civilian channels has stirred up a storm of controversy in the nation's 75,000 golf clubs, and caddies naturally have spearheaded the opposition because the all-in-one golf stick is certainly going to put some of them out of business.

The player carries his spare heads, balls and tees in a small leather bag suspended from a shoulder strap.

Up to now the U. S. National Golf Association has not accepted the club for official play, having classified it as "a mechanical aid to golf."

Thus, thousands of ex-GIs who played with the unique golf club on Armed Forces recreation greens at home, Tokyo, Nice and Biarritz at the close of World War II, are watching with interest the newest wrinkle in the eternal controversy of man vs. machine.

Golfers To Qualify

Members of the Women's Golf Association of the Cumberland Country Club will qualify for fall golf tournament tomorrow.

There also will be an odd hole tournament for women golfers tomorrow at the local club.

ROTATE TIRES
The Chief has a point there! You can rotate your own tires, but—confidentially—it's back-breaking work. Save yourself a "heap big job" and let us do it for you. By using the spare and rotating tires every 4000 miles, you can drive 20,000 miles, putting only 16,000 miles on each tire. "Resting" and "exercising" your tires prolongs their life.

Detroit Gains On Yanks, Kiner Sets 2-Year Homer Record

Tigers Pick Up Half Game, Top Pale Hose, 4-2

Hutchinson Notches 15th Win As Bengals Trail By Two Games

DETROIT, Sept. 3 (AP) — Right hander Freddie Hutchinson pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the Tigers picked up half a game on the idle New York Yankees.

The second-place Detroiters thus climbed to within two games of the American League leading Yankees.

Hutchinson had a five-hit shutout going into the ninth as he notched his 15th win and his third over the White Sox.

But Floyd Baker's single followed by Eddie Robinson's 17th homer drove both runs across and enabled the White Sox to escape a whitewashing. Box:

Keyser Ridge took over third place yesterday by walloping Wellersburg on the Pennsylvanians' field by the score of 18-7, unloosing 18 hits on three Wellersburg pitchers.

McKenzie was the "big gun" with five hits in six trips—tow triples and three singles—while Norris and Jackson each had four safeties in six times at bat.

Harris and Jenkins limited Wellersburg to nine hits. Starkey paced the batsmen with a perfect day in three trips while Horwath rapped a triple and two-bagger.

Barrelville moved into the 4th place fight by taking Ellerslie into camp at Barrelville, 8-6.

The victors obtained 11 hits, Bill Morgan, Bridges and Durst sharing six of that number. Mason garnered three hits and Waltman, LaRue and Wolfe had two blows each for Ellerslie. Charley Aldridge, Barrelville Twirler, fanned five and walked five. Leydig, Ellerslie moundsman, whiffed six.

Tennis Tourney Halted By Rain

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 3 (INS)—A steady, all-day downpour of rain caused postponement today of all semi-final matches of the national tennis championships.

In the men's singles, Herbie Flam, Beverly Hills, Calif., was to have met Gardner Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., in one semi, and Art Larsen, San Francisco, was to have faced Dick Savitt, Orange, N. J., in the other. The matches will be held tomorrow.

Defending champion Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont was scheduled to play Nancy Chaffe, Ventura, Calif., and Doris Hart, Jacksonville, Fla., was to have met Beverly Baker, Santa Monica, Calif., in semi-final women's matches. These, too, were put off until tomorrow.

The finals, originally scheduled for tomorrow, have been resched-

Mitchell, Doby Belt Homers In 8-1 Game

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (INS) — Bobby Feller registered his 13th victory of the season on a five-hit performance as the Cleveland Indians walloped the St. Louis Browns, 8-1, today before 5,683 St. Louis spectators.

The triumph gave Cleveland a sweep of the two-game series and brought the Tribe to within five games of the idle, first-place New York Yankees. It was the Indians' 13th win in 18 starts with the Brownies this year.

Cleveland racked four St. Louis hurlers for 13 hits, including a three-run circuit clout by Dale Mitchell and Larry Doby's 21st home run with the bases empty. Mitchell also touched off a four-run rally in the fourth by singling home Feller, who tripled.

Starter Don Johnson took the loss. He was followed on the mound by Clarence Marshall, Harry Dorish and Jack Bruner.

Feller gave up three walks and the lone Brown tally was unearned. Box:

Pep, Saddler Meet Friday

Sandy 5 To 7 Choice To Dethrone Champ

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP)—September's parade of championship fights gets under way this Friday night in Yankee Stadium when featherweight champion Willie Pep defends his crown against Sandy Saddler in their long awaited "rubber" bout.

A crowd of between 30,000 and 40,000 is expected to turn out to witness the scheduled 15-rounder. Saddler, four years younger than the champion, is rated a 5 to 7 choice to dethrone the little Hartford, Conn. titlist. Saddler is 24 and Pep 28.

Pep regained the title from Saddler by outpointing the skinny Harlem negro in a 15-round classic in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 11, 1949. Only three and a half months before, Saddler pulled one of the ring's greatest upsets by knocking out Pep in four rounds.

The bout will not be broadcast or televised.

Another champion, welterweight king Ray Robinson, also will see action this week but in a non-title bout. Robinson meets Billy Brown of Hartford, Conn. in a ten rounder at Brooklyn's Coney Island Velodrome Monday night.

Joe Feels Better:

Stydahar's Los Angeles Rams Swamp Baltimore Colts, 70-21

Get 11 Touchdowns In Exhibition Game

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams and Coach Joe Stydahar all felt much better today. In fact, they were downright exhuberant.

Coach Joe told the boys last night before they played the Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition that there were going to be some changes made if they didn't show him something. That something had to be a neat victory over the Colts.

Four nights before the Rams had lost to the Philadelphia Eagles, their conquerors in the league play-off last season, by a 49-14 score. It was the worst beating the Rams ever had suffered in the professional circuit.

Stydahar shook up the team. He had eight new starters. He said: "now if you guys don't do something there'll not only be another shakeup but quite a few of you will be leaving us."

So, what those fellows did to the Colts was well worth writing home about. They beat Baltimore 70-21. They made 11 touchdowns — one more than they scored in their entire first season in the league. They romped for 614 yards, 345 of it on the ground. Bob Waterfield engineered them to six touchdowns, passing for two. He whipped the ball 212 yards. Norman Van Brocklin quarterbacked the team for its other TD's.

The Ram scoring included a 64-yard punt return for a touchdown by Dan Towler, a 45-yard pass from Waterfield to Tommy Kaliminir and an 85-yard dash by Jerry Williams with a hand-off.

"Yes sir," said Stydahar, "the boys looked unbeatable. What impressed me was the team spirit. Their blocking was vicious, their tackling terrific. They all wanted to win and did it."

The Miami Sun Sox completed their Florida International League season play against St. Petersburg with 22 wins and no defeats.

KINER SETS ANOTHER RECORD — Ralph Kiner (left) of the Pittsburgh Pirates grins happily in the dressing room with teammate Gus Bell after Kiner hit home runs Nos. 41 and 42 for the season, besting with 96 Hack Wilson's National League record for homers in two successive seasons. Kiner walked in the 10th and Bell drove him home to give the Buccaneers a 12-11 win over the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday at Pittsburgh.

The Lonaconing Republican Club defeated the Mt. Savage Braves by the score of 5-2 yesterday in the only contest played in the Bi-State Baseball League as rain washed out the other three games on the card.

Carl "Pete" Dicken, league secretary, last night announced that in event any of the four top teams wind-up in a tie at the conclusion of today's league program, the teams involved will clash on Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock. If postponed on Wednesday, the game or games must be played off before Saturday as plans are under way to start the circuit's Shaughnessy playoffs on that day.

Keyser is now tied with Westvaco for third place and there is still a possible chance for the two top teams to windup in a tie—that's if Midland loses and Hyndman's Firemen win today.

Lefty Lauber gained the nod over Lefty Bob Crump in a mound duel yesterday at Mt. Savage. The victory gave Lauber a 6-6 record for the season. The loss was Crump's 9th.

Curtis Cup Golf Series To Open

U. S. Women Favored To Defeat British

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Mark A. Porter, the national women's champion from Westmont, N. J., and Beverly Hanson, the long-hitting blonde from Fargo, N. D., were named today on the number one foursome for the opening tomorrow of the Curtis Cup golf matches with the British Isles team.

They will oppose the two Scotswomen of the British team, Mrs. George Valentine of Perthshire, runner-up in this year's British women's championship, and Jean Donald of North Berwick, runner-up for the British title two years ago.

With the weather clearing and the 6,280-yard Country Club of Buffalo course drying out rapidly, the distance-conscious Americans have become overwhelming favorites to retain the trophy they never have lost.

The eent consists of three foursomes tomorrow and six singles Tuesday, each worth one point. All matches will end on the 36th, a tie giving each team half a point.

Yanks, Senators Play Double Bill Sept. 22

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The league-leading New York Yankees will play off today's postponed doubleheader with Washington at the Yankee Stadium, Sept. 22, an open date for both teams. Moorefield stayed in the battle for the playoff spot by whipping the Hyndman Vets yesterday at Hyndman, 6-3.

The game was featured by home runs by Warden Hott and "Huck" Seymour of Moorefield and the relief pitching of Lefty Garrett who supplanted Dwight Kessel in the first inning and got credit for the triumph.

Ronnie Clites and Bryant shared four of Hyndman's seven hits.

Moorefield pulled a triple play in the 9th inning to choke off Hyndman's threatened rally. Bryant lined to Shortstop Johnny Vance who completed the three-ply killing along with Warden Hott and "Huck" Seymour after the Vets had filled the bases.

A sliding board was installed, the area around the pool was concreted, and playground equipment added to the park.

Season Total Hits 42 And 96 For Two Years In 12 To 11 Conquest

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rookie Gus Bell doubled Ralph Kiner home with the winning run in the last of the 10th inning today as the Pittsburgh Pirates outlasted the St. Louis Cardinals 12-11 in a hectic see-saw battle that featured eight home runs.

The Pirates trailed 11-9 going into the 10th but successive homers by Pete Castiglione and Bob Dillinger knotted the count. Kiner who hit his 41st and 42nd home runs of the season during the game, was intentionally passed, paving the way for Bell's game winning smash.

A sparse Sunday crowd of 12,576 thrilled to the home run spectacle.

Kiner's two blows broke the National League record for home runs in successive seasons, his two year total being 96. He hit 54 last year. Hack Wilson of the Cubs set the old record in 1929-30.

Danny O'Connell also homered for the Pirates and Tommy Glaviano, Stan Musial and Bill Howerton each belted one for the Cards. Box:

Hutchinson Notches 15th Win As Bengals Trail By Two Games

DETROIT, Sept. 3 (AP) — Right hander Freddie Hutchinson pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the Tigers picked up half a game on the idle New York Yankees.

The second-place Detroiters thus climbed to within two games of the American League leading Yankees.

Hutchinson had a five-hit shutout going into the ninth as he notched his 15th win and his third over the White Sox.

But Floyd Baker's single followed by Eddie Robinson's 17th homer drove both runs across and enabled the White Sox to escape a whitewashing. Box:

Tennis Tourney Halted By Rain

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 3 (INS)—A steady, all-day downpour of rain caused postponement today of all semi-final matches of the national tennis championships.

Bobby Feller Notches 13th Win Of Year

Mitchell, Doby Belt Homers In 8-1 Game

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (INS) — Bobby Feller registered his 13th victory of the season on a five-hit performance as the Cleveland Indians walloped the St. Louis Browns, 8-1, today before 5,683 St. Louis spectators.

The triumph gave Cleveland a sweep of the two-game series and brought the Tribe to within five games of the idle, first-place New York Yankees. It was the Indians' 13th win in 18 starts with the Brownies this year.

Cleveland racked four St. Louis hurlers for 13 hits, including a three-run circuit clout by Dale Mitchell and Larry Doby's 21st home run with the bases empty. Mitchell also touched off a four-run rally in the fourth by singling home Feller, who tripled.

Starter Don Johnson took the loss. He was followed on the mound by Clarence Marshall, Harry Dorish and Jack Bruner.

Feller gave up three walks and the lone Brown tally was unearned. Box:

Pep, Saddler Meet Friday

Sandy 5 To 7 Choice To Dethrone Champ

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP)—September's parade of championship fights gets under way this Friday night in Yankee Stadium when featherweight champion Willie Pep defends his crown against Sandy Saddler in their long awaited "rubber" bout.

A crowd of between 30,000 and 40,000 is expected to turn out to witness the scheduled 15-rounder. Saddler, four years younger than the champion, is rated a 5 to 7 choice to dethrone the little Hartford, Conn. titlist. Saddler is 24 and Pep 28.

Pep regained the title from Saddler by outpointing the skinny Harlem negro in a 15-round classic in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 11, 1949. Only three and a half months before, Saddler pulled one of the ring's greatest upsets by knocking out Pep in four rounds.

The bout will not be broadcast or televised.

Another champion, welterweight king Ray Robinson, also will see action this week but in a non-title bout. Robinson meets Billy Brown of Hartford, Conn. in a ten rounder at Brooklyn's Coney Island Velodrome Monday night.

Joe Feels Better:

Stydahar's Los Angeles Rams Swamp Baltimore Colts, 70-21

Get 11 Touchdowns In Exhibition Game

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams and Coach Joe Stydahar all felt much better today. In fact, they were downright exhuberant.

Coach Joe told the boys last night before they played the Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition that there were going to be some changes made if they didn't show him something. That something had to be a neat victory over the Colts.

Four nights before the Rams had lost to the Philadelphia Eagles, their conquerors in the league play-off last season, by a 49-14 score. It was the worst beating the Rams ever had suffered in the professional circuit.

Stydahar shook up the team. He had eight new starters. He said: "now if you guys don't do something there'll not only be another shakeup but quite a few of you will be leaving us."

So, what those fellows did to the Colts was well worth writing home about. They beat Baltimore 70-21. They made 11 touchdowns — one more than they scored in their entire first season in the league. They romped for 614 yards, 345 of it on the ground. Bob Waterfield engineered them to six touchdowns, passing for two. He whipped the ball 212 yards. Norman Van Brocklin quarterbacked the team for its other TD's.

The Ram scoring included a 64-yard punt return for a touchdown by Dan Towler, a 45-yard pass from Waterfield to Tommy Kaliminir and an 85-yard dash by Jerry Williams with a hand-off.

"Yes sir," said Stydahar, "the boys looked unbeatable. What impressed me was the team spirit. Their blocking was vicious, their tackling terrific. They all wanted to win and did it."

The Lonaconing Republican Club defeated the Mt. Savage Braves by the score of 5-2 yesterday in the only contest played in the Bi-State Baseball League as rain washed out the other three games on the card.

Carl "Pete" Dicken, league secretary, last night announced that in event any of the four top teams wind-up in a tie at the conclusion of today's league program, the teams involved will clash on Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock. If postponed on Wednesday, the game or games must be played off before Saturday as plans are under way to start the circuit's Shaughnessy playoffs on that day.

Keyser is now tied with Westvaco for third place and there is still a possible chance for the two top teams to windup in a tie—that's if Midland loses and Hyndman's Firemen win today.

Lefty Lauber gained the nod over Lefty Bob Crump in a mound duel yesterday at Mt. Savage. The victory gave Lauber a 6-6 record for the season. The loss was Crump's 9th.

Curtis Cup Golf Series To Open

U. S. Women Favored To Defeat British

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Mark A. Porter, the national women's champion from Westmont, N. J., and Beverly Hanson, the long-hitting blonde from Fargo, N. D., were named today on the number one foursome for the opening tomorrow of the Curtis Cup golf matches with the British Isles team.

They will oppose the two Scotswomen of the British team, Mrs. George Valentine of Perthshire, runner-up in this year's British women's championship, and Jean Donald of North Berwick, runner-up for the British title two years ago.

With the weather clearing and the 6,280-yard Country Club of Buffalo course drying out rapidly, the distance-conscious Americans have become overwhelming favorites to retain the trophy they never have lost.

The eent consists of three foursomes tomorrow and six singles Tuesday, each worth one point. All matches will end on the 36th, a tie giving each team half a point.

Yanks, Senators Play Double Bill Sept. 22

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The league-leading New York Yankees will play off today's postponed doubleheader with Washington at the Yankee Stadium, Sept. 22, an open date for both teams. Today was to have been the Senators' last visit to New York but because of the importance of the two games to the Yankees' pennant chances, the teams arranged for the playoff here on the open date.

Moorefield pulled a triple play in the 9th inning to choke off Hyndman's threatened rally. Bryant lined to Shortstop Johnny Vance who completed the three-ply killing along with Warden Hott and "Huck" Seymour after the Vets had filled the bases.

Swimming Ends Today At Celanese Pool

The Celanese swimming pool season is closing today after Labor Day swimmers "call it a day." Hugo Keller, sponsor, said that the season has had approximately 27,000 paying customers, which is slightly under normal. James Scott, chairman of the pool committee of the Celanese Athletic Association, which owns and operates the pool, said that $3,000 was spent on improvements this year. A sliding board was installed, the area around the pool was concreted, and playground equipment added to the park.

Bucs' Clouter Wallops Pair In Wild Tilt

Season Total Hits 42 And 96 For Two Years In 12 To 11 Conquest

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3 (AP) — Rookie Gus Bell doubled Ralph Kiner home with the winning run in the last of the 10th inning today as the Pittsburgh Pirates outlasted the St. Louis Cardinals 12-11 in a hectic see-saw battle that featured eight home runs.

The Pirates trailed 11-9 going into the 10th but successive homers by Pete Castiglione and Bob Dillinger knotted the count. Kiner who hit his 41st and 42nd home runs of the season during the game, was intentionally passed, paving the way for Bell's game winning smash.

A sparse Sunday crowd of 12,578 thrilled to the home run spectacle.

Kiner's two blows broke the National League record for home runs in successive seasons, his two year total being 96. He hit 54 last year. Hack Wilson of the Cubs set the old record in 1929-30.

Danny O'Connell also homered for the Pirates and Tommy Glaviano, Stan Musial and Bill Howerton each belted one for the Cards. Box:

Blindman's Bluff

LAST night, in a mood for malt and malarkey, I stopped in to chin with Sammy Fuchs, proprietor of the Bowery Follies and honorary Mayor of that unwashed neck of the Manhattan woods.

"What's new and gruesome in your ballwick?" I asked mine host.

Billy Rose

"Nothing much," said Sammy, "except that Faker Kennedy died last week and left his eyes to a bartender down the block."

"Come again?" I said.

According to Sammy, the Faker was a professional blind man who had been rattling a tin cup on the Bowery for as long as he could remember. In spite of his calling, however, it was a standing joke around the flophouses that the cane-tapper could shoot off a bug's ear at a hundred paces.

"We used to kid Kennedy about his blindness," said Sammy, "but he never let on it was an act—if it was an act. And we were never sure because no one ever saw the old coot without his smoked glasses.

"Down at Gargan's Bar where the Faker used to hang out after hours," Sammy continued, "the proprietor had a kind of running gag at the bum's expense.

" 'When you die,' he used to say, 'will me your eyes. Mine are gettin' pretty tired from lookin' at the sawdust.'

" 'I'll leave 'em to ya, Gargan,' was the Faker's stock answer. 'And they'll come in handy if ya ever want to play marbles.'

"That's about how the talk went until one night not long ago when a couple of stick-up men walked into Gargan's and lined the customers up against the wall—all except the Faker who didn't budge from his usual place at the end of the bar.

"After the punks had cleaned out the register and what little was in the customers' pockets, one of them walked up to the Faker and jabbed a gun in his ribs.

" 'You wouldn't take pennies from a blind man, would ya?' said Kennedy.

" 'Don't gimme that pennies stuff,' said the thug. 'You guys always got a roll on ya.'

The Faker made out as if he was fumbling in his pockets, and then suddenly made a grab for the gun yanked it away from the hood and bopped him over the head with it. Then, using the body as a sort of shield, he pointed the gun at the other punk.

" 'Drop yer pistol,' he said, 'or I'll shoot the cigar outta yer mouth.'

"Well, it so happened the thug did have a cigar in his mouth, and when he heard the blind man's on the-button reference to it he got panicky and dropped his gun. A dozen guys jumped him, and a few minutes later he and his pal were in the precinct house.

"After that, of course, everybody on the Bowery was sure the Faker was a fake, but he never owned up. 'They got me all wrong,' he once told me. 'The stick-up guy was smokin' an Italian stogie and ya can smell them things a block away. And I guessed it was in his mouth by the way he talked.'

" A couple of weeks ago," Sammy went on, "Faker Kennedy got pneumonia, and the day after his body was carted off to Potter's Field a package showed up in Gargan's mail with a pair of glass eyes."

"Sounds like the old man was telling the truth after all," I said.

"Nobody is convinced, one way or the other," said the Mayor of the Bowery. "Maybe the eyes came out of the Faker's head, and then again maybe he picked them up in a hockshop. You know, you never can tell about these cuckoos —he might have wanted to play the gag out to the end."

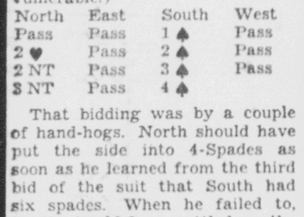
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN HURRY IS VITAL

THERE is no time to waste when you fear the defenders are trying to beat you with a ruffing trick. Hurry is vital then. Your job is to go after the trump suit at the very earliest opportunity, immediately if possible, except in one rare situation—when you are able to make sure that the hand which would lead to give his partner the ruff can be kept out of the lead later on. In all other cases, the contract depends on eliminating trumps from the prospective ruffer's hand.



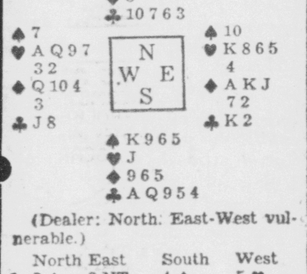
(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♠

That bidding was by a couple of hand-hogs. North should have put the side into 4-Spades as soon as he learned from the third bid of the suit that South had six spades. When he failed to, South should have settled on the 3-No Trumps by passing. But neither partner considered the other a good player of the cards. The 3-No Trumps could not have been made by a magician against a diamond lead anyway, but the spade game should have.

STICK IN A LOWER SUIT

IT IS NOT too infrequent that we hear an opponent bid 3-No Trumps, meaning it as an informative or takeout double, asking his partner to bid another suit, after the bidding has been opened with an attempted shutout suit bid of three. If the partner of the first bidder has a good fit with that suit, it is not always best for him to show it at once. In case he has another suit, which would be a better lead if the opponents buy the contract, it sometimes pays to stick in a call of it, especially if it is a lower-ranking suit.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♠	5 ♥
Pass	Pass	Dbl
2. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♣	4 ♥
4 ♠	5 ♥	Dbl
3. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♣	4 ♥
5 ♣	5 ♥	5 ♠

In this social duplicate game, none of the players were using the conventional sequel to a hostile three bid whereby 3-No Trumps means a desire to play at that contract and the device to cause a suit bid by partner would be the lowest-ranking suit above the bid, in this case 4-Clubs. Bidding was considerably different at the remaining five tables, but the sequences above show what developed where East over-called 3-Spades with 3-No Trumps as a new-suit request.

From that point, the result depended on what South did. At Table 1, where clubs were never called, North decided to put South in the lead so the latter could decide what suit to lead next. So North opened the spade 8, which the K won. Now having the lead, South could not beat the contract. He shifted to a diamond and the contract was a cinch.

Where South had bid clubs at Table 2, North led the club 3, so that two tricks there and one in spades beat the contract. At Table 3 the showing of the club fit caused South to overcall with 5-Spades eventually, a contract easy to make with the loss of only one trick in each red suit.

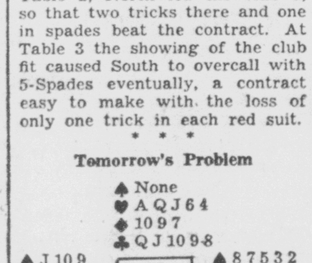
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

If North bids 3-Spades and East an artificial takeout double of 3-No Trumps, what should South do?

South bungled at the very first trick, when he let the club 2 run to his 10. To reach dummy for trump leads, he led toward the heart honors. East won with the A and returned the club 4, which the A won. A heart to the K enabled South to lead the spade 9, which was finessed to the Q. Now the third club gave East a ruff with the spade K, the diamond J was returned and the A set the contract.

South should have read the club 2 as probably a fourth-best, placing East with two. The sole sure preventative of a third-round ruff was elimination of trumps quickly. So he should have won the club lead with dummy's K and led the spade 9, finessing to the Q. He should have won the returned club with the 10 and laid down the spade A, hoping to drop the K from one defender or the other. That would have limited his lost tricks to one each in every suit but clubs to assure his contract.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

How should South play for 7-Diamonds after the spade J is led?

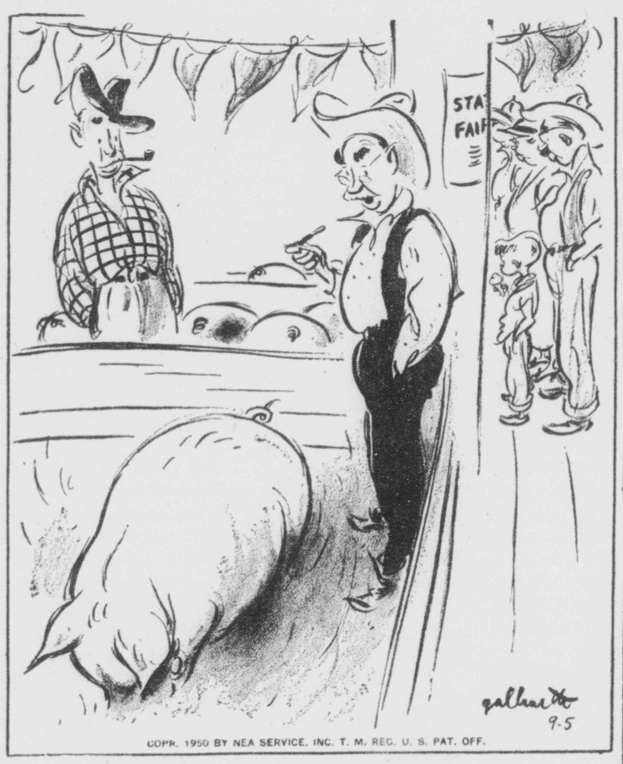
GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"After the summer I've been through, don't ever again let me hear you wishing the schoolhouse would burn down . . ."

SIDE GLANCES — By Galbraith



"I just wish the old boy had more competitive spirit!"

Summer grit seems to delight in settling on your windowsills. But you won't have to scrub them so often if you wax them as part of your weekly cleaning, then dust them off with a flick of the mop the rest of the week.

To keep the glass in incandescent lamps from being fogged by the glowing filament, a small, but powerful, electromagnet is applied against one spot. This attracts all the particles, leaving the rest of the glass clear.

The 3-No Trumps could not have been made by a magician against a diamond lead anyway, but the spade game should have.

STICK IN A LOWER SUIT

IT IS NOT too infrequent that we hear an opponent bid 3-No Trumps, meaning it as an informative or takeout double, asking his partner to bid another suit, after the bidding has been opened with an attempted shutout suit bid of three. If the partner of the first bidder has a good fit with that suit, it is not always best for him to show it at once. In case he has another suit, which would be a better lead if the opponents buy the contract, it sometimes pays to stick in a call of it, especially if it is a lower-ranking suit.

♠ 7 ♥ A Q 9 7 3 2 ♦ Q 10 4 3 ♣ J 8	N W E S	♠ 10 ♥ K 8 6 5 4 ♦ A K J 7 2 ♣ K 2
	♠ K 9 6 5 ♥ J ♦ 9 6 5 ♣ A Q 9 5 4

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♠	5 ♥

2. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♣	4 ♥
4 ♠	5 ♥	Dbl
3. 3 ♠	3 NT	4 ♣	4 ♥
5 ♣	5 ♥	5 ♠

In this social duplicate game, none of the players were using the conventional sequel to a hostile three bid whereby 3-No Trumps means a desire to play at that contract and the device

South bungled at the very first trick, when he let the club 2 run to his 10. To reach dummy for trump leads, he led toward the heart honors. East won with the A and returned the club 4, which the A won. A heart to the K enabled South to lead the spade 9, which was finessed to the Q. Now the third club gave East a ruff with the spade K, the diamond J was returned and the A set the contract.

South should have read the club 2 as probably a fourth-best, placing East with two. The sole sure preventative of a third-round ruff was elimination of trumps quickly. So he should have won the club lead with dummy's K and led the spade 9, finessing to the Q. He should have won the returned club with the 10 and laid down the spade A, hoping to drop the K from one defender or the other. That would have limited his lost tricks to one each in every suit but clubs to assure his contract.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

to cause a suit bid by partner would be the lowest-ranking suit above the bid, in this case 4-Clubs. Bidding was considerably different at the remaining five tables, but the sequences above show what developed where East over-called 3-Spades with 3-No Trumps as a new-suit request.

From that point, the result depended on what South did. At Table 1, where clubs were never called, North decided to put South in the lead so the latter could decide what suit to lead next. So North opened the spade 8, which the K won. Now having the lead, South could not beat the contract. He shifted to a diamond and the contract was a cinch.

Where South had bid clubs at Table 2, North led the club 3, so that two tricks there and one in spades beat the contract. At Table 3 the showing of the club fit caused South to overcall with 5-Spades eventually, a contract easy to make with the loss of only one trick in each red suit.

How should South play for 7-Diamonds after the spade J is led?

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"After the summer I've been through, don't ever again let me hear you wishing the schoolhouse would burn down . . ."

SIDE GLANCES — By Galbraith

"I just wish the old boy had more competitive spirit!"

Summer grit seems to delight in settling on your windowsills. But you won't have to scrub them so often if you wax them as part of your weekly cleaning, then dust them off with a flick of the mop the rest of the week.

To keep the glass in incandescent lamps from being fogged by the glowing filament, a small, but powerful, electromagnet is applied against one spot. This attracts all the particles, leaving the rest of the glass clear.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our husband and father, Lt. Edward L. Helmstetter, who died September 4th, 1949.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought his death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell,
The pain of parting without farewell.
He little thought when leaving home,
That he would never return,
That he so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss him,
Never shall his memory fade.
Loving thoughts shall ever wander,
To the spot where he is laid.
His Wife, Dorothy Helmstetter
and Daughters, Nancy Lee and Diane

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our husband and father, Lt. Edward L. Helmstetter, who died September 4th, 1949.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought his death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell,
The pain of parting without farewell.
He little thought when leaving home,
That he would never return,
That he so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss him,
Never shall his memory fade.
Loving thoughts shall ever wander,
To the spot where he is laid.
His Wife, Dorothy Helmstetter
and Daughters, Nancy Lee and Diane

Calls Catholics To Fight Reds

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 3 (INS) — Pope Pius XII called on Catholics the world over today to join in a global fight against communism. The pontiff expressed certainty that "justice and law will prevail."

In a message addressed to the 74th German Catholic Congress, His Holiness urged Catholics "to have faith in this battle."

West of this fighting, advance elements of a red force clambered up hill 501 — a bald, rugged mass of rock four and one-half miles northeast of Waegwan. U. S. Infantrymen regained most of the heights after a six hour fight.

Summing up the situation around Taegu, a First Cavalry spokesman said the reds now had been halted and "the next few hours will tell whether we can hold them or whether we will have to throw more in."

and go down when there are more sellers than buyers. Hence, purchasers of these cheap speculative railroad stocks may find themselves with good paper profits; but when they try to turn these paper profits into cash, it may be very difficult. If all speculators should attempt to do this at once, it would be impossible for any to cash in on their profits.

What About Street Railways?

Street railways and buses should profit from any war especially if the war leads to the rationing of gasoline, tires, etc., or to the curtailment of the sale of new automobiles. Street railway securities have not yet gone up in price as have railroad securities; in fact, in some instances, they are now selling for less than they have sold for many years. Although the market is thin for street railway securities, yet certain income bonds are worthy of consideration.

Two Pedestrians Are Killed In Holiday Mishaps

Services were planned yesterday for two pedestrians who were killed in the Cumberland area Saturday.

Mrs. Cora Eliza Easton, 71, Braddock Farms, was fatally injured when she was struck by a car in LaVale early Saturday evening. She died an hour and a half later in Allegany Hospital.

The body will remain at Stein's Chapel until Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when a service will be conducted by Rev. S. R. Neel, retired Methodist minister. Interment will be in Hillcrest Burial Park.

According to State Trooper First Class Harry S. Bosley, who investigated, Mrs. Easton, in attempting to cross U. S. Route 40 at the junction of the Braddock Farms Road, stepped in front of a car driven by Mrs. Emma Jean Ralph, Stewartstown Road, Morgantown, W. Va.

Mrs. Ralph, a registered nurse, who was traveling west with her daughter, applied first aid at the scene. Mrs. Easton was then taken to the hospital in the State Police ambulance by Trooper First Class Jack Browning.

Enroute To Washington

Mrs. Easton was making an effort to get to the other side of the highway to board a bus for the city. She had intended to go to Washington aboard a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad train to visit her daughter, Mrs. Goldia Gantt.

Trooper Bosley said Mrs. Ralph will be required to appear for questioning in the State's Attorney's office Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. No charges were preferred.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy Allegany County medical examiner, said Mrs. Easton suffered a compound fracture of the left leg, a fractured right leg, fractured right wrist, fracture of the left arm, several fractured ribs, abrasions of the body and severe shock.

Mrs. Easton was born January 12, 1879 at Piney Grove the daughter of Josephus and Mary (Creek) Norris.

In addition to Mrs. Gantt, Mrs. Easton is survived by her husband, Eugene Wade Easton; three sons, Ira Easton, this city; Charles Wilbur, Narrows Park, and John Franklin, at home; and three daughters, Mrs. Margaret Cage, this city, and Mrs. Frances George and Mrs. Juanita Delaney, both at home.

Also surviving are three brothers, Nelson Norris, LaVale; Ross Norris, Town Hill, and George Norris, McKeesport, Pa.; and three sisters, Mrs. Jennie Pennsinger, LaVale; Mrs. May Trail, Hancock, and Mrs. Belle Montgomery, McKeesport.

Mann's Choice Man Dies

Walter L. Dietz, 21, of Route 1, Mann's Choice, Pa., was killed instantly Saturday at noon when he ran in front of a car on the Pennsylvania Turnpike 300 yards from his home, 15 miles west of Bedford, Pa.

Pennsylvania State Police stated that the auto was driven by Joseph Corrado, Jr., of Kennett Square, Pa., who was heading west.

Corrado was not held for any charges by police, who said he could not have avoided striking the victim.

Dietz, police said, had gone to the Kegg Turnpike Maintenance Shop across the highway from his home and was returning to his house when he ran from the medial strip in the path of the oncoming machine.

He was born at Mann's Choice, the son of William Dietz and the late Mrs. Bessie Ruth (Robb) Dietz. He was unemployed.

Besides his father, Dietz is survived by five brothers, Chester Dietz, Delton Dietz and William Dietz, Jr., all of Johnstown, Pa.; Edward Dietz, Fairhope, Pa., and James Dietz of Mann's Choice.

He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. Rose Wahl, of Route 1, Hyndman, Pa., and Miss Shirley Dietz, and Miss Dottie Lou Dietz, both of Mann's Choice.

The body is at the Zeigler Funeral Home, Hyndman. Services will be conducted Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. in the Dry Ridge Reformed Church. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Matter Of Fact

fighting ability from that . . . There can be no doubt that these reductions have scaled down the fighting potentials of the armed services. It is absurd to contend that the more you reduce the stronger you get."

This, remember, is the very same speech which Johnson chose to quote in his own defense. This is the sort of thing which is leading those who have always credited Johnson with a certain shrewdness to suspect that he is really not very bright. But whether he is shrewd or not, John's past record is less important than what Johnson is doing today. And Johnson apparently believes it is shrewd to cooperate underground with the Republican attack on Secretary of State Acheson, in order to take the heat off himself.

He apparently also believes it is shrewd to preach on Capitol Hill the inevitability of general war, and to hint that the sooner the better. This is, of course, the only way he can possibly justify his demand for vast increases in military appropriations, when only a few months ago he was the chief exponent of the idea that a couple of billions more for the armed services would wreck the American economy. But this sort of talk measurably increases the chances of a war for which Johnson's own policies have left this country and its allies nakedly unprepared. If this is shrewdness, it is shrewdness of a sort which the country could certainly do without.

Calls Catholics To Fight Reds

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 3 (INS) — Pope Pius XII called on Catholics the world over today to join in a global fight against communism. The pontiff expressed certainty that "justice and law will prevail."

In a message addressed to the 74th German Catholic Congress, His Holiness urged Catholics "to have faith in this battle."

West of this fighting, advance elements of a red force clambered up hill 501 — a bald, rugged mass of rock four and one-half miles northeast of Waegwan. U. S. Infantrymen regained most of the heights after a six hour fight.

Summing up the situation around Taegu, a First Cavalry spokesman said the reds now had been halted and "the next few hours will tell whether we can hold them or whether we will have to throw more in."

and go down when there are more sellers than buyers. Hence, purchasers of these cheap speculative railroad stocks may find themselves with good paper profits; but when they try to turn these paper profits into cash, it may be very difficult. If all speculators should attempt to do this at once, it would be impossible for any to cash in on their profits.

What About Street Railways?

Street railways and buses should profit from any war especially if the war leads to the rationing of gasoline, tires, etc., or to the curtailment of the sale of new automobiles. Street railway securities have not yet gone up in price as have railroad securities; in fact, in some instances, they are now selling for less than they have sold for many years. Although the market is thin for street railway securities, yet certain income bonds are worthy of consideration.

Matter Of Fact

fighting ability from that . . . There can be no doubt that these reductions have scaled down the fighting potentials of the armed services. It is absurd to contend that the more you reduce the stronger you get."

This, remember, is the very same speech which Johnson chose to quote in his own defense. This is the sort of thing which is leading those who have always credited Johnson with a certain shrewdness to suspect that he is really not very bright. But whether he is shrewd or not, John's past record is less important than what Johnson is doing today. And Johnson apparently believes it is shrewd to cooperate underground with the Republican attack on Secretary of State Acheson, in order to take the heat off himself.

He apparently also believes it is shrewd to preach on Capitol Hill the inevitability of general war, and to hint that the sooner the better. This is, of course, the only way he can possibly justify his demand for vast increases in military appropriations, when only a few months ago he was the chief exponent of the idea that a couple of billions more for the armed services would wreck the American economy. But this sort of talk measurably increases the chances of a war for which Johnson's own policies have left this country and its allies nakedly unprepared. If this is shrewdness, it is shrewdness of a sort which the country could certainly do without.

Hundreds Plan Outdoor Events As Holiday Ends

Area Highway Death Toll Rises To Six

Despite predictions of rather cloudy, humid weather with scattered thundershowers today, hundreds of Cumberlanders went ahead with plans for picnics and other outdoor activities to mark the close of the long Labor Day weekend.

Majority of the groves at Constitution Park have been reserved for family picnics today, according to Robert R. Golden, park superintendent.

Golden predicted only a "medium" day's business at the park today, however. He explained that most persons go out of town on long holiday weekends.

Yesterday's .02 inches of rain sent a number of pre-Labor Day picnickers scurrying home, but clearing weather later in the afternoon brought others to the park for picnic suppers, Golden said.

About 1,000 persons visited the park before the afternoon shower broke, he added.

Death Toll Rises

The highway death toll in this area has risen to six persons since motorists began jamming the roads Friday en route to vacation spots.

The latest fatality occurred yesterday, when Mrs. Virginia Pavey, 26, of Jarretsville, Md., was killed in an automobile accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike eight miles east of Somerset.

Authorities reported that the accident occurred on a single lane where repairs were being made. Mrs. Pavey lost control of the pickup truck she was driving and the truck overturned, pinning her beneath it.

Mrs. Pavey's husband, Robert, was treated at Somerset Hospital for lacerations of the hand and bruises about the body.

Two pedestrians, an elderly Braddock Farms woman and a 21-year-old man of Mann's Choice, Pa., were fatally injured in separate accidents Saturday.

On Friday, as the long holiday weekend began, a Garrett County man was killed when he leaped from a runaway truck in Frostburg, and a Flushing, N. Y., couple were killed when their car crashed into a tractor-trailer 11 miles west of Bedford on the Turnpike.

Meanwhile, State Police and transportation officials were bracing themselves for a peak in homeward bound travel tonight.

Rail, bus and airlines reported traffic was only slightly heavier than the average holiday increase.

Travel was heaviest to westbound points, they reported.

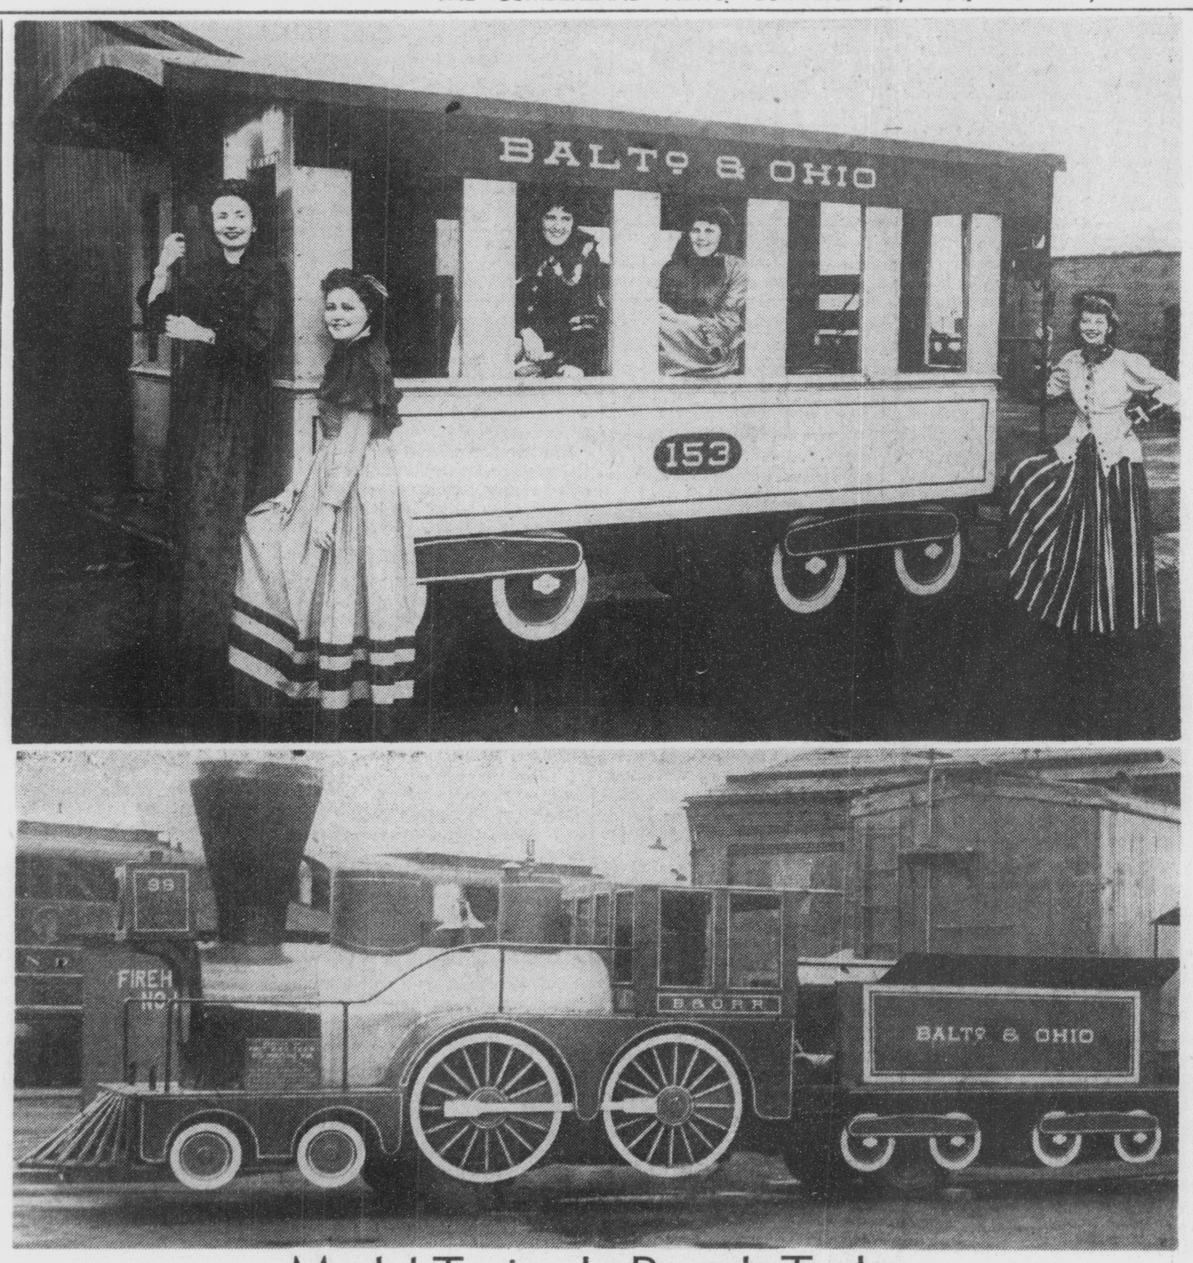
State Police said traffic was "very heavy" Saturday night but tapered off yesterday. Another peak is expected late this afternoon or tonight when motorists start their homeward trek.

46 Units To March

One of Cumberland's largest Labor Day parades will get underway this morning at 10:30, with 43 units in the line of march.

The parade will form at Laing Avenue and proceed to Baltimore Street via Virginia Avenue, Maryland Avenue, Williams Street; Park Street, Baltimore Street and then disband on South Mechanic Street.

A picnic and speaking will be held in the afternoon at Crystal Park with fireworks there at night.



Model Trains In Parade Today

Former Lonaconing Coal Miner Credited With Naming Labor Day

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

A former Allegany County resident, a Lonaconing coal miner of the nineteenth century, is credited by some historians as being the man who proposed and named Labor Day.

According to available records, Robert Price, known as "Shouting Bob" Price, a native of near Aberyswith, Wales, July 16, 1833, worked in the Jackson Mine near Lonaconing for about 16 years.

He acquired his nickname from friends because he often was heard to shout "Amen" in church while the preacher delivered his sermon or offered prayer.

Price left school at the age of eight years to work with his father in a coal mine in his native country. When he was 31, he migrated to the United States and worked in the Pennsylvania coal fields for eight years, after which he became an "under boss" at the Lonaconing operation.

Leaving the Georges Creek Region, he went to Idaho and later went to Kansas. Records show he was 69 when he moved to Montana, and he died in his humble home on the outskirts of Helena, Mont. He was about 77 when he died. His funeral was reported "poorly attended and unceremonious."

For a time in his life, "Shouting Bob" was reported as "friendly with capital" and often helped avert trouble among the miners he worked with in Wales. However, when he was about 25, he had an experience which changed his ideas completely.

He was returning from a mine one day, when he found his "buddie," a young lad of about 17, lying on the ground and bleeding from the mouth and nose. His clothing was torn. Price picked up the lad, carried him two miles to his home, and sent for a doctor. But the boy died.

As he was dying, he told Price that the boss had beaten him for cutting the room too wide and asked, "Robert, are you one of us now?"

It is reported that ever after that Bob Price was a "fighting labor man and leader."

While in Lonaconing, Price was a member of Local Assembly No. 848 of the Knights of Labor. The grand master of the order was a labor leader named Powderly who had built up a strong organization.

Nearly all the miners in the Georges Creek Region, because of the efforts of "Shouting Bob" and others, were members when the Knights of Labor called a convention in New York in 1882. Price was named a delegate.

During the convention, the large and strong typographical union members staged a parade and the convention adjourned to witness it.

A short time later, during a lull in the convention proceedings, the record states: "Price arose. Tall, well formed and in the full flush of manhood. He stood erect and leaned far over the balcony. He caught the eye of Grand Master Powderly. He began to speak. All who recall his address on that day remember the enthusiasm it evoked.

"At the close of his address, which was filled with bursts of oratory and carried the hearers' thoughts of organization to what was then supposed to be unattainable heights, he stopped for a moment, and then said:—

"I move you Mr. Chairman, that it be the unanimous decision of this convention that hereafter one day of the year shall be set aside and on that day labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

"Shouting Bob" Price sat down and the cheering which followed his remarks made the building rock as a thousand labor men sprang to their feet in ovation.

"When order was restored, Powderly turned toward Price and asked, 'And what do you intend to call that day?'

"Without a moment's hesitation, Price jumped to his feet and shouted, 'Labor Day.'

"Again all semblence of order was destroyed and the meeting came to a sudden end. In 1884, the Knights of Labor again met in convention in New York and held a gigantic parade to mark Labor Day.

Colorado was the first state to make the first Monday in September a legal holiday in 1887. Labor Day was observed throughout the United States in 1909, except in Arizona and North Dakota.

This year, Labor Day is being observed in all states of the United States, in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Canal Zone, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Today is the day "Shouting Bob" Price declared, "Labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

Louis L. Shinnamon, 62, LaVale, father of Louis V. Shinnamon, Baltimore Street shoe store operator, died yesterday morning at the home of a daughter, Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga., where he had been visiting for the past week.

Mr. Shinnamon had been in failing health for the past year, and for about three months past had been residing with his son here. He was a native and lifelong resident of Maryland and his home was at Catonsville.

He had been employed for a number of years in the Income Tax division of the Internal Revenue Department, working through this area. He was well known throughout Western Maryland and vicinity. He officially retired shortly after the close of World War II.

Mr. Shinnamon was married to the late Hallie A. Wrightson Shinnamon, who died about five years ago. He was a life member of Howard Lodge No. 101, AF and A Masons, Elkridge, Md., and the Catonsville Methodist Church.

Surviving are five children: Louis V. Shinnamon, LaVale; Major Charles W. Shinnamon, San Bernadino, Calif.; Francis A. Shinnamon and Hallie Gale Shinnamon, Catonsville; and Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga.

The body will be taken today to Mitchell Funeral Home, 1900 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, where funeral services will be held Wednesday.

Deaths

BETTY JANE HESS

A private service was held yesterday afternoon at the George Funeral Home for Betty Jane Hess, 16, LaVale, who died Friday night in Allegany Hospital after being stricken with polio.

Rev. W. W. Patterson, pastor of LaVale Methodist Church, officiated and interment was in Hillcrest Burial Park.

Pallbearers were Robert C. Morris, Thomas Smith, Edwin Cupler, Russell Hendrickson, Ford Lee and William Welsh.

The death is the first infantile paralysis fatality in Cumberland and vicinity since 1947 when several deaths occurred as a result of the disease. Only a few mild cases were reported in 1948 and 1949 but six other cases have been recorded so far this year. All except one, now being treated in Baltimore, are reported to be mild.

The girl was a student at Allegany High School and would have been a member of the junior class this year. She became ill Wednesday and had been treated at home until Friday morning when admitted to the hospital.

The girl's illness was diagnosed Friday morning as polio and the Health Department received a report of the case at 1 p. m.

Her physician said it was planned to take her to Baltimore for treatment at Children's Hospital. A portable lung of the Cumberland Police Department was available for use during the ambulance trip to the hospital.

She was born in Galeton, Pa., a daughter of Edgar and Hulda (Ingraham) Hess. A sister, Ida Belle Hess, also survives.

29th Division Assn. Urges UMT

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3. (AP)—The 29th Division Association urged the adoption of universal military training and opposed the seating of a communist China delegation in the United Nations, in resolutions adopted today.

Charles R. Bryan, Staunton, Va., was a nominating committee's choice for national commander. The slate proposed by the committee was unopposed for election tomorrow.

A resolution approving a proposed $100,000,000 American Loan to Spain was tabled without being brought to a vote. Delegates expressed the opinion that the matter should be left to the discretion of Congress.

Another resolution urging approval of Maryland's anti-subversive Ober law also was adopted. The law will be the subject of a referendum at the November election in Maryland.

Delegates also voted for establishment of a permanent national headquarters to be located in Washington, and employment of a permanent administrative clerk there.

Previously, national headquarters was located each year in the home town of the current national commander.

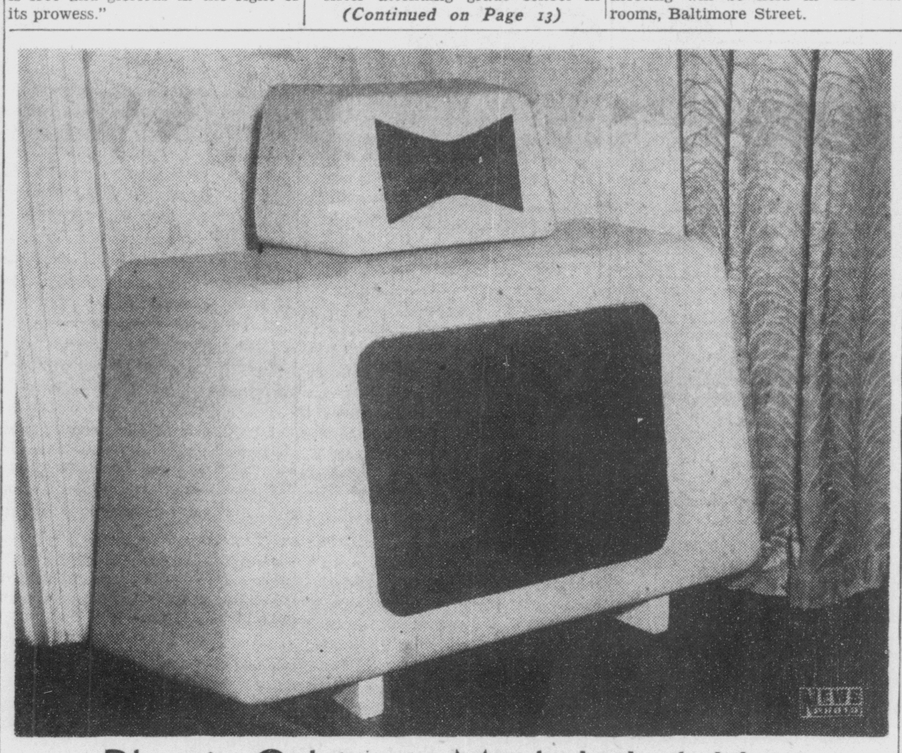
Secretary Lee Fuller of the Cumberland Outdoor Club has announced that the club will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. instead of today. The meeting will be held in the club rooms, Baltimore Street.



Plastic Cabinets Made In Lab Here

A. Derr Golladay, local designer and engineer, who has been experimenting with chemically cured plastic compounds which can be molded without presses or ovens, has built these two sound cabinets in his laboratory here. He says they definitely prove that his plastic compounds can be molded in any size without use of presses, and the combination of the two cabinets, the large and small, provides eight times the tone range on any existing amplification system in radio or record changer, and twice the range of those used in theaters.

Golladay Molds Large Plastic Sound Cabinets

Experiment Proves New Idea Practical

Experimenting for several months with self-curing or chemically-curing plastic compounds, A. Derr Golladay, Washington Street, has completed two cabinets that he terms the largest plastic items ever molded without use of expensive molds or presses.

Being an aeronautical engineer, Golladay first started experimenting with plastics because he believed that it would be practical and very cheap to mold a complete airplane in a single or perhaps in two or three separate units. Unable to establish a plant of sufficient size to permit him to build molds and make his plane, he has proceeded to work in his laboratory on these cabinets.

His latest experiment, he explained, served a two-fold purpose. He has been able to show without any question that low pressure molding of chemically cured plastic in large items is practical and cheap, and also has been able to produce an amplification cabinet which he says surpasses in quality anything marketed today.

Wider Tone Range

Golladay explains that the loud speaker cabinets molded from plastic give about eight times the tone range of the usual radio or record player. It is also about twice the range of the best motion picture film sound track, he declares.

The cabinets as designed and molded and the power of the sound system will more than handle the largest theatres in this area free from distortion, he said. Used in the home with a good FM receiver and amplifier it will reproduce a radio program exactly as if the listener were in the studio, since the hearing range is not restricted by any distortion whatever.

The largest speaker cabinet previously molded in plastic is with a television console measuring 34 by 18 by 18 and ¾ inches. This particular cabinet was molded under high pressure on a 2,500 ton press, Golladay claims.

His own cabinet, he explains, measures 43 by 25 by 20 inches, was molded free of pressure on very inexpensive molds.

The wall thickness of the cabinet is one and a half inches and is made of an inside and outside skin of fiberglas reinforced plastic, with sugar cane board laminated between. The inside is coated with spun fiberglas wool for sound insulation.

This construction, the designer explains, requires no curing ovens or heated molds as the resin mix he has developed is self-curing chemically. It results in a cabinet of one solid piece free of any vibration or parts to become unglued. It clearly demonstrates that this method of plastic molding is practical for doors, bath tubs, large pieces of furniture, automobile bodies and airplanes, he maintains.

Uses Two Cabinets

Golladay discovered in his experiments that a large cabinet could be designed to reproduce the deep tones or notes, and a smaller cabinet could be used to reproduce the higher pitched sounds. By a combination of the two, he has covered the whole range of the human ear without distortion.

He explains that with a good record player with variable reluctance cartridges, recorded music can be reproduced with maximum lifelikeness. The radio and record player are mounted in a chairside cabinet for convenience, with the speaker cabinets at another location in the room. This provides greater listening enjoyment as it is not necessary to sit next to the radio to get the tone or volume or selectivity desired.

The separate cabinet for each speaker is practical, he believes, so that the high frequency one can be moved around easily. The low tones flood the room regardless of cabinet position, but the high notes, to be heard, must come from the smaller cabinet aimed directly at the listener. These high sounds come out of any speaker like a fan-shaped light beam, Golladay explains.

The smaller speaker is merely a fiberglas reinforced plastic shell also chemically cured in an inexpensive mold.

Golladay said there is a possibility that a small radio manufacturing plant could be set up. Manufacturers already have been lined up to produce the top quality radio and amplifier chassis to his specifications, he explains, as well as record changers and other electronic equipment needed.

To set up a plant, he would need space for molding the cabinets and assembling the radios. He said the plant might also manufacture a few electronic devices which are not yet obtainable in sufficient quality.

The local market would not be great for such a high quality sound system, Golladay acknowledges, but largely populated sections such as New York offer many sales possibilities. He said he already has several requests from well established firms in that area to handle the sales of all the cabinets and radios he can manufacture.

Mountain District Legion To Meet

A meeting of all post commanders of Mountain District American Legion, and district executive committeemen will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Farrady Post No. 24 Legion home, Frostburg.

Russell C. Paupe, commander said recommendations for state department and district committee appointments will be made at the meeting.

The Weather

Yesterday's uncertain weather and high temperatures were not overly favorable for weekend vacationers, but many took advantage of the brief periods of sunshine. The highest temperature at Constitution Park was 76 with a low of 68. Downtown temperatures ran just a little higher, with an 82 high and a 71 low. Last night was one for good sleeping which was used to advantage by many late sleepers on this Labor Day morning. Today might be similar to yesterday—cloudy, warm, and humid, with possible thundershowers in the afternoon.

Carl W. Smith Is Found Dead

Carl William Smith, 43, this city, was found dead about 9 a.m. yesterday in his room at the Windsor Hotel, Baltimore and George Streets, and police said he died from a cerebral hemorrhage due to a self inflicted injury with a .22 caliber, single shot rifle.

Thomas Mullaney, co-owner of the hotel, found the body and immediately called police. Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer James Snyder investigated.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy medical examiner in Allegany County, was summoned and pronounced Smith dead, estimating that death had occurred eight hours previously. Dr. Deming called it suicide.

Formerly employed at Lou's Auto Stores, Smith was unemployed at the time of his death, police said, adding that he had been separated from his wife for about three weeks. He had been staying at the Windsor since August 14.

Smith, who was born February 1, 1907, was a son of Lawrence Edward Smith, 1120 Shade's Lane, and the late Emiley Lauterbach Smith.

He left a note to his wife directing her to dispose of his personal belongings.

He was a member of the Lutheran Church.

Also surviving, besides his father, are two brothers, J. Edward and Robert L. Smith, Cumberland; and three sisters, Mrs. Clifford O. Albright, Ellerslie; and Mrs. Thomas Mears and Mrs. James C. McGee, both of this city.

The body will remain at the George Funeral Home.

How Can It Be Done, Asks Lane

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Governor Lane asked George P. Mahoney today to "stop waving those vague millions about" and say how he would cut state expenditures.

Lane and Mahoney are rivals for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Lane said in a statement that Mahoney hasn't said how he would cut millions from the state budget because "he wouldn't dare do it."

"It cannot be done," the Governor said, "unless the people of this state want the school system to collapse into a shambles, the road system to go to pot, and our hospitals to deteriorate into pest houses."

The Governor said Mahoney "refuses to give the public a single specific idea where these 'millions and millions' are going to be found." He added:

"George P. Mahoney wouldn't dare to tell the people of Maryland that he proposed to cut so many millions from the schools; so many millions from the hospital appropriations; so many millions from the road appropriations; so many millions from the salaries of teachers, doctors, nurses, hospital attendants and other state employes; so many millions from the overall public-health program x x x or so many millions from the approximately $60,000,000 which the state this year will collect and turn over to Baltimore City, the towns and counties.

"These are the only programs from which millions could be cut—and it is time for Mr. Mahoney to say where he would cut, or stop waving these vague millions about, trying to confuse and mislead the people."

School Lunch Institute Is Set Tomorrow

105 Employes To Attend Session

An institute for all employes of the county school lunch program will be held Tuesday at West Side School.

This was announced last night by William P. Cooper, director of the school lunch program for the Allegany County Board of Education.

Arrangements for the "cooks' institute" were made by Mrs. Gladys M. Eaton, supervisor of the school lunch program.

The institute will open at 9:30 a. m. with a brief talk by Dr. Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools.

Starting at 9:45, Stanley C. Rolfness, food preservation specialist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, will give an hour's illustrated lecture on "Food Care and Storage."

Mrs. Eaton will evaluate the 1949-50 school lunch program in the county. She also will discuss menus, marketing, orders, inventory and in-service training.

Cooper will give the concluding talk, outlining school lunch policies for the coming school year.

The director said last night that all 105 school lunch employes will attend the institute.

The program covers all public schools in the county. Lunches are served at 35 schools and are taken in thermos containers to five others where kitchen facilities are not available.

Last year, Cooper said, about 10,000 children were fed daily under the program. During the school year a total of 1,720,000 lunches were served, he added.

Mahoney Attacks Lane's Campaign

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—George P. Mahoney said today he may "have no alternative but to reveal some of the shocking incidents concerning Mr. Lane that have been brought to my attention during my travels throughout the state."

Mahoney and Governor Lane are rivals for the Democratic nomination for governor in the forthcoming primary election.

Mahoney said in a statement today that "Mr. Lane has been very busy with his highly paid state staff searching my private life from my boyhood on."

"I do not have time to waste looking into Mr. Lane's personal life," he continued. "There are many more important matters that I feel the people of the state are entitled to know about Mr. Lane's administrative record.

"However, if Mr. Lane continues to waste taxpayers time with personal attacks on me, I will have no alternative but to reveal some of the shocking incidents concerning Mr. Lane that have been brought to my attention during my travels throughout the state."

Mahoney said that throughout the campaign he had confined himself to facts and figures, but that Lane had not.

"A candidate in a political contest should be judged on his record," Mahony said. "I have made no personal attacks on Mr. Lane. I have not invaded his personal life or alluded to his personality defects. I have not wasted time in this sort of nazi smear tactic. I have been too busy pointing out to the voters of our state the course they must follow to escape the scourge of mounting taxation and debt."

Young Frostburg Soldier Missing

A young Frostburg soldier has been reported missing in action in Korea, less than one month after going overseas.

He is Pfc. James William Rafferty, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Rafferty, 144 McCulloh Street.

The parents were notified yesterday by the Department of Defense that Pfc. Rafferty has been missing since August 16.

A graduate of St. Michael's Parochial School, Pfc. Rafferty attended Beall High School before entering the Army a year and a half ago.

He received basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., and was transferred to Fort Lewis, Wash., before going overseas July 24.

Pfc. Rafferty visited his parents in Frostburg on a short furlough about two weeks before he was assigned to duty in Korea.

Tomorrow Is County Registration Day

Citizens who are not registered to vote in Allegany County may do so tomorrow at their neighborhood polling places from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

There are 78 registration places in the county's 35 election districts.

Registration tomorrow will make voters eligible to vote in the Primary election September 18, and General Election November 7.

In recent weeks, about 5,000 names were stricken from the books, many for failure to vote. These people have been notified by mail, and should re-register tomorrow. New voters, those just 21, or those past 21 who have never registered may also enroll tomorrow. Those desiring transportation to register should call 456.

Hundreds Plan Outdoor Events As Holiday Ends

Area Highway Death Toll Rises To Six

Despite predictions of rather cloudy, humid weather with scattered thundershowers today, hundreds of Cumberlanders went ahead with plans for picnics and other outdoor activities to mark the close of the long Labor Day weekend.

Majority of the groves at Constitution Park have been reserved for family picnics today, according to Robert R. Golden, park superintendent.

Golden predicted only a "medium" day's business at the park today, however. He explained that most persons go out of town on long holiday weekends.

Yesterday's .02 inches of rain sent a number of pre-Labor Day picnickers scurrying home, but clearing weather later in the afternoon brought others to the park for picnic suppers, Golden said.

About 1,000 persons visited the park before the afternoon shower broke, he added.

Death Toll Rises

The highway death toll in this area has risen to six persons since motorists began jamming the roads Friday en route to vacation spots.

The latest fatality occurred yesterday, when Mrs. Virginia Pavey, 26, of Jarretsville, Md., was killed in an automobile accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike eight miles east of Somerset.

Authorities reported that the accident occurred on a single lane where repairs were being made. Mrs. Pavey lost control of the pickup truck she was driving and the truck overturned, pinning her beneath it.

Mrs. Pavey's husband, Robert, was treated at Somerset Hospital for lacerations of the hand and bruises about the body.

Two pedestrians, an elderly Braddock Farms woman and a 21-year-old man of Mann's Choice, Pa., were fatally injured in separate accidents Saturday.

On Friday, as the long holiday weekend began, a Garrett County man was killed when he leaped from a runaway truck in Frostburg, and a Flushing, N. Y., couple were killed when their car crashed into a tractor-trailer 11 miles west of Bedford on the Turnpike.

Meanwhile, State Police and transportation officials were bracing themselves for a peak in homeward bound travel tonight.

Rail, bus and airlines reported traffic was only slightly heavier than the average holiday increase.

Travel was heaviest to westbound points, they reported.

State Police said traffic was "very heavy" Saturday night but tapered off yesterday. Another peak is expected late this afternoon or tonight when motorists start their homeward trek.

48 Units To March

One of Cumberland's largest Labor Day parades will get underway this morning at 10:30, with 43 units in the line of march.

The parade will form at Laing Avenue and proceed to Baltimore Street via Virginia Avenue, Maryland Avenue, Williams Street; Park Street, Baltimore Street and then disband on South Mechanic Street.

A picnic and speaking will be held in the afternoon at Crystal Park with fireworks there at night.

Model Trains In Parade Today

Former Lonaconing Coal Miner Credited With Naming Labor Day

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

A former Allegany County resident, a Lonaconing coal miner of the nineteenth century, is credited by some historians as being the man who proposed and named Labor Day.

According to available records, Robert Price, known as "Shouting Bob" Price, a native of near Aberyswith, Wales, July 16, 1833, worked in the Jackson Mine near Lonaconing for about 16 years.

He acquired his nickname from friends because he often was heard to shout "Amen" in church while the preacher delivered his sermon or offered prayer.

Price left school at the age of eight years to work with his father in a coal mine in his native country. When he was 31, he migrated to the United States and worked in the Pennsylvania coal fields for eight years, after which he became an "under boss" at the Lonaconing operation.

Leaving the Georges Creek Region, he went to Idaho and later went to Kansas. Records show he was 69 when he moved to Montana, and he died in his humble home on the outskirts of Helena, Mont. He was about 77 when he died. His funeral was reported "poorly attended and unceremonious."

For a time in his life, "Shouting Bob" was reported as "friendly with capital" and often helped avert trouble among the miners he worked with in Wales. However, when he was about 25, he had an experience which changed his ideas completely.

He was returning from a mine one day, when he found his "buddie," a young lad of about 17, lying on the ground and bleeding from the mouth and nose. His clothing was torn. Price picked up the lad, carried him two miles to his home, and sent for a doctor. But the boy died.

As he was dying, he told Price that the boss had beaten him for cutting the room too wide and asked, "Robert, are you one of us now?"

It is reported that ever after that Bob Price was a "fighting labor man and leader."

While in Lonaconing, Price was a member of Local Assembly No. 848 of the Knights of Labor. The grand master of the order was a labor leader named Powderly who had built up a strong organization.

Nearly all the miners in the Georges Creek Region, because of the efforts of "Shouting Bob" and others, were members when the Knights of Labor called a convention in New York in 1882. Price was named a delegate.

During the convention, the large and strong typographical union members staged a parade and the convention adjourned to witness it.

A short time later, during a lull in the convention proceedings, the record states: "Price arose. Tall, well formed and in the full flush of manhood. He stood erect and leaned far over the balcony. He caught the eye of Grand Master Powderly. He began to speak. All who recall his address on that day remember the enthusiasm it evoked.

"At the close of his address, which was filled with bursts of oratory and carried the hearers' thoughts of organization to what was then supposed to be unattainable heights, he stopped for a moment, and then said:—

"I move you Mr. Chairman, that it be the unanimous decision of this convention that hereafter one day of the year shall be set aside and on that day labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

"Shouting Bob" Price sat down and the cheering which followed his remarks made the building rock as a thousand labor men sprang to their feet in ovation.

"When order was restored, Powderly turned toward Price and asked, 'And what do you intend to call that day?'

"Without a moment's hesitation, Price jumped to his feet and shouted, 'Labor Day.'

"Again all semblence of order was destroyed and the meeting came to a sudden end. In 1884, the Knights of Labor again met in convention in New York and held a gigantic parade to mark Labor Day.

Colorado was the first state to make the first Monday in September a legal holiday in 1887. Labor Day was observed throughout the United States in 1909, except in Arizona and North Dakota.

This year, Labor Day is being observed in all states of the United States, in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Canal Zone, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Today is the day "Shouting Bob" Price declared, "Labor shall not labor, but go forth and show that it is free and glorious in the right of its prowess."

Louis L. Shinnamon, 62, LaVale, father of Louis V. Shinnamon, Baltimore Street shoe store operator, died yesterday morning at the home of a daughter, Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga., where he had been visiting for the past week.

Mr. Shinnamon had been in failing health for the past year, and for about three months past had been residing with his son here. He was a native and lifelong resident of Maryland and his home was at Catonsville.

He had been employed for a number of years in the Income Tax division of the Internal Revenue Department, working through this area. He was well known throughout Western Maryland and vicinity. He officially retired shortly after the close of World War II.

Mr. Shinnamon was married to the late Hallie A. Wrightson Shinnamon, who died about five years ago. He was a life member of Howard Lodge No. 101, AF and A Masons, Elkridge, Md., and the Catonsville Methodist Church.

Surviving are five children: Louis V. Shinnamon, LaVale; Major Charles W. Shinnamon, San Bernadino, Calif.; Francis A. Shinnamon and Hallie Gale Shinnamon, Catonsville; and Mrs. I. B. Knieriem, Atlanta, Ga.

The body will be taken today to Mitchell Funeral Home, 1900 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, where funeral services will be held Wednesday.

Derry To Give Organ Recital In Midland

The Midland Methodist Church is featuring an organ recital Tuesday at 8:15 p. m., by Prof. Joseph L. Derry, A. B.

The recital will be given on the new Wurlitzer Organ. It will be a complete demonstration on the two manual instruments. There will be no admission and everyone is invited to attend.

Deaths

BETTY JANE HESS

A private service was held yesterday afternoon at the George Funeral Home for Betty Jane Hess, 16, LaVale, who died Friday night in Allegany Hospital after being stricken with polio.

Rev. W. W. Patterson, pastor of LaVale Methodist Church, officiated and interment was in Hillcrest Burial Park.

Pallbearers were Robert C. Morris, Thomas Smith, Edwin Cupler, Russell Hendrickson, Ford Lee and William Welsh.

The death is the first infantile paralysis fatality in Cumberland and vicinity since 1947 when several deaths occurred as a result of the disease. Only a few mild cases were reported in 1948 and 1949 but six other cases have been recorded so far this year. All except one, now being treated in Baltimore, are reported to be mild.

The girl was a student at Allegany High School and would have been a member of the junior class this year. She became ill Wednesday and had been treated at home until Friday morning when admitted to the hospital.

The girl's illness was diagnosed Friday morning as polio and the Health Department received a report of the case at 1 p. m.

Her physician said it was planned to take her to Baltimore for treatment at Children's Hospital. A portable lung of the Cumberland Police Department was available for use during the ambulance trip to the hospital.

She was born in Galeton, Pa., a daughter of Edgar and Hulda (Ingraham) Hess. A sister, Ida Belle Hess, also survives.

29th Division Assn. Urges UMT

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3. (AP)—The 29th Division Association urged the adoption of universal military training and opposed the seating of a communist China delegation in the United Nations, in resolutions adopted today.

Charles R. Bryan, Staunton, Va., was a nominating committee's choice for national commander. The slate proposed by the committee was unopposed for election tomorrow.

A resolution approving a proposed $100,000,000 American Loan to Spain was tabled without being brought to a vote. Delegates expressed the opinion that the matter should be left to the discretion of Congress.

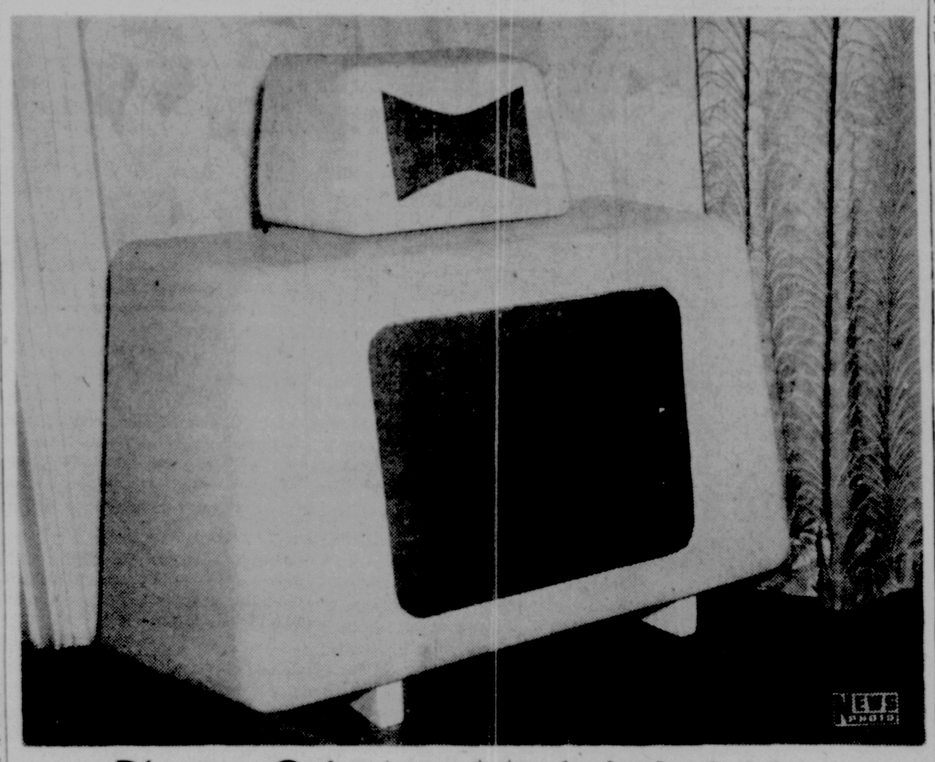
Another resolution urging approval of Maryland's anti-subversive Ober law also was adopted. The law will be the subject of a referendum at the November election in Maryland.

Delegates also voted for establishment of a permanent national headquarters to be located in Washington, and employment of a permanent administrative clerk there.

Previously, national headquarters was located each year in the home town of the current national commander.

Local Briefs

Secretary Lee Fuller of the Cumberland Outdoor Club has announced that the club will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. instead of today. The meeting will be held in the club rooms, Baltimore Street.



Plastic Cabinets Made In Lab Here

A. Derr Golladay, local designer and engineer, who has been experimenting with chemically cured plastic compounds which can be molded without presses or ovens, has built these two sound cabinets in his laboratory here. He says they definitely prove that his plastic compounds can be molded in any size without use of presses, and the combination of the two cabinets, the large and small, provides eight times the tone range on any existing amplification system in radio or record changer, and twice the range of those used in theaters.

Golladay Molds Large Plastic Sound Cabinets

Experiment Proves New Idea Practical

Experimenting for several months with self-curing or chemically-curing plastic compounds, A. Derr Golladay, Washington Street, has completed two cabinets that he terms the largest plastic items ever molded without use of expensive molds or presses.

Being an aeronautical engineer, Golladay first started experimenting with plastics because he believed that it would be practical and very cheap to mold a complete airplane in a single or perhaps in two or three separate units. Unable to establish a plant of sufficient size to permit him to build molds and make his plane, he has proceeded to work in his laboratory on these cabinets.

His latest experiment, he explained, served a two-fold purpose. He has been able to show without any question that low pressure molding of chemically cured plastic in large items is practical and cheap, and also has been able to produce an amplification cabinet which he says surpasses in quality anything marketed today.

Wider Tone Range

Golladay explains that the loud speaker cabinets molded from plastic give about eight times the tone range of the usual radio or record player. It is also about twice the range of the best motion picture film sound track, he declares.

The cabinets as designed and molded and the power of the sound system will more than handle the largest theatres in this area free from distortion, he said. Used in the home with a good FM receiver and amplifier it will reproduce a radio program exactly as if the listener were in the studio, since the hearing range is not restricted by any distortion whatever.

The largest speaker cabinet previously molded in plastic is with a television console measuring 34 by 18 by 18 and ¾ inches. This particular cabinet was molded under high pressure on a 2,500 ton press, Golladay claims.

His own cabinet, he explains, measures 43 by 25 by 20 inches, was molded free of pressure on very inexpensive molds.

The wall thickness of the cabinet is one and a half inches and is made of an inside and outside skin of fiberglas reinforced plastic, with sugar cane board laminated between. The inside is coated with spun fiberglas wool for sound insulation.

This construction, the designer explains, requires no curing ovens or heated molds as the resin mix he has developed is self-curing chemically. It results in a cabinet of one solid piece free of any vibration or parts to become unglued. It clearly demonstrates that this method of plastic molding is practical for doors, bath tubs, large pieces of furniture, automobile bodies and airplanes, he maintains.

Uses Two Cabinets

Golladay discovered in his experiments that a large cabinet could be designed to reproduce the deep tones or notes, and a smaller cabinet could be used to reproduce the higher pitched sounds. By a combination of the two, he has covered the whole range of the human ear without distortion.

He explains that with a good record player with variable reluctance cartridges, recorded music can be reproduced with maximum lifelikeness. The radio and record player are mounted in a chairside cabinet for convenience, with the speaker cabinets at another location in the room. This provides greater listening enjoyment as it is not necessary to sit next to the radio to get the tone or volume or selectivity desired.

The separate cabinet for each speaker is practical, he believes, so that the high frequency one can be moved around easily. The low tones flood the room regardless of cabinet position, but the high notes, to be heard, must come from the smaller cabinet aimed directly at the listener. These high sounds come out of any speaker like a fan-shaped light beam, Golladay explains.

The smaller speaker is merely a fiberglas reinforced plastic shell also chemically cured in an inexpensive mold.

Golladay said there is a possibility that a small radio manufacturing plant could be set up. Manufacturers already have been lined up to produce the top quality radio and amplifier chassis to his specifications, he explains, as well as record changers and other electronic equipment needed.

To set up a plant, he would need space for molding the cabinets and assembling the radios. He said the plant might also manufacture a few electronic devices which are not yet obtainable in sufficient quality.

The local market would not be great for such a high quality sound system, Golladay acknowledges, but largely populated sections such as New York offer many sales possibilities. He said he already has several requests from well established firms in that area to handle the sales of all the cabinets and radios he can manufacture.

Mountain District Legion To Meet

A meeting of all post commanders of Mountain District American Legion, and district executive committeemen will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Farrady Post No. 24 Legion home, Frostburg.

Russell C. Paupe, commander said recommendations for state department and district committee appointments will be made at the meeting.

The Weather

Yesterday's uncertain weather and high temperatures were not overly favorable for weekend vacationers, but many took advantage of the brief periods of sunshine. The highest temperature at Constitution Park was 76 with a low of 68. Downtown temperatures ran just a little higher, with an 82 high and a 71 low. Last night was one for good sleeping which was used to advantage by many late sleepers on this Labor Day morning. Today might be similar to yesterday—cloudy, warm, and humid, with possible thundershowers in the afternoon.

Carl W. Smith Is Found Dead

Carl William Smith, 43, this city, was found dead about 9 a.m. yesterday in his room at the Windsor Hotel, Baltimore and George Streets, and police said he died from a cerebral hemorrhage due to a self inflicted injury with a .22 caliber, single shot rifle.

Thomas Mullaney, co-owner of the hotel, found the body and immediately called police. Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer James Snyder investigated.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy medical examiner in Allegany County, was summoned and pronounced Smith dead, estimating that death had occurred eight hours previously. Dr. Deming called it suicide.

Formerly employed at Lou's Auto Stores, Smith was unemployed at the time of his death, police said, adding that he had been separated from his wife for about three weeks. He had been staying at the Windsor since August 14.

Smith, who was born February 1, 1907, was a son of Lawrence Edward Smith, 1120 Shade's Lane, and the late Emiley Lauterbach Smith.

He left a note to his wife directing her to dispose of his personal belongings.

He was a member of the Lutheran Church.

Also surviving, besides his father, are two brothers, J. Edward and Robert L. Smith, Cumberland; and three sisters, Mrs. Clifford O. Albright, Ellerslie; and Mrs. Thomas Mears and Mrs. James C. McGee, both of this city.

The body will remain at the George Funeral Home.

How Can It Be Done, Asks Lane

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Governor Lane asked George P. Mahoney today to "stop waving those vague millions about" and say how he would cut state expenditures.

Lane and Mahoney are rivals for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Lane said in a statement that Mahoney hasn't said how he would cut millions from the state budget because "he wouldn't dare do it."

"It cannot be done," the Governor said, "unless the people of this state want the school system to collapse into a shambles, the road system to go to pot, and our hospitals to deteriorate into pest houses."

The Governor said Mahoney "refuses to give the public a single specific idea where these 'millions and millions' are going to be found." He added:

"George P. Mahoney wouldn't dare to tell the people of Maryland that he proposed to cut so many millions from the schools; so many millions from the hospital appropriations; so many millions from the road appropriations; so many millions from the salaries of teachers, doctors, nurses, hospital attendants and other state employes; so many millions from the overall public-health program x x x or so many millions from the approximately $60,000,000 which the state this year will collect and turn over to Baltimore City, the towns and counties.
